GOOD FELLOWS' CAMPAIGN OPEN FOR 27TH YEAR

Joy of Aiding Poor Privilege to All.

BY PHIL MAXWELL.

The twenty-seventh annual Good Fellow campaign, made possible each Christmas through the kindness and generosity of hundreds of Chicago folk who take bulging baskets of food, candy, and toys to unfortunate families, opens today.

This announcement, two weeks in advance of its usual pre-Christmas publication, appears this morning in order that this year Good Fellows may have more time to prepare for this happy event. The need of deserving Chicago families is great, and it is hoped that more Good Fellows will be enrolled this season than ever before. Last Christmas 2,028 baskets were delivered.

First 1935 Good Fellow Enrolled.

And already the first 1935 Good Fellow has enrolled. He asked that he be given the name of a family of five, to whom he may carry his substantial message of cheer on Christmas morning.

Cash contributions are not sought, since one of the finer aspects of the annual Good Fellow campaign is the element of personal service in the delivering of a basket to a deserving and needy home.

However, enthusiastic well wishers of this work, already have sent more than $50 in cash to the fund. In such cases the money is used to purchase Christmas baskets which are delivered by THE TRIBUNE, but it is hoped that warm hearted givers will avail themselves of the joyful privilege of choosing a family to befriend and delivering their baskets in person.

The Personal Touch.

THE TRIBUNE wishes to continue carrying out the precepts laid down by the first Good Fellow, of whom you will learn more later. He believed that the personal presence of the Good Fellow in the distressed home which he desires to befriend, his smile, and his friendliness were worth as much or more than the material gifts he bestowed.

The measure of one's wealth is no measure of qualification for a Good Fellow. Each Christmas season the ranks of this army of kindly people are increased by boys and girls—Junior Good Fellows—who through various activities earn pennies which go toward provisioning baskets, and who then joyously deliver them on Christmas morning or Christmas eve.

The Original Good Fellow.

It was only after he died that THE TRIBUNE published the name of the man who one blustery December night 26 years ago brought to the managing editor of this newspaper the great idea of brotherly love at Christmas time that won immediate public support and resulted in the first Good Fellow campaign.

That first Good Fellow was Edward C. Fitch, at the time an assistant city attorney. He desired that his own contribution to the needs of those less fortunate be anonymous, and he suggested that others who might take up the germ of his Good Fellow idea follow the same course. That was in 1909, and, whereas even the first Good Fellow campaign brought out a surprising number of eager Good Fellows, the army of anonymous Christmas givers has grown annually through the ensuing years.

And the spirit of whole hearted, anonymous giving that inspired Mr. Fitch in 1909 continues to guide the Good Fellow movement this year as last and the years that preceded. Being a Good Fellow offers no reward to publicity seekers; the reward lies in the intrinsic joy of spreading joy.

Social Agencies Coöperate.

To assure that deserving families receive baskets, THE TRIBUNE again will maintain a Christmas bureau. Mrs. Edwina Lewis, executive secretary of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies, will be the director. This bureau will have the coöperation of the United Charities, the Central Charity bureau, the Infant Welfare society, the Visiting Nurse association, the Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare, the Juvenile Court of Cook County, and numerous other similar organizations.

Hoover Offers 11 Plank Platform

DECLARES U. S. IS PERILED BY MONEY WASTE

Visionary "National Planning" Hit.

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Making his second attack upon New Deal spending policies, Herbert Hoover proposed an eleven point fiscal program as an alternative to those policies tonight in an address before the Ohio Society of New York.

Answering the demand for a constructive oppositionist platform, Mr. Hoover urged the abandonment of present governmental financial methods and a return to "sound" policies.

Gambling With Fate.

Denouncing the Roosevelt administration for "gambling" with the fate of the nation in the belief that inflationary processes could be held in check by a "politically controlled reserve system," Mr. Hoover charged that today's credit inflation already was three or four times as great as in 1927, and predicted the end of democracy in the United States if the controls fail.

With the same sarcastic, epigrammatic style which characterized his speech at Oakland, Cal., last month, the former President scathingly denounced the "national planning" of the New Deal. He charged that it was recklessly scattering public moneys impoverishing the country, placing a terrific "invisible" burden of costs as well as heavy taxation upon the people, raising the cost of living for everybody, fomenting labor troubles, retarding recovery, and running a great risk of uncontroled inflation and another great collapse such as that of 1929.

Believe Hat in Ring.

Anticipated with special interest because of Mr. Hoover's cryptic remark, "wait until I get east," as he left California a week ago, the speech strengthened the impression made by the Oakland address that the former President's hat still is in the ring, politically speaking. As in last month's speech, however, he made no reference to his attitude toward the 1936 Republican presidential nomination.

Mr. Hoover was elected to membership in the Ohio society last month, qualifying because his father was a native of Ohio. He was the principal speaker at the "golden jubilee" banquet. More than 1,500 members and guests attended. Fifty prominent men of business, industry and the professions, who were guests of honor, held a reception for Mr. Hoover before the dinner, and sat at the dais with him.

Tells Eleven Points.

Mr. Hoover set forth as his constructive fiscal program.

1. "The waste of taxpayers' money on unnecessary public works should end."

2. "The administration of relief should be turned over to local authorities. Federal expenditures for relief should be confined to cash allowances to these authorities to the extent that they are unable to provide their own funds."

3. "The spending for visionary and

ADVISER OF MIKADO TELLS JAP PREMIER TO DRINK LESS LIQUOR

"Drink less liquor. Attend to your duties."

The elderly prince's good-natured admonition came during a visit from the premier as the latter was returning to Tokio from the army maneuvers at Kyushu.

Premier Okada's convivial habits, not considered blameworthy in Japan, have often been the subject of jests in the Japanese press.

CHARGES SELF WITH COMPLEX, 'BOTTLE TOSSER'

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Paul Dunbar explained in court today he was "sort of mad" at his wife when he went on an early morning window breaking escapade. He had an uncontrollable desire to pitch beer bottles through windows, he said. One went through the pane of his wife's beauty shop.

Another broke the glass of a downtown furniture store where he was employed. A third went through a tavern window.

His boss refused to prosecute. Dunbar signed an affidavit charging himself with malicious trespass and paid a $25 fine.

Last Prop Lost by New Deal's Mortgage Act

New Deal legislation, designed to replace the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act after that law was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court, was itself declared illegal by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday.

The judges found, in effect, that the amendment adopted in August of 1935, reducing the moratorium period from five to 3 years exceeded the powers of congress as did the original measure invalidated by the highest court last May.

While District courts have issued rulings, some of them conflicting, on the amendment, this is the first decision on the matter by an appeals court.

Lower Court Overruled.

In bringing the opinion, the Appellate court overruled a District court which enjoined the Lafayette Life Insurance company from foreclosing a $30,000 first mortgage on a farm owned by Bertha A. Lowman at Hammond, Ind.

The opinion, written by Judge Will M. Sparks with Judges Samuel Alschuler and Charles G. Briggle concurring, said in part:

"We think that in extending the period of redemption for three years beyond that set by state statutes, congress exceeded the powers conferred upon it by the bankruptcy clause of the constitution. We think that clause does not give congress the right to alter the relative rights between parties which have already been fixed by final adjudication in state courts under state statutes.

'Barred From Altering It.'

"We think the fixing of a specific period of redemption constitutes such a state regulation of property rights as to bar congress from altering it."

The opinion concludes with the ruling that the federal courts are therefore without power to enforce the amendment, known as section 75 of the bankruptcy laws.

In the specific case before the court the farm mortgage was foreclosed and a bill of sale issued to the insurance company on Aug. 5, 1933. On July 23, 1934, just a few days before the one year redemption period allowed under Indiana law would have elapsed, a bankruptcy petition was filed, bringing the matter under federal jurisdiction. In accordance with this action a federal District court enjoined the sherif of Benton county, Indiana, from transferring the deed. This was the injunction dissolved yesterday.

ASTRONOMERS VIEW LEONID METEORS ON ANNUAL APPEARANCE

Pomona, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Return of the Leonid meteors, whose spectacular visitations once caused many to believe judgment was at hand, kept astronomical observers awake tonight.

The Leonids made their annual appearance in the earth's atmosphere late last night in what observers said would have been a brilliant display had the moon not "hogged" the stage. They were expected again tonight and tomorrow night.

Prof. Walter T. Whitney, director of the Frank P. Brackett observatory of Pomona college, reported his observers saw about 100 meteors last night, at least half Leonids.

"They came into visibility about 100 miles above the earth's surface," he said, "and speeded 40 to 50 miles a second through the atmosphere until burned out within 30 or 40 miles of the earth."

Thrice a century they appear at their brightest. Astronomers say they are the dust trail of a disintegrated comet that sweeps through the universe on a regular orbit like a cyclone.

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Eleanor Gould Stevens, great-granddaughter of Jay Gould, and her husband, Ludlow W. Stevens, were sued today by a former hat check boy at the Central Park casino. He charged Stevens beat him in their apartment at 55 East 86th street about two months ago. The boy's name is Bernie Nodroski.

The background of his suit for $10,000 was a Sir Walter Raleigh act ventured by the checkroom custodian early one morning as he was strolling out of Central Park.

Seeing Mrs. Stevens alone, he states, he offered to escort her home and she acquiesced. But her husband was lacking in cordiality at about 4 o'clock that morning, Nodroski insists.

Each Blames the Other.

To be specific, Nodroski accuses Stevens of hitting him in the eye. On the other hand, Stevens contends all the fighting was done by the casino attendant. Stevens has countered with a suit for $20,000 against Nodroski.

Nodroski recounted his experiences upon arriving at the defendant's home as follows:

"She invited me up in the elevator. She unlocked the door and asked me in for a few minutes. A man came out from another room, where he'd been asleep. She introduced him as her husband. He punched me in the eye. I socked him back and the battle was on."

Supports Husband's Charges.

In his answer Stevens says, "Nodroski became boisterous, abusive, and offensive and insulted my wife and me. He refused to go when we asked him. With great force, maliciously, and violently, he hit me in the face. To protect my person and my wife I used no more force than necessary to remove him from my apartment."

Mrs. Stevens' answer to the hat checker's suit supports her husband's assertions.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were married in St. Thomas church Jan. 19, 1934.

Mrs. Stevens is a grandniece of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard of this city and of the duchess of Talleyrand [Anna Gould] of Paris.

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Jr., Lady Hector MacNeal, and Mrs. Wallace MacF. Baker are her aunts. Kingdon and George Jay Gould are her uncles. Her father was amateur court tennis champion from 1906 until he retired from singles in 1926.

HOTEL ROBBER HEARS SERMON; WEEPS, GETS $2

A young robber who held up the clerk and two guests of the Rogers Park hotel, 6805 Sheridan road, early today received a pummeling, $2 in cash, and a lecture on the evil of his ways. He promised to repent and sin no more along the holdup line.

The clerk, John Egan, 426 Surf street, was busy at the hotel desk when on looking up he was confronted with a man, hand in pocket as if he carried a pistol, who told him it was a "stickup" and demanded the money in the till. Just then Irving King and his wife, guests at the hotel, came in. They were ordered to line up. Something distracted the attention of the robber for an instant and Mr. King knocked him down. The clerk also landed a few blows. A search revealed the man had no gun.

The robber became contrite, said he was hungry, and sobbed a little. Whereupon Mr. King offered him $5. The man shamefacedly refused to take the $5, but after some sermonizing by Mr. King agreed to take $2. He went on his way just five minutes before the police arrived in a response to the telephone operator's call.

Archbishop Jimenez Quits His Hiding Place in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Dispatches from Guadalajara today reported that Archbishop Francisco Orozco Jimenez, whose return from years of exile abroad was revealed recently, left his hiding place and toured that city in an automobile. The archbishop disclosed he returned to Mexico following the breach between President Cardenas and former President Plutarco Elias Calles last June.

Deadly Snake Bites Man, Dies; Man Goes to Party

PANAMA CITY, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—A deadly snake bit a man today and the snake died half an hour later. The man, Lieut. Albert W. Shepherd of the United States air corps, went to a dinner party forty minutes after receiving anti-venom serum. The snake was a fer-de-lance.

ASSAILS WORLD BOYCOTT; TELLS ITALY TO FIGHT

Puts New General in African Command.

ROME, Nov. 17 (Sunday).—(AP)—The Fascist grand council, after a lengthy meeting to chart Italy's course after application of league of nations economic sanctions tomorrow, declared early today that Italy henceforth will remember Nov. 18, 1935, as "the day of ignominy and iniquity in the history of the world."

GEN. PIETRO BADOGLIO.
[A. P. Wirephoto.]

The council, highest body of Fascism, called on all Italians to serve Monday as the signal "for implacable resistance" to the sanctions that will be put into effect on that day by 51 nations. The nation was ordered to observe the day as a national holiday with all public buildings and most private houses flying the tricolor.

The council meeting ended shortly before midnight after Premier Mussolini had indicated to the world that he would pursue determinedly Italy's campaign in Ethiopia.

Shakes Up War Command.

Il Duce announced a shakeup in the high military command of his east African military forces, removing Gen. Emilio de Bono as commander in chief of the invading army and appointing Gen. Pietro Badoglio, chief of the general staf, to succeed him.

Vigorously denouncing the sanctionist nations, Il Duce's grand council resolved "that sanctions, which never before have been applied, are denounced as a proposal to suffocate the Italian people economically, as a vain attempt to humiliate this people, and to prevent the nation from realizing its ideals and defending its right to existence."

The resolution eulogized the "tenacious discipline" by which the Italian people, it said, demonstrated themselves as recognizing "the historical trend of actual events."

It invited them to "oppose against sanctions the most implacable resistance by mobilizing through all organizations of the régime, all the moral energy and material resources of the nation."

Crowds Chant "Duce, Duce."

Thousands of enthusiastic Black Shirts jammed downtown streets as the council assembled to consider the problems facing Italy.

They followed the Black Shirt banner, which was removed with an honor guard of militia to the Palazzo Venezia, scene of the council meeting.

Shortly before the official communique denouncing the league of nations' action was issued, it was announced that the council would hold another meeting Monday evening to discuss further the threats to Italy which are read into the application of sanctions by the Fascist authorities.

Calls Conference of Women.

The council decided that on Dec. 1 the 94 committees of provincial organizations of mothers and widows of world war dead will be convened in Rome to plan for resistance against sanctions and "to intensify and coordinate" economic disciplinary measures.

Every city hall throughout Italy was ordered to "erect a slab to record the economic siege so that it will remain throughout the centuries as a documentation of the enormous injustice perpetrated against Italy," a country which has given "so much to the civilization of all countries."

The communique ended on a sympathetic note concerning those nations which have not engaged in sanctions against Italy. The council adopted a resolution "to express its sympathy for those states which, by denying their adhesion to sanctions, worked for the cause of peace and interpreted the spirit of their populations."

Another resolution said the grand council "is sure the imminent trial will reveal to the world the Roman virtue of the Italian people in the 14th year of the Fascist era."

Prior to adopting the resolutions, the council passed a vote of thanks to Mussolini for his conduct of national affairs in the African war and present European economic situation, and announced its "utmost fidelity and willingness to serve Il Duce" in the future.

Mussolini in his shakeup of the war command, far from indicating that Gen. de Bono's recall meant he had fallen from favor, proposed to King Victor Emmanuel that the 69 year old veteran be elevated to the rank of marshal, a title which Gen. Badoglio already holds. The king's compliance was virtually assured.

Badoglio a Popular Leader.

Il Duce telegraphed De Bono, who is an old friend and one of Mussolini's four leaders in the Fascist march on Rome, expressing thanks "for having achieved your mission under extremely difficult circumstaces and with a result that entitles you to the gratitude of the nation."

He said Gen. De Bono, sent to east Africa ten months ago to the day, had finished the task he undertook, and his elevation to a marshal's rank would be final approval.

Gen. Badoglio is reputed to be popular with the army because he is known as probably the best war time general, and Italy's greatest strategist. He is known to be very friendly with the royal family. He never has been known, however, as a Fascist supporter. It was said that years ago he refused to accept the principles of Mussolini's régime. His appointment, first as chief of the general staf and now as leader at the war front, was taken as evidence he is in the premier's confidence.

Several thousand more men were called to the colors yesterday for possible service in Ethiopia, but the date of their mobilization was not announced. They consist of men born in the years 1907 to 1910 and in 1912. Also recalled were certain specialists and non-commissioned officers of the classes of 1900 to 1912 and the army map makers of the classes from 1904 to 1912.

Prepare for New Advance.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY AT MAKALE, Northern Ethiopia, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Preparations were made by the Italian army today all along the line for the next advance.

Three army corps entrenched themselves in advanced positions. Behind the line there were 100,000 men, eager for the next forward march.

Amba Alaji, about 40 miles south of Makale, is the next objective. The Italian intelligence section reported that it had learned Emperor Haile Selassie had sent the order of "no retreat" to his warriors massing in that vicinity.

Reports reached here that Ras Seyoum, former governor of Tigre province, whom the Italians drove out, has arrived at Togara, near Amba Alaji, to take command of the Ethiopian forces there.

Before the next push begins every effort is being made to eliminate dangerous small Ethiopian forces covering the flanks. These operations are under way by two Fascist corps, one in the east and one in the west.

Ethiopians March to "Dixie."

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Ten thousand Ethiopian warriors, bound for the front, passed smartly in review before Emperor Haile Selassie today and gasps of astonishment went up from foreign observers.

The troops stepped to the tunes of those two famous American songs, "Dixie" and "St. Louis Blues." Natives also were surprised. Many had their first sight of cornets and trombones and one super-long saxaphone was tooted by a lanky Walegan. The usual native drums and flutes also were included in the band.

The soldiers were from Walega, the richest province in Ethiopia. One of the most popular and modern-minded rulers in Ethiopia, Makonnen Demisso, led this army. The troops were the best trained yet seen in Addis Ababa.

Desert Warriors Join Ethiopia.

DIREDAWA, Ethiopia, Nov, 16.—Tribes of fierce desert warriors, armed only with spears, clubs, and knives, were reported today to be crossing frontiers into Ethiopia to help their racial brothers repel the Italian advance from the south. The tribesmen are coming into this country from both French and British Somaliland.

European traders who are leaving the war zones said thousands of Ethiopian volunteers also are hastening toward Harrar and Jigjiga to join the army.

ZERO HOUR NEARS FOR 51 NATIONS TO STRIKE AT ITALY

World-Wide Boycott Due to Begin at Midnight.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Great Britain tonight made its final preparations to join fifty other nations of the world in a boycott of Italy aimed at forcing Premier Mussolini to abandon his Ethiopian war. The boycott, to be conducted under the auspices of the league of nations, will begin at 12:01 a. m. Monday.

The foreign office announced that everything is ready for the effort to smoke out Mussolini economically. On and after Monday the usual machinery of international finance will cease to function with Italy. There will be no banking credits, overdrafts, or loans. Nor will Italian goods, with a few exceptions such as newspapers and periodicals, be allowed to enter British ports. At the same time certain goods will no longer be exported to Italy.

Reservations by Some Nations.

So far as Britain is concerned the entire sanctions program of the league will be enforced. In other nations the sanctions will be applied in varying degree, by some in entirety, and by others with reservations.

It was announced today that it is probable replies to Italy's note of last week protesting sanctions and seeking to make each individual country responsible for applying them, would not be sent collectively, but that each individual reply would be the same.

The British idea is that the replies in any case will not be sent for some time after the application of sanctions. It was explained that the first answer, in fact, would be given Monday in the form of the application of the sanctions themselves.

Nazis Protest British Ruling.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The German government protested to London today against British regulations on German goods exported to England after Nov. 18.

An official communique said the requirement that these products must be accompanied by certificates of origin "is not in harmony with certain provisions of the German-British trade agreement."

Britain's action, to take effect the same day that economic and financial sanctions against Italy go into force, was considered an attempt to prevent exports from Italy entering Britain through a nation not joining in the league of nations sanctions.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler, it was said in diplomatic circles, had already given verbal assurances to both Britain and France that he would not permit the assembling of foreign goods destined for Italy in Germany.

Bans Raw Export Materials.

Diplomats were represented as feeling Hitler's pledge strengthened the German embargo on exportation of important foodstuffs and raw materials, which generally went into effect last midnight.

Coal, which has been Germany's largest export to Italy, was not on the list of products which cannot be exported, nor was copper.

Among the products which will be held in Germany were nickel, magnesium, manganese, bauxite, hides, yarns, potatoes, oils, cooking fats, and all raw materials used by the iron, metallurgical, and rubber industries.

In announcing the ban on Nov. 12, the government said the action was taken because of home necessity, and did not mention the league's sanctions against Italy.

Poland to Jail Violators.

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Polish citizens who break league of nations sanctions against Italy will be subject to imprisonment up to one year and heavy fines under the terms of a presidential decree published today.

Only two transactions with Italians, both under the regulation of the league, are permitted. They are the export of coal to Italy in payment for a ship being built there and the import of spare parts for Italian automobiles assembled in Poland.

Canada Fixes Penalties.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The Canadian government today announced drastic penalties for violation of the order-in-council imposing league of nations sanctions against Italy.

The order prohibits loans and credits to Italy, shuts out imports from that country, and prohibits exports to Italy of certain key commodities used for military purposes.

Article 4 of the order provides that if any person contravenes the prohibitory provisions they shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be liable to conviction on indictment to a maximum prison sentence of two years, to a fine, or to both. On summary convictions, the prison term is not more than one year, or a fine of $500, or both fine and imprisonment.

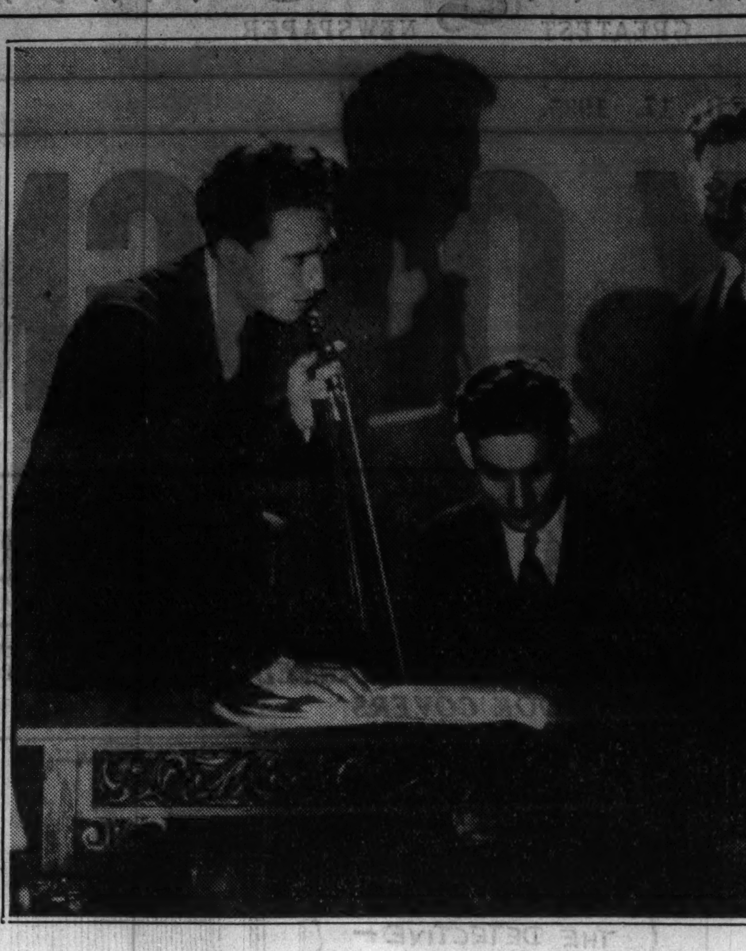
Argentina Curbs Exports.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Argentina today took the first steps to impose sanctions against Italy. A government decree prohibited the export to Italy and its possessions of a number of items listed as war materials and including horses, mules, donkeys, rubber, aluminum, bauxite, tungsten, vanadium, tin, manganese, petroleum, iron, and steel. Export of these articles, except under the express condition they are not destined for Italy or Italian possessions, also was forbidden. The decree will become effective Nov. 19.

Egypt Bars Italian Planes.

CAIRO, Egypt., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The Egyptian government today instructed its minister to Rome to inform the Italian government that in accordance with Egypt's neutrality principles, belligerent airplanes flying over the country must not carry arms. Armed or military uniformed passengers, with the exception of Red Cross workers, must not ride in such planes, the directions added.

AMERICAN MUSICIANS BEATEN IN ROME



These four American musicians, members of the Manhattan String quartet, were reported to have been beaten by Black Shirts in Rome because they laughed as a Fascist funeral procession passed. One of the musicians explained that he and his companions were joking among themselves and were unaware that the procession was a funeral cortege.

WHAT DE BONO DID FOR ITALY IN ETHIOPIA

Cancel Engagement

ROME. Nov. 16.—(AP)—Four American musicians were beaten by Black Shirts here, friends said today, after they laughed and failed to salute when a Fascist funeral passed by.

The Americans composed the "Manhattan String quartet" and were scheduled to play Monday under auspices of the Rome Philharmonic society. Instead, they canceled their engagement after the incident and left for Paris.

Acquaintances said that after the funeral procession went by, indignant Black Shirts approached the Americans and asked them what was "funny." One of the Americans replied, "We speak only English." He attempted to explain that the musicians were joking among themselves and did not know that the procession was a funeral march. Apparently the Italians mistook the Americans for Englishmen and pounced upon them.

The quartet is composed of Rachmael Weinstock of New York, Oliver Edel of Yonkers, Harris Danziger, who gave his residence as London, and Julius Shaier of New York.

ITALY ORGANIZES SYSTEM TO BEAT LEAGUE BOYCOTT

Smuggles War Supplies to East Africa.

BY SIR PERCIVAL PHILLIPS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ADEN, Arabia, Nov. 16.—With the application of league of nations sanctions against Italy only two days off, Italian military authorities are betraying marked anxiety lest operations in Ethiopia be affected by a shortage of essential supplies.

There is great uncertainty both at Massaua, Eritrea, and Mogadishu, Italian Somaliland, about the scope and effect of the economic sanctions. This is reflected in the unusual activity in Red sea ports and far beyond.

Gasoline, transport animals, labor, food and water are all urgently needed to maintain the steadily lengthening lines of communication in Ethiopia.

Seek to Evade Sanctions.

Information gathered from reliable sources indicates that the Italians are trying to organize a camouflaged supply system through native agencies extending from Egypt to north India whereby sanctions may be overcome despite the vigilance of the league of nations.

The unusual Italian demand for camels is obviously for the purpose of supplying the expeditionary forces with munitions and other supplies over difficult, mountainous country where mechanized transport is unable to move safely. More than 1,000 camels have been shipped from Aden and adjacent ports to Eritrea and Italian Somaliland in the last ten weeks. Agents are now offering higher prices for early delivery.

About 400 auto buses have also been reassembled at Aden since Sept. 15 and have been dispatched to the two Italian base ports. Another 200 are now being put together with all possible speed, but this consignment probably will be held up by sanctions.

Smuggle Out Camels.

The export of camels from British controled ports is prohibited, but bootlegging is being attempted. It is suspected that the camels are driven under cover of darkness to a remote rendezvous on the beach where they are transferred to chartered dhows [lateen-rigged vessels].

What Italy wants in addition to camels and other supplies which it can get by subterranean channels from India is labor. It has tried in vain to augment the labor corps on both fronts by recruitment in Java, Ceylon and India.

Italian agents succeeded in sending a certain number of volunteers from Aden by promising high rates of pay and easy conditions of employment, but this has been stopped since such an exodus would denude the protectorate of its own labor.

Some natives still wishing to try their luck in Massaua have gone by dhow to Mocha, Hodeida, or Kokha, Yemen ports, and there trans-shipped for Eritrea.

Rulers Aid Britain.

The imam of Yemen is strongly opposed to allowing his subjects to join Italian levies, as is also the sultan of Lahej, whose territory is just outside Aden. The latter has shown a strong friendship for Britain by coöperating in every way with Aden authorities.

Italians here have only to drive out beyond the barrier at the Shiek Othman oasis, as they frequently do, to see the new British air force base now being completed with the sultan's permission in the desert.

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

HARRAR, Ethiopia, Nov. 16.—Increasing tension here because of the Italian advance in the Fafan river valley has caused local authorities to give warning that they will not be responsible for the safety of white persons who go among the excited natives. The whites were specifically told to avoid the church where services for the slain chief, Lij Balanye, were held this morning amid scenes of grief, anger, and weeping. White women remain within the town, where there is a strong police guard.

Lij Balanye died in a hospital here last night after he had been brought in with his brother, Fitourari Guingul, assistant governor of Harrar, who was also wounded. The arrival of these two and other wounded from the front, together with stories of heavy Ethiopian casualties, is likely to increase the present resentment against foreigners.

Four of the wounded are soldiers who examined an Italian grenade found in a tank captured after its four occupants had been killed.

MUSSOLINI HAS PALAVER WITH HITLER'S ENVOY

ROME, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today laid the groundwork for possible closer relations with Germany in a half-hour talk with Ulrich von Hassel, German ambassador to Rome.

This is the first contact between the two nations since Reichsfuehrer Hitler enunciated his "no profiteering" rule to govern German commerce with Italy during the sanctions siege by the league of nations states and the other nations of the world.

MENTAL EXPERT BLOCKED IN FIGHT ON MURPHY WILL

Dr. Ralph C. Ballinger, a neurologist, sat silent for two hours on the witness stand while attorneys argued yesterday before Circuit Judge Benjamin P. Epstein and finally stepped down without testifying in the trial of a suit to set aside the will of Mrs. Marie Louise Murphy, widow of Charles W. Murphy, former owner of the Cubs baseball team. George Krumdick, a brother of Mrs. Murphy, and Mrs. Millie Fry, a sister, are contesting the will on the grounds that Mrs. Murphy was of unsound mind when she made it in 1932, three days after her husband's death and a year before her own. She was then 61 years old.

Another brother and sister and their families were named as the principal beneficiaries of the estate, which counsel yesterday stipulated as being worth between $300,000 and $400,000.

Argue Over Her Sanity.

The argument which kept Dr. Ballinger silent was over the form of a hypothetical question concerning Mrs. Murphy's sanity at the time she made the will. The jury was excluded during the discussion.

Among the instances culled from the evidence and incorporated in the hypothetical question, was an occasion on which Mrs. Murphy went to the World's Fair with friends, "sat down on the first bench they came to, and the party remained there for an hour and a half and then went home."

On another occasion she was riding in a car with a friend and broke a silence with "I told her no." The friend said "Who?" and Mrs. Murphy replied "What?"

Behavior Is Recounted.

Other behavior recounted included "wearing an evening dress in the morning;" "smelling pronouncedly of liquor;" "wearing flowers in the hair when it was not the prevailing fashion;" "would say a 9 and a 2 were 10 in a casino game and take the trick"; and would "give a merchant a $100 bill and say it was a $1 bill."

Judge Epstein aided Attorney C. Helmer Johnson, representing the objectors to the will, in rephrasing the question to eliminate conclusions of witnesses so that it may be put to Dr. Ballinger, probably next Tuesday, before the jury.

TWO PAROLEES ARE IDENTIFIED BY RAPE VICTIM

Clarence Kosich, 31 years old, 834 Belden avenue, paroled convict, was identified last night as a rapist. Kosich was sentenced to the Pontiac reformatory in 1931 for robbery. William Lorch, 30 years old, 937 Belden avenue, who also was paroled from Pontiac after serving seven years as a robber, was identified as an accessory to the rape.

Mrs. Helen Kosinski, 31 years old, 2718 Schubert avenue, declared that the two men seized her on Oct. 24 as she was walking near her home and drove with her in an automobile to the Edgebrook forest preserve, where Kosich robbed her of seven dollars, then attacked her.

Policemen Patrick Duggan and Arthur Osterkorn arrested Kosich on Friday when they found him sitting in a stolen automobile. Lorch, whom Kosich named as his accomplice in crime, was captured a little later. The pair have confessed 16 robberies.

Italian "Upside Down" Flyer to Fight Ethiopia

ASMARA, Eritrea, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Capt. Tito Falconi, the Italian who claims the world record for "upside-down" flying, arrived today to join the Italian army in Ethiopia.

[Falconi, in a flight from St. Louis, Mo., to Joliet, Ill., on Aug. 27, 1933, claimed he had flown inverted 3 hours, 6 minutes, to surpass the mark of Milo G. Burcham, of Long Beach, Cal., who had flown in this fashion for 2 hours, 20 minutes.]

To Chicago Good Fellows

Original Good Fellow Letter Printed in The Tribune Dec. 10, 1909—Campaign Again Open

My dear Friend —

Last Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Last Christmas morning over five thousand children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our-own, but they seemed far away and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over an empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. I've tried it for the last five years and ask you to consider it. Just send your name and address to THE TRIBUNE—address Santa Claus—state how many children you are willing to provide against grief over an empty stocking, inclose a 2 cent stamp, and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you; you do the rest, select your own presents, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not one cent more than you want to pay—every cent just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; you deal with no organization. No record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. THE TRIBUNE was asked to aid in reaching the Good Fellows by publishing this suggestion, and to receive your communication, in order that you may be assured of good faith, and to preserve the anonymous character of this work. The identity of the writer of this appeal will not be disclosed. He assumes the responsibility of finding the children and sending you to their homes, and guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you, then you have wasted your time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the Good Fellows of Chicago.

Perhaps a 25-cent doll or a 10-cent toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the poor child these in an otherwise empty stocking mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and the meat, the clothes, the necessaries; you and the rest of the Good Fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies—the children's real Christmas.

Sincerely

may be obtained, will be opened Monday morning, Dec. 2, at the Tribune's Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street. John Gillespie, director of the office, will be in charge of this department, and will be assisted by Esther Flood and Terese Wadda.

Requests for the names of deserving families to whom a Good Fellow's basket will be an unexpected Christmas joy may be obtained by filling in the coupon [in adjoining column] and mailing it to the Good Fellow department. Beginning Dec. 2 application may be made in person or by telephoning Superior 0100 and asking for this department.

Suggestion for Benefits.

It is suggested that groups planning parties or stunts to raise money for Good Fellow baskets send an announcement of their plans to the Good Fellow Editor, Tribune Tower. A schedule of these events will be published each Sunday in THE TRIBUNE's Metropolitan section. It is hoped that this new service will bolster attendance at these benefit affairs and make it possible for additional baskets to be purchased by the Good Fellows.

Mr. Good Fellow, the stage is set, the curtain is raised on one of the loveliest of all Christmas dramas. Its success again depends upon your acting. Thus far you have never failed a performance. And we know you won't this season.

'CHICAGO'S OWN' CHRISTMAS FUND GETS $160,225

"Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit," sponsored by Mayor Kelly, has received $160,225 toward an expected $250,000, to be used for distributing bundles of clothing and toys to more than 50,000 needy Chicago children, Barnet Hodes, secretary of the benefit, announced yesterday.

The sale of football tickets for the championship game between the parochial and public high schools at Soldiers' field Nov. 30 has totaled $43,281. An additional $81,624 has been realized from the sale of tickets for "A Night of Stars" entertainment to be presented at the stadium the night of Dec. 14, and $35,320 has come from the sale of advertising in the football and entertainment programs, Mr. Hodes said.

The purchasing committee of the benefit has already placed orders for $250,000 worth of clothing, shoes, and toys.

NEW QUIZ OPENED ON SHOOTING LAID TO LOUIS' TRAINER

Prosecutor Calls for All Blackburn Records.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty launched an investigation yesterday into the manner in which police and the coroner's office handled the fatal shooting affray in which Jack Blackburn, 52 years old, colored, a trainer of Joe Louis, the boxer, was involved. Blackburn was exonerated by a coroner's jury at an inquest conducted by Benjamin Grant, colored deputy coroner, but is scheduled to appear in the Felony court Tuesday on a charge of assault to kill.

Enoch Houser, 69 years old, 329 East 58th street, a graduate of Tuskegee institute, well known Negro college, was fatally wounded, and Lucy Cannon, 9 years old, 357 East 57th street, is still undergoing hospital treatment for bullet wounds as a result of a revolver battle in an alley near 57th street and South Park avenue on Oct. 20. The two victims, innocent bystanders, were caught in the cross fire.

One Version of Shooting.

John Bowman, 24 years old, colored, 365 West 57th street, who was arrested with Blackburn after the shooting, told police that Blackburn started a fight with him and he beat the trainer. He then went home, he said, and later when his nephew and wife were fired upon as they left the home, Houser and the Cannon girl were wounded in an exchange of shots.

Prosecutor Dougherty ordered policemen assigned to the case from the Wabash avenue station to appear before him tomorrow morning with their records. He also instructed the coroner's office to submit its records pertaining to the inquest.

Dougherty was detailed to the case by First Assistant Wilbert Crowley yesterday after the latter received the report of an investigation made by Sheridan Bruseaux, a private detective, and Attorney Joseph E. Clayton Jr., representing the families of the shooting victims.

Crime Commission to Act.

Another copy of the report, which charges negligence on the part of the police and coroner's office, was delivered to the Chicago crime commission. Bruseaux once was employed as an investigator by Frank J. Loesch, chairman of the commission. Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlain, director of the crime commission, said he would have a representative watch the proceedings in the Felony court.

Blackburn, who first was released by the police on $1,000 bond after the shooting, is now at liberty on a $5,000 bond set by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court. He was pardoned in Philadelphia in 1913 after serving part of a prison sentence for killing a man in an altercation.

Fire on Longshoremen in Texas; One May Die

Orange, Tex., Nov. 16.—[U.P.]—Seven men were wounded tonight when a gang opened fire on longshoremen who had just left the S. S. San Mateo. One man, Robert Monic, 25, of Buma, Tex., was near death. He was hit by buckshot in the back. Several pellets pierced a lung. The other men were not wounded seriously. Sherif W. P. Brown, armed with a riot gun, led deputies to the scene of the shooting and arrested six men.

UNION HALTS SHIP; SAYS IT CARRIES GAS FOR ITALIANS

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The freighter Oregon was tied up here today when the crew demanded assurance its aviation gasoline cargo was not bound for Italian Somaliland.

Meanwhile Capt. Edward Fitzgerald, federal labor concilator, investigated the "hot cargo" situation which has tied up three ships from strike-bound gulf ports, the Katrina Luckenbach, Matthew Luckenbach and Point Montera.

J. R. Robinson, head of the San Pedro council of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast, said he sent the following telegram to Cordell Hull, secretary of state:

"Steamer Oregon loaded with aviation gasoline apparently consigned to Italian Somaliland via Singapore. We are holding vessel at this port until guaranteed by United States state department that full protection will be given members of our organization who are members of the ship's crew."

ETHIOPIAN RUSE FAILS; ITALIAN PLANES BOMB FOE

ASMARA, Eritrea, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Ethiopian warriors are making their first primitive effort to camouflage their positions on the northern front from the shattering bombs of the Italian air force.

Aviators returning from a bombing raid described today how the warriors, seeking to mislead the crews of 10 Italian planes which flew over them, lighted fires all over a field some distance from their position. But the airplanes swooped low over the field, detected the ruse, and rained down 68 pound incendiary bombs on the warriors' encampment.

The Italian planes bombed three villages which form a triangle between 30 and 40 miles south of Makale on the present front line. The villages are Antalo, Baia, and Afgho-Gropghi. They were bombed for one hour.

A scout plane made a reconnaisance flight before the ten bombers took off, and kept them advised by wireless of the nature of the country.

The most important observation made during the flight was that of a huge tent, big enough to hold a small town circus, which military authorities believe must be occupied by one or more important chieftains, possibly including Ras Seyoum, commander in chief on this front.

FREES 13 SEIZED IN RAIDS.

Thirteen men were freed by Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland yesterday because police lacked warants when they made the arrests in alleged handbooks.

POLICE SLAY HOLDUP KILLER AND SEIZE PAL

Alfred Ellicock (center) was captured yesterday when ten Chicago and Berwyn policemen trapped him in a hideout at 1907 North Albany avenue and shot to death his companion, Frank Peretti. Both men were sought as holdup slayers. Ellicock is shown at Shakespeare avenue police station with Sergt. William Moffett (left) and Policeman Richard Baumann.

HOLDUP SLAYER SHOT TO DEATH BATTLING POLICE

Squad Storms Hideout; Pal Is Captured.

In a gun battle with ten Chicago and Berwyn policemen who trapped them in their hideout on the second floor of 1907 North Albany avenue yesterday afternoon Frank Peretti, 45 years old, a paroled convict, was shot and killed and his companion, Alfred Ellicock, 42 years old, was captured.

The two men were sought as the slayers of Joseph Moravec, who was shot to death in his butcher shop at 1346 South Kenilworth avenue, Berwyn, a week ago last night. Although fatally wounded by the men who sought to rob him, Moravec succeeded in wresting a revolver from a third bandit, Burl Harrison, 26 years old, 2716 Grove avenue, Berwyn, and killing him.

Seize Sister After Battle.

Seized with Ellicock was his sister, Mrs. Belle Christensen, 6017 Bryn Mawr avenue, who had been visiting him.

Ellicock's wife, Mae, and Peretti's wife, Grace, were arrested later in their flat at 4318 West Adams street. By tapping wires at that apartment, Chief of Police Joseph Pilot of Berwyn learned earlier where the two men were hiding. Last Wednesday the police missed them by a few hours in a raid on a north side apartment. That same day Peretti and Ellicock moved into the Albany avenue apartment.

Learning where the hideaway was Chief Pilot, accompanied by Sergt. Charles Rudderham and Policeman Edward Trucksa, went to the Shakespeare avenue station to obtain the help of Chicago police. Acting Capt. Charles Kowlowski took a squad of six, and with the Berwyn detail surrounded the flat building on Albany avenue.

Guard Building's Exits.

Sergt. William Moffett and Policemen Richard Baumann and Henry Hansen went to the front vestibule. Chief Pilot, his two Berwyn policemen, and City Policeman Stanley Tadych stationed themselves along a gangway at the side of the building covering both the front and rear exits.

"I rang the bell of the third floor flat," said Sergt. Moffett. "A woman let us in. At the second floor we knocked on the apartment door. Ellicock opened the door and tried to slam it when he recognized us as policemen. We pushed past him, and I took him into a bedroom, where he surrendered his gun without a struggle."

Peretti, who had been seated at a dining room table, leaped to his feet, pulled out two revolvers, and began shooting at the policemen as he ran toward the rear. Before he could get the door open, Baumann and Hansen had opened fire, wounding him. Mrs. Christensen took cover behind a chair. The policemen pursued their quarry through the door.

Caught Between Fires.

The policemen outside ran to the bottom of the rear stairs and began shooting at Peretti. Caught between two fires, the bandit staggered, spun around as the bullets struck, and plunged down the stairwell. At the bottom he raised his two guns again and Chief Pilot killed him with a shotgun.

Ellicock afterward denied being involved in the Berwyn murder—police said he was the driver of the getaway car—but admitted he had participated in 40 robberies in the last three months. The robberies, mostly of chain stores, were staged in Oak Park, Berwyn, Elgin, Aurora, Waukegan, Elmhurst, and in the Austin and Cragin police districts in Chicago. Peretti was with him in the robberies, Ellicock said.

Ellicock admitted he had spent five years in Leavenworth penitentiary as a deserter from the army. Police said Ellicock and Peretti were companions of Leon Kuich, the cross-eyed grocery bandit who was shot to death June 11.

Find Wound Grocer Inflicted.

Peretti was paroled Nov. 15, 1934, from the Joliet penitentiary after serving six years for the $1,900 robbery of a jewelry store at 4112 West North avenue, on Jan. 28, 1928. At the county morgue police found a healing bullet wound inflicted by Moravec on Peretti's leg during the battle with the robbers.

In the Albany avenue flat, police found two shotguns, two revolvers, and a note which the two men would present to the cashier of any store they intended to rob. It read: "Put all the money in the bag you got there and be quick about it. Say nothing. Hand this back to me."

Mrs. Grace Peretti, an expectant mother, was released last night. Ellicock's three children were placed in the care of juvenile authorities. He and his wife and sister all will face a police showup at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Albert's Six Hens Are Back from Where They've Been

Albert Windelborn, 1423 Darrow avenue, Evanston, telephoned the police of the suburb yesterday that the six hens he reported missing on Thursday had returned to their roost. "I can't imagine where they have been," he said.

AMBULANCE UNIT OFF FOR ETHIOPIA FROM ENGLAND

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The "British ambulance service in Ethiopia," headed by Dr. Andre J. M. Melly, a 37 year old London surgeon, left today for active service on Ethiopian war fronts. The main body of the unit sailed on the S. S. Ranpura and will be joined at Marseilles by Dr. Melly.

English and Scottish Red Cross societies are coöperating in the venture. Funds have been provided by public subscription. The motor trucks to be used have already been shipped together with quantities of medical supplies. Four doctors, six noncommissioned officers, 40 trained native dressers, and 20 native workers will comprise the unit.

Distributes $2,000,000 Taxes, 75 Pct. to Chicago

The county treasurer distributed yesterday $2,000,000 in 1934 tax collections. Of the sum, $1,500,000 was allocated to the city and the board of education. The collector's staf has not yet tabulated payments made by mail on the 1934 taxes before the penalty deadline went into effect two weeks ago.

U. S. AGENTS JOIN HUNT FOR KILLERS IN ALCOHOL WAR

Police Sure Gang Rivalry Caused 3 Murders.

Satisfied that the motive for the murders of three men within a period of 20 hours on Thursday night and Friday lies in a revival of the old gang wars for control of the reborn illicit alcohol racket, police, aided by federal agents, last night were seeking the identity of the killer gang. Two of the slain men were ex-convicts.

Police were certain that two of the victims, Joseph Scaffido, 28 years old, 329 Jackson street, Milwaukee, an ex-convict, and Angelo Kleronomos, 24 years old, 1313 South 58th court, Cicero, a minor criminal, were engaged in the growing business of dealing in illicit liquor. They were shot to death by two gunmen Friday afternoon as they sat in an auto at 2117 Custer street.

The Alcohol War Hookup.

A brother of Kleronomos is said by police to have admitted that he knew the slain man was dabbling in the illicit liquor trade. A note to Kleronomos' wife, found in one of his pockets, bore out this belief. Scaffido, police said, was a known alcohol runner.

This double shooting followed by a few hours the murder of Frank Stypuloski, alias Sloan, 25 years old, also an ex-convict, who was shot to death under virtually the same circumstances Thursday night as he sat in his car with a girl, at Paulina street and North avenue. Stypuloski also was known to be an alcohol runner, and in this murder as in the one that followed, two men carried out the killing.

U. S. Agents Take Up Hunt.

This combination of circumstances led E. C. Yellowley head of the federal alcohol tax unit in Chicago, to assign men yesterday to assist Supervising Captain John Horan in his investigation of the three murders.

Federal agents have arrested many bootleggers since repeal, and have raided numerous illicit stills, and for this reason are believed to be more familiar with the makeup of the rising alcohol and liquor gangs than are the police.

"It's hard to tell now whether gangs have actually reached the point of organizing to put over the alky trade," said Yellowley. "But if they have they are made up of young men. The old gang organizations are dead."

Capt. Horan detailed several police men yesterday to canvass the district in which Scaffido and Kleronomos were slain in an attempt to learn if any householder there knew them. Before the murder the two men had been observed driving slowly about the neighborhood, peering closely at house numbers and street signs, police were informed. Capt. Horan surmised that they may have been lured to their death by a fake telephone call asking for a liquor delivery.

The slain Stypulowski, Capt. Horan said, had been sought as a parole violator since last spring.

Miss Marie Kolowski, 19 years old, 1725 Gerard street, who was with him in the car when he was shot, was still held by police yesterday for further questioning. The killers first passed the couple as they were driving at Ashland and North avenues, Miss Kolowski said. Stypulowski became very nervous, she declared. He peered at the occupants of the car and then drew a revolver and put it on the seat beside him. The revolver remained untouched when the killers later drove up to his car and opened fire without warning.

Inquests into the three killings were opened yesterday at the county morgue and continued until Nov. 29. The testimony of relatives of Kleronomos revealed that he had been threatened with death and was in fear of being slain by gangsters.

Liquor Peddler, Wife Says.

His widow, Frances, 19 years old, to whom he had been married for a year, testified that 5 weeks ago her husband gave up a job in one of his brother's three fruit stores in Oak Park and since then had been peddling liquor. One of the eight Kleronomos brothers, Carl, told of the death threats.

Capt. Horan was hopeful that some clew to the identity of the assassins and the extent of the struggle for control of the liquor racket may be found in Milwaukee. He said he believed the alcohol Kleronomos and Scaffido handled probably was manufactured in Wisconsin and then brought down into Chicago for distribution by peddlers.

The shooting of Frank Schaeffer, 34 years old, 425 North Kedzie avenue, at first linked with the murder of Stypulowski, is now believed to have occurred in the course of a robbery attempt, Capt. Horan said.

TESTIFY AT MURDER INQUEST

Mrs. Frances Kleronomos (left), 19 years old, widow of the slain Angelo Kleronomos, and Mrs. Lillian Winiecki, sister of Frank Stypuloski, who was murdered Thursday night 20 hours before the double killing of Kleronomos and Joseph Scaffido. The women were witnesses yesterday at the inquest in county morgue. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

HOLD 3 BOY INTRUDERS.

Theodore Brown, 12 years old, 353 West 47th street; Jacob Scialabba, 14, of 4802 Shields avenue, and James France, 15, of 4559 Wentworth avenue, were held by the Englewood police for the attempted burglary yesterday of the Ward Baking company office at 5659 South La Salle street.

Prisoner Uses Hollow Leg to Hide Jail Break Tools

Mule Shoe, Tex., Nov. 16.—(AP)—B. V. Simms' artificial leg almost got him out of jail. Starting from Simms' cell, officers followed a trail of havoc through sawed bars and doors until they came upon the one legged prisoner, working away at the last barrier with a full set of tools. They tipped up the hollow limb and out clattered a hammer, hacksaw and blade, chisel, punch and acid to soften "toolproof" steel.

PAROLE VIOLATOR HUNTED SINCE 1918 IS SEIZED HERE

Arthur Weilbacher, 37 years old, a parole violator who has been a fugitive since Oct. 18, 1918, when he escaped from a guard en route to Joliet penitentiary, was seized by the police yesterday as he loitered in the 2700 block of Pine Grove avenue.

Weilbacher's police record began when he was sent to the Pontiac reformatory on Nov. 4, 1914, to serve a term of from one to twenty years for burglary. He was paroled Sept. 18, 1916, but was returned to the reformatory for parole violation two months later. Paroled again, Weilbacher was sought for violation, but was not found until Oct. 18, 1918. Too old for Pontiac, he was ordered taken to Joliet, but escaped on the way.

Policemen George Beidermann and Michael Richards of the Sheffield station said that when they arrested Weilbacher yesterday he admitted he intended to rob an apartment building in the neighborhood.

ALABAMA MINERS' STRIKE SETTLED; GRANT PAY RAISE

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 17 [Sunday].—(AP)—A compromise agreement between Alabama coal operators and miners early today ended the coal strike which has kept 18,000 workers idle since Sept. 23.

Gov. Bibb Graves' announced the settlement after a conference which began yesterday afternoon had lasted past midnight.

The governor said most mines would reopen Tuesday morning. The new wage scale will remain in effect until April 1, 1937.

Miners on day wages will be given increases of 20 cents per day. Tonnage rates will be increased four and one-half cents, and 5 per cent will be added to the pay of those on dead work and yardage rates.

2 PEDESTRIANS KILLED; EACH HIT BY TWO AUTOS

Driver Faces Charge in Waukegan Accident.

Two pedestrians, each of them run over by two cars, died yesterday as the result of Chicagoland accidents.

William Kneasly, 28 years old, 442 Washington park, Waukegan, was killed last night when he was struck by two automobiles as he was crossing Belvidere street at Glen Rock avenue in Waukegan. The first car to strike Kneasly was driven by Alvin Schaefer, 16 years old, 34 South Martin avenue, Waukegan. The blow hurled him into the path of the second automobile, driven by Edward Flaherty, 6334 North Irving avenue. The Waukegan police reported that the machine driven by young Schaefer went nearly 500 feet before stopping. Schaefer was charged with manslaughter.

Another Hit as He Lies In Street.

William Hardy, 43 years old, 4450 South Karlov avenue, lying in the street after apparently having been struck, police said, by a hit and run driver, was hit by a second machine driven by Ellis Part, 27 years old, 5233 South Tripp avenue. Part told the police he was unable to stop in time to avoid striking Hardy after he sighted him lying in Pulaski road near Archer avenue. Hardy was the father of five children. He died in the County hospital during the day. The accident happened late Friday night.

Other Cook county trafic fatalities yesterday:

Gustave Eberle, 53 years old, 3839 North Sacramento avenue, a carpenter. Fatally injured last night when struck by an auto as he stepped from a street car at Sacramento avenue and Irving Park boulevard. Died in Martha Washington hospital. The automobile was driven by Walter B. Pratt, 2039 Jarvis avenue.

Fred Sauerman, 50 years old, 1920 South 51st court, Cicero. Louis Dellamaria Jr., 28 years old, 5657 Magnolia avenue, driver of the car, told police he did not see Sauerman, but that he stopped his automobile at 1134 Canal street when he felt the wheels pass over some object. Bystanders were forced to overturn Dellamaria's car before they could release Sauerman.

An automobile driver who drove on after striking and seriously injuring an aged man at Warren avenue and Oakley boulevard late in the afternoon was pursued and halted by Clarence Kuffer, 4354 Barry avenue. The driver was Andrew Ardil, 39 years old, 562 Oakwood boulevard, and the victim Jacob Rossky, 77 years old, 825 North Oakley avenue. Ardil, taken to the Warren avenue police station, declared that he did not know his car had struck any one. At the County hospital slight hope was held for the recovery of Rossky.

Two Soldiers Hurt in Crash.

Two privates stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, were critically injured yesterday when their automobile collided with a transcontinental furniture van at 159th street and Cicero avenue in Oak Forest.

At the nearby Oak Forest infirmary, where the victims were taken, it was said Frank Sass, 24 years old, driver of the auto, and Wesley Taylor, 20 years old, incurred skull fractures. A third passenger in the car, Pvt. Vincent Kavanagh, 22 years old, escaped injury, as did the driver of the truck, Frank Cusenza, 33 years old, who was en route from California to his home in Flint, Mich.

Winter Precautions Urged.

A warning to pedestrians and to motorists to exercise added precautions during winter months was sounded during the day by Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee. George W. Fleming, secretary, pointed out there had been an increase of 18 automobile deaths in October over September.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 857 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1, according to the coroner's office. In that period 667 persons were killed and 15,402 persons injured in trafic crashes within the Chicago city limits.

Sentence Young Driver to Write Safety Essay

Because he bumped into a police car at Spencer avenue and 16th street in Wilmette, Arthur Cooke, 15 years old, 304 Central Park avenue, Wilmette, was ordered to compose a 500 word essay on "Safety" yesterday when Police Magistrate John J. Peters of the north shore suburb found him guilty of reckless driving. Magistrate Peters also suggested the youth's parents compose a check for damages to the squad car.

PREPARE A FIGHT ON SPEED TRAPS AND BILLBOARDS

Auto Group Ends National Convention Here.

BY HAL FOUST.

The American Automobile association ended a two day convention in the Palmer house yesterday with attacks upon roadside billboards, speed traps, and inequitable taxation. These three subjects, with accident prevention measures, were adopted as a program for advocacy by the association's 800 affiliated motor clubs during the ensuing year.

The delegates, from 40 states, voted to extend moral and financial aid in getting a decision from the United States Supreme court sustaining Massachusetts' taxation and restrictive measures on highway billboards. A local committee from the Bay state asked for such assistance in defending the law against court attacks.

Fee System Attacked.

The association's resolution regarding speed traps has special significance in Illinois at this time. It was an attack against the fee system for magistrates and justices, a system viewed as encouraging arrests and convictions solely for the personal profit of police and court officers.

The Illinois motor vehicle code passed by the regular general assembly this summer removed trafic cases from the jurisdiction of the fee supported courts. Gov. Horner, in his message to the special assembly now in session, proposed the return of trafic cases to the justices of peace and the magistrates.

On the taxation question, the associates adopted as a general policy the principle that automobile operation should pay for its usage of public pavements but should not be assessed gasoline or license charges for other governmental expenses.

Urges "Pedestrian Education."

Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, after the adoption of his resolution indorsing elevated highway construction, discussed accident prevention and advocated concentration of educational efforts on "pedestrianism" rather than driving.

"The only trained pedestrians in America," said Mr. Hayes, "are pupils in the elementary schools. The trafic death rate in this group between the ages of 5 and 9 years has decreased 25 per cent from 1922 to 1934. Between the ages of 9 and 14 years there has been an increase of only 3 per cent in this dozen years. At the same time there has been an increase of 130 per cent in trafic death rate of youths of high school age."

SELLS HIS AUTO FOR 50 CENTS AND MAKES A PROFIT

Because he had sold his 1925 model automobile to a junkman for 50 cents before appearing in Trafic court, John Curnen, 17 years old, 9554 South Bishop street, was freed by Judge J. M. Braude when he was arraigned yesterday on a charge of operating an automobile without a state license. A license would have cost him at least $7.50.

John Mislevich, 17 years old, 644 West 36th street, driver of the car which crashed through the Wacker drive retaining wall near Franklin street a week ago and missed by inches falling to the lower level, was sentenced by Judge Braude to 30 days in the Bridewell on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

DRIVERS' LICENSE BILL PROVIDES FOR PENALTIES

In support of the proposed new drivers' license bill, which was presented to the house at Springfield last week, George W. Fleming, chairman of Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee, emphasized yesterday the point that the measure carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a fine of $500 for persons convicted of operating a motor vehicle without a license.

Drafting of the bill was supervised by Mr. Fleming and it was introduced by Representatives Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago, the Democratic floor leader, and Edward P. O'Grady, Chicago Democrat and consistent advocate of licensing. The measure was sent to second reading without reference to a committee and the sponsors and Mr. Fleming will move for its advancement at this week's session of the assembly.

The license could be obtained without fee from the secretary of state and without physical examination. Applicants, however, would be required to make a thorough report on their ability to drive a machine. Revocation would follow conviction of driving while intoxicated, committing perjury to obtain a license, committing a felony in which an automobile is used, or failure to stop if engaged in an accident. Three convictions for speeding also would result in revocation.

LAUNCH MOVE TO END ILLEGAL BILL POSTING; ARRESTS ORDERED

The police department will arrest all persons found posting bills on public and private property contrary to ordinance, and is making an investigation to discover such law breakers, who usually do their work by night, Police Commissioner James P. Allman said yesterday.

Following a conference of police officials, members of the Chicago Real Estate board, and officials of the Metropolitan State Civic council on Friday, Commissioner Allman ordered district captains to launch a campaign against the bill posting. Capt. John C. Prendergast, chief of the uniformed police, will direct the campaign.

At the conference representatives of business and advertising interests pledged to halt the illegal bill posting, which, it is charged, is depreciating property values. The movement had been previously indorsed by Mayor Kelly.

un-American experiments should be stopped."

"Should Balance Budget."

6. "The budget should be balanced, not by more taxes, but by reduction of follies."

7. "The futile purchases of foreign silver should be stopped."

8. "The gold standard should be reestablished, even on the new basis."

9. "The act authorizing the President to inflate the currency should be repealed."

10. "The administration should give and keep a pledge to the country that there will be no further juggling of the currency and no further experiments with credit inflation."

11. "Confidence in the validity of promises of the government should be restored."

Sees Inflation Near.

Through its devaluation of the dollar, its silver purchases, and its abandonment of the gold standard, in favor of a managed currency, the New Deal not only has brought us "to the threshold of devastating inflation," but also has furnished large profits to foreigners, which American taxpayers must pay for, according to Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover asserted that the New Deal's great accumulation from the rest of the world of gold and silver "that we do not need for any conceivable purpose" was likely to produce results which would "represent more loss to the American people than a whole year's treasury deficit." He also charged its managed currency system with making this country virtually part of the "sterling bloc," with a great influence over American trade lodged in London.

Mr. Hoover warned that economic and social security could not be realized except upon the foundation of sound national fiscal policies. He conceded that some New Deal measures were good and should be continued.

Because of lack of confidence in a politically managed currency, he went on, recovery in the construction industries has been delayed and millions of unemployed have been kept from returning to work. This he called "a huge burden in money and misery not included in the budget."

POLL OF VOTERS BARES ENMITY TO ROOSEVELT IDEAS

President Roosevelt's agricultural tinkering program and the tendency of this and others of his policies to undermine the constitution are two subjects that many voters in the Fifth ward—the Hyde Park district—believe should be major issues in the 1936 presidential campaign.

The voters registered their opinions on issues in a poll being conducted by Louis J. Behan, former vice president of the South Park district, who is a resident of the ward. They were asked in a questionnaire to select from five listed subjects the two they thought of the greatest importance to themselves, their families, and the country.

So far, 4,516 questionnaires have been returned to Behan. On every one of the 4,516, one of the subjects was checked. This was: "The high cost of living, caused by President Roosevelt's policy of killing pigs, destroying cattle and plowing under grain, and the attendant processing taxes."

With the questionnaire Mr. Behan is distributing pledge cards of the reorganization committee of the Republican party in Cook county. Besides gathering pledges from both Republicans and Democrats to vote and work against the reëlection of Roosevelt and Gov. Horner, many of those answering are extending their views in accompanying letters.

COMPLETE TEXT OF FORMER PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER'S ADDRESS BEFORE OHIOANS IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The full text of former President Hoover's address before the Ohio Society of New York here tonight follows:

"Your committee extended to me a cordial invitation to address you on public questions. I urged that they should find somebody else. I explained that even if I were simply to read the ten commandments it would be interpreted as critical by the administration at Washington. Even that hint failed to dampen their insistence. I then stated that the situation of our country was in too great danger for me or any one to waste time in an academic discussion; that what I had to say would be in apposition to certain policies. They insisted that the Ohio society had invited me because it was a serious body anxious for the stark, rugged truth.

"Indeed, discussion of public questions is the first necessity in a republic. Free government cannot exist without free debate. By honest and bold debate alone may we prevent disaster to the security and happiness of this nation. On that anvil alone we may shape the intellectual instruments of human betterment.

Means Political Rule.

"I recently made an address upon the New Deal spending, debts, and their consequences. I purpose on this occasion to discuss what the New Deal calls 'national planning,' the expenditures it imposes on the people, its consequences, and some remedies that it requires. This old and respected phrase 'national planning' has been disclosed to have powerful meanings. You might think that meant blueprints. But this sort of 'national planning' includes political management of money, credit, farming, industry, morals, and the more abundant life.

"Two years ago the phrase more frequently used was 'planned economy.' But as that has become so obviously 'planned extravagance,' it has been less used in these last few months. Even 'national planning' is threatened with ejection by a still newer, glittering phrase, the 'third economy.' I trust it is not so expensive as the others.

"Let me say at once that I am not here criticizing all the measures taken in Washington. Republics must go forward, not backward, but if they would go forward they must promptly discard the bad. I am here discussing those measures which threaten to impoverish the nation.

Opponents in Two Groups.

"There are two different groups of opponents of the New Deal sort of 'national planning' or 'planned economy.' One group holds that it is a deliberate plan for centralizing authority to a point where we, the people, can be made to do what starry eyed young men in Washington think is good for us—whether it is good for us or not. This group believes 'planned economy' is the American name for the European diseases which have infected us for the last three years. They feel these catchwords cloak that incarnate passion for power, the insidious end of which is the destruction of liberty and the rise of the regimented state.

"The other group of opponents hold that the new 'national planning' is an attempt of a collegiate oligarchy to sanctify by a phrase a muddle of uncoördinated reckless adventures in government, flavored with unctuous claims to monopoly in devotion to their fellow men. These opponents believe 'national planning' has neither philosophy nor consistency of action.

"My own conclusion is that the new 'national planning' contains any or all these elements, depending upon which New Dealer is doing the planning for the day.

Writings Confirm Views.

"Any of these views could be confirmed by the writings of a dozen charter members of the New Deal who have now turned against the order. They could be substantiated by the writings of many who remain in it.

"I do not intend on this occasion to elaborate the philosophy of 'planned economy.' It is neither conservative, liberal, nor common sense. Nor do I propose on this occasion to discuss its constitutional aspects. There are nests of constitutional termites at work.

"I shall simply inquire whether we ought to want this sort of 'economic planning' and its invisible costs. It has unfolded itself through some scores of new bureaus of the federal government. I will not take your time to enumerate all the alphabetical agencies. I may say, however, there are only four letters of the alphabet not now in use by the administration in Washington. When we establish the quick loans corporation for xylophones, yachts, and zithers, the alphabet of our fathers will be exhausted. But of course the new Russian alphabet has thirty-four letters.

"We have now had three years in which to appraise the work of these agencies. They are no longer in the aurora borealis stage, with all its excitement and false promises of light. We emerge from illusion into the daylight of practical experience.

"There is one consistency in all this new 'national planning,' or 'planned economy,' or 'third economy.' Every branch of these plans has the habit of carefree scattering of public money. They are haunted by no old ghost of a balanced budget. But 'national planning' thinks in phrases and slogans rather than the exactitude of the cash register. We now know that in addition to increased taxes after four years of it the bill of increased taxpayers' liabilities will be about $14,000,000,000. If they have a cash register it certainly has an astronomical keyboard.

"Only Visible Expenditures."

"These are, however, only the visible expenditures imposed on the people. The taxes of today and their sure increase in the future if these policies are not stopped are but a small part of even the money cost of 'national planning.' And let no one be deluded. It is the farmer, the worker, as well as the business man, who pays the invisible costs, just as they pay the bulk of the tax assessments.

"I may give you a few examples.

"Judged by works and not by words, another consistency in this sort of 'economic planning' is to limit competition and restrict production—the essence of monopoly. They have given us planned scarcity—upon which civilization always degenerates—in the place of economic plenty, upon which America has grown great. It is the more abundant life—without bacon.

"One of the wheel horses of the 'national planning'—that is the NRA—was thought to have been killed by the Supreme court. That decision has not yet been claimed as part of the new 'national planning,' although every day men are getting jobs because of it. But now we are promised a resurrection of this dead. The price of it was and will be in every household budget.

Avoid Congressional Debate.

"The new 'national planning' is building vast projects—perhaps useful to our grandchildren. We have to pay the cost of interest and maintenance until they come of age. This is also the New Deal door by which the government rushes into business in competition with its own citizens. The citizen loses because he cannot compete with government bookkeeping and the pipe line into the treasury. Few of these projects were even mentioned until after blank checks were drawn by congress. This method of planning avoids exhaustion from congressional debate—and takes the limit off spending.

"The new 'national planning' of relief shifted its administration from local and state authorities to a political bureaucracy centralized at Washington. That has resulted not only in stupendous waste but in the creation of a great group of permanent dependents. It has added nothing to the security and care of those deserving in distress except—expense.

"And we are destroying the self-respect and the responsibility of self-government by turning the treasury into a national grab bag. Our national ideals get little of a lift from the general attitude, 'If we don't get ours some one else will.'

"The new 'national planning' of taxes, currency, credit, and business has raised and will continue to raise the cost of living to the farm housewife, the worker's housewife, and all other housewives. It is a deduction from economic and social security of the poor—it is not a more abundant life. It erodes the purchasing power of wages. It gives birth to strikes and inflames class conflict.

Strike Losses Tripled.

"During the depression years of the last administration the loss of a man days from strikes and lockouts averaged about 5,000,000 per year. During this administration it has averaged a loss of about 18,000,000 man days per year. These gigantic losses appear in the worker's budget, not in the treasury.

"The new 'economic planning' has included repudiation or government covenants, which raises somber questions of government morals and honor. In any event it devalued the dollar by 41 per cent. It gave us the gift of 'managed currency.' As potent devices for destroying confidence these have merit. Through politically managed credit it has brought us to the threshold of devastating inflation. The stock market is already peeking into that bluebeard's cave.

"In the few moments of this address I shall explore a little further into the price and consequences of these monetary and credit policies.

French Silver Budget.

"There is the folly of buying foreign silver. I could at least see some reason for spending ten to fifteen million a year to subsidize employment in our western silver mines by buying their product at a profitable price. But what earthly reason we have for buying vast amounts of foreign silver will take generations of politicians to explain. If we are to have managed currency, we do not require any metallic base.

"There is in fact no metallic base today. If there were, you could exchange currency for gold. If we want a metallic base, the government already has $9,700,000,000 of gold and only $5,600,000,000 of currency in circulation. Thus it would seem that we have plenty of metallic base for the currency when we have nearly one dollar and eighty cents in gold metal for every dollar of currency. That leaves plenty over to pay international balances.

"Yet we deliberately bid up the price of foreign silver by 50 per cent. Then we proceed to buy vast quantities of that commodity, for which we have no earthly use, at enormous profits to foreigners. Upon that folly we have already spent about $250,000,000 and under the new "economic planning" we are to spend about $1,000,000,000 more. The siphon runs either through the taxpayer's pocket or inflation. You can be sure no foreigner would buy this silver back from us at what we pay for it.

"Good Neighbor Policies."

"It is no doubt a part of our good neighbor policies that we have joyfully subsidized every foreign speculator in silver. We have also subsidized every silver mine in Australia, India, Mexico, and Peru. But we have pursued these good neighbor policies further. We have stirred up currency troubles in China and other silver currency countries. We have stimulated their good feelings by flooding them with bankruptcies, labor troubles, and jiggling their cost of living.

"Another result of 'economic planning' has been the attraction of billions of gold—over two billions in two years—that we ought to have had goods instead. Apparently 'planned economy' aims to become a bi-metallic Midas.

"Although we cannot recall the 100 per cent dollars we can well consider the results of devaluation. We devalued the dollar 41 per cent under the hypnosis that if we reduced the length of a yard to 21.2 inches we would have more cloth in the bolt. One result is that the foreigner is shipping us more gold every day to buy our good domestic assets for the price of 21.2 inches to the yard. That is a complicated problem of New Deal economics, but if you will search around in it you will find much of interest. It is likely to represent more loss to the American people than a whole year's treasury deficit.

"While on this romantic subject of currencies I may mention that when we entered new 'national planning' in currency we were promised a 'managed currency' that would be adjusted to American life and conditions. Of course if it worked it would increase the cost of living by 41 per cent. Thus it would reduce the living to be obtained from all life insurance policies, college endowments, pensions, wages, and salaries, and would increase the housewife's cost of living.

"By it we forgave 41 per cent of most of our foreign debts. That is, they can pay them today with 41 per cent less gold than they expected to pay. You will remember those private foreign loans. They were denounced as the cause of all evil, so we now reduce the evil by reducing them 41 per cent. But offsetting all these pains, it was supposed to reduce the burden of mortgages. And equally if it works it lessens the burdens of all bonds, government and otherwise.

"Here we again enter higher economics, but it you explore it thoroughly you will find that the 10,000,000 stockholders of corporations, including the unhappy power companies, profit at the expense of the 65,000,000 insurance policy holders. The sum of all these shifts do not make the poor any richer.

Losses Are Concealed.

"But above all this managed currency was to be thoroughly American and would make us independent of world influences. Two billions of dollars were appropriated to stabilize secretly foreign exchange and no accounting of the losses appears in the national deficit—that is, not yet. But behold! Our mystery fund has been most successful in stabilizing our currency to within a few per cent of the pound sterling for over a year.

"We have attained that stability which comes from leaning up against the British. We are the thirty-first member of the 'sterling bloc.' We are only one of the thirty-one planets which revolve around the British sun. We have thus trustingly reposed in London a large influence in American values and freedom of American trade. I do not pretend to know where all this will take us, but I do know that I prefer a currency that no 'national planning' can manage for us, not even the British.

Value Subject to Whim.

"In any event so long as 'managed currency' lasts the purchasing value of the dollar lies at the whim of political government. Politics are bound to be in every government managed currency. You can never make the American dollar ring true on the counters of the world nor on the counters of our savings banks so long as there is the alloy of politics in it. So long as it has that alloy in it people cannot invest $100 today with full confidence as to what it will be worth in old age.

"One result has been delayed recovery in the construction industries and continued unemployment in millions of unhappy homes. That goes into the realm of higher economics, but I assure you it is a hugh burden in money and misery on the country not included in the budget.

"There is another of these huge penalties of this 'economic planning' which may be illustrated by a bit of American history. It concerns a great mistake of the federal reserve system in 1927. That was before my administration, and in any event at that time the system was independent of the administration. It also concerns a gigantic price in human suffering.

European Banks Aided.

"In an effort to support the shaky financial structure of Europe, our reserve system in 1927 joined with foreign government banks in expansion or inflation of bank credits. Some of us laymen had bitterly protested that we had no need of expanded credit, that in view of the then situation it would be dangerous. We were told it could and would be easily controled. There were other impulses, but this inflation of bank credit contributed to set off the greatest madness of speculation and greed since the Mississippi bubble. Men then also dreamed they were in a new era. They resisted every warning. The controls proved ineffective. The movement collapsed of its own weight in 1929.

"No human being could have believed that such griefs and tragedies ever lay in so obscure a thing as bank credit inflation. It brought hunger to the door of millions of homes. It destroyed the savings of millions of families.

"It created a scene of financial misdoings which have furnished the material for ceaseless attacks upon honest business. This inflation perhaps staved off for a year or two the inevitable collapse in Europe. That struck us in 1931, an already weakened nation. But such strength as we had left saved both ourselves and the world from chaos.

Two Morals to Story.

"There are morals in that story. But there is something of far more present importance in that story than post-mortem moralizing. Despite that bitter experience the new national planners, to finance their huge spending and other purposes, have desperately resorted to the same inflation of bank credits. They, however, apparently do not believe in homeopathic doses. The dose of that same poison now injected into our national bloodstream by the New Deal is already three or four times as great as that of 1927.

"They say also it can be controled. But will the politically controled reserve system prove any more successful? Stated in its mildest form, this is gambling with the fate of a nation. Should these controls fail, this democracy will not survive the shock.

"And 'national planning' was supposed to shake us free from vicious speculation and money changers. Of this you can be sure. Instability of currencies and inflation of credit are the green pastures upon which the speculator grows fat. He is the sole beneficiary from instability. The costs of that instability do not appear in the government budget, yet they appear in every honest business. They add to the price of every commodity.

"Collides with Itself."

"And here the 'national planning' collides with itself. Of what value are old age pensions, or unemployment insurance, savings for old age, or any other beneficient effort under the scourge of devaluation and inflation?

"We can express government expenses in figures. But no mortal man can compute the costs, the burdens, and dangers imposed upon 120,000,000 people by these actions. Its cost in national impoverishment far exceeds even taxes. Its losses will be larger than the national debt.

"It is a time for plain speaking and blunt statement of some fundamental principles upon these monetary and fiscal questions. And let me speak to you in old-fashioned language. When I was a boy in Iowa I learned some very simple truths about finance. I learned that money does not grow on trees; it must be earned. I learned that the first rule of a successful career is to keep expenditures within the means of paying them. I learned that the keeping of financial promises is the first obligation of an honorable man. And I learned that the man who borrows without intent to repay is headed for bankruptcy or disgrace or crime. These may be platitudes, but they are still truths.

"Must Keep Word."

"As I have increased in years and in opportunity to study the affairs of governments, I have made a very simple but vital observation. That is that a government should have in financial matters the same standards that an honorable man has. A government must realize that money must be earned before it is spent, that a nation's word in finance must be sacredly kept, that a nation is immoral if it repudiates its obligations or inflates its mediums of exchange or borrows without regard to posterity; and finally, that a nation which violates these simple principles will, like a man, end in dishonor and disaster.

"A government cannot expect financial honor in its people unless it maintains honor itself. A large part of the world's misery in all ages has come from the acts of government that ignored these principles and entered upon policies of reckless spending and debasement and repudiation.

"Our country shows hopeful signs of recovery despite great hindrances. That convalescence should be speeded and made secure. We should no longer tolerate financial policies that prolong unemployment, that create fear and distrust and uncertainty, that slowly but surely undermine the industrial structure on which the living of the whole nation depends. We should no longer tolerate a money system that is not a money system, but a hodge-podge of promiscuous ingredients that not even the administration will attempt to name, define, or defend. We should no longer tolerate gambling in the future of a nation with the dice of inflation. We should no longer tolerate a financial policy that does not balance the budget.

"The American citizen wants to know where his savings are to be confiscated. The plain man wants to know whether his little life insurance policy is going to be worth anything at his death. The housewife wants to know whether her husband's wages are going to buy food for his family.

"There is a way to settle all these questions. That way is through abandonment of present financial and fiscal policies and return to sound policies. Do you wish a constructive fiscal program?

"The waste of taxpayers' money on unnecessary public works should end.

"The administration of relief should be turned over to local authorities. Federal expenditures for relief should be confined to cash allowances to these authorities to the extent that they are unable to provide their own funds.

"The spending for visionary and un-American experiments should be stopped.

"This horde of political burocracy should be rooted out.

"The provision of the constitution requiring that expenditures shall only be in accordance with appropriations actually made by law should be obeyed. And they should be made for specific purposes.

"The budget should be balanced, not by more taxes, but by reduction of follies.

"The futile purchases of foreign silver should be stopped.

Favors Gold Return.

"The gold standard should be reestablished, even on the new basis.

"The act authorizing the President to inflate the currency should be repealed.

"The administration should give and keep a pledge to the country that there will be no further juggling of the currency and no further experiments with credit inflation.

"Confidence in the validity of promises of the government should be restored.

"The nation seeks for solution of its many difficulties. It is groping for security from economic storms and from individual poverty. But economic security, social security, or any other security cannot be found without first restoring these primary policies of government.

"These matters are no abstractions. They are not theoretical questions of academic debate. They are the invisible forces which surround every American fireside. They determine the happiness of every American home. In their rightful direction lies the safety of these homes and the fruition of their hopes. They determine the welfare of our children and the progress of our nation."

U. S.-CANADIAN TRADE REDUCED IN EVERY LINE

Reciprocal Treaty to Be Told Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Official figures showing precipitate declines since 1929 in virtually every category of American-Canadian commerce were scanned by observers today for hints on tarif trends in the new reciprocal trade agreement.

The compact, signed yesterday in an impressive White House ceremony by Prime Minister King for Canada and by Secretary Hull for the United States, will be released for publication Monday. Officials of both governments have carefully withheld all information on its contents.

Authoritative quarters assumed, however, that since the new agreement is designed to increase commerce by removing trade obstructions, chief attention would go to tarifs on goods which have shown the largest slumps.

Can Reduce Tarifs.

Under the reciprocal trade act of 1934, President Roosevelt has authority to reduce tarifs as much as 50 per cent in exchange for similar concessions. No senate ratification is required for these agreements.

The law forbids the President to increase or reduce the number of articles on the American free list, which includes such items as Canadian newsprint, pulp wood and wood pulp.

After a conference with President Roosevelt, representative Harry B. Coffee [Dem., Neb.] expressed an opinion that if American duties on live cattle were lowered in the Canadian agreement, some safeguard for the western livestock industry would be included in the form of quota limits on such imports.

Big Drop in Trade.

Belief was expressed here that the President might have taken similar action in the new agreement with respect to other Canadian articles which could compete with American goods.

American exports to Canada dropped from $949,446,342 in 1929 to $210,651,312 in 1933, while during the same period imports from that country declined from $503,496,245 to $185,408,850. Their trade improved somewhat in 1934. The respective figures were $302,433,000 and $231,696,000.

How this fall was reflected in specific commodities, which may throw some light on the trend of the new trade agreement, is shown in commerce department figures comparing the 1929 value of trade with that of 1933.

Seventh to Be Signed.

The Canadian pact was the seventh to be signed. The others: Cuba, Brazil, Haita, Belgium, Colombia, and Sweden. All except those with Canada and Colombia have been ratified and are in effect.

Besides the Netherland, Spain, and France, the other countries the United States is negotiating with are Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Salvador, Switzerland, Finland, and Italy. Conversations with Italy temporarily are in abeyance due to the war situation.

Burlington's Engine Men Discuss Strike Tomorrow

The grievance committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad will meet tomorrow at the Great Northern hotel to discuss the possibility of a strike of its 1,500 members to compel employment of a second man in the engine cabs of the Diesel operated streamline trains, for safety's sake. The view of the railroad management is that the "dead man's throttle" would bring the train to a halt if anything happened to the engineer.

Trooper at Fort Sheridan Accidentally Kills Buddy

Private Hilding N. Nelson, 22 years old, of troop A, 14th cavalry at Fort Sheridan, returned to barracks last night after spending his birthday with his family in Milwaukee. He brought with him a Mauser pistol, a war relic. While showing the pistol to a friend, Private Winford Robirtson of the same troop, the weapon was accidentally discharged. The bullet struck Nelson in the head, killing him instantly. A board of inquiry held the shooting to be accidental.

KNOX AND BORAH SEE TRADE PACT ALIENATING WEST

Believe Roosevelt Will Lose Farm Vote.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A political issue with which to stir up the west and northwest against the New Deal was seen today in the reciprocal trading treaty with Canada by Col. Frank Knox of Chicago and Senator William E. Borah, the former an avowed and the other a "receptive" candidate for the presidency.

While they declined to comment definitly on the latest move of the administration to stimulate prosperity until the terms of the pact are known, they recalled that the passage of a reciprocity act in the Taft administration had lost the west to the party, and the same uprising was expected to result from the pending treaty if the tarif wall is let down on farm products, lumber, and cattle.

Col. Knox arrived here today to set up winter quarters for Mrs. Knox.

While he avoided definite comment on the reciprocal treaty with Canada and the farm problem, he indicated that he would offer a plan to solve the farm question after the Supreme court acted on the AAA. He says the farmers are opposed to regimentation and believes that crop control might be worked out through some coöperative system whereby the farmers could get loans on warehouse receipts on their crops through banks. His system would call for the government merely to make reports on the amount of crops placed in storage by the farmers.

Appoint Hodes Lecturer at Northwestern Law School

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes has accepted an appointment as lecturer on municipal corporations in the law school of Northwestern university, it was announced at the school yesterday. Mr. Hodes, a graduate of the law school, recently attracted attention in legal circles when he reorganized the city's law department shortly after his appointment as corporation counsel. He is the author of two books on taxation. The schedule of his lectures has not been completed, but they will be delivered during the winter term beginning the latter part of January.

The United Air Lines announced yesterday a special "Manila mail" flight from Chicago and other inland cities to San Francisco, connecting with the trans-Pacific China air clipper which leaves on its first regular passage Friday. All mail destined for Honolulu, Guam, or the Philippines, via the new clipper, must be at the air line office, 400 South Michigan avenue, by 10:30 a. m. Thursday. A special cachet commemorating the flight will be placed on each letter.

SHORT PREDICTS EARLY END FOR THE NEW DEAL

Illinois Republican Rally Attacks Spending.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Congressman Dewey Short of Missouri, addressing a Republican congressional district rally at the auditorium of the Elks' club here tonight, urged voters of Illinois to send to Washington congressmen who will put an end to the orgy of New Deal spending.

Tonight's meeting followed a district rally held during the day at Harrisburg, one of a series of meetings in charge of former Congressman William E. Hull of Peoria. It was announced that the gathering would not endorse any candidate for office. The sole purpose of these district meetings is to arouse interest in the rehabilitation of congress and obtaining for Illinois competent representation there.

Four Counties Aid Move.

Delegations from the counties of Sangamon, Christian, Macoupin, and Montgomery counties attended. C. J. Doyle of Springfield, presided. In addition to the address of Congressman Short, speeches were delivered by State Representatives Hugh Green of Jacksonville, and William J. Lawler of Springfield, by Judge Benjamin S. Deboice.

Congressman Short's speech predicted early collapse of the New Deal. "I do not believe," he said, "that prosperity will be restored by spending money we haven't got, or by placing a mortgage upon our children.

"When the frantic moments of alarm are passed and the hour of hysteria is over, social regimentation will cease and paternalism will end.

For Strong Congress.

"Men will then be sent to congress with a bone instead of a rubber band up their backs, for even a hill-billy knows that Santa Claus will one day turn shylock to exact his pound of flesh.

"Though the citizenry of Illinois may not be members of the Brain Trust, they have enough sense to know that Santa Claus really does not come down the chimney the night before Christmas and that all the Easter eggs are not laid by bunny rabbit."

FARMER DIES SHOCKING CORN.

HALT SCALPERS' FAKE 'SALE' OF CHOICE SEATS TO HEAR ROOSEVELT

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The "sale" of choice seats to hear President Roosevelt speak here on Nov. 29 collapsed today.

After receiving reports that ticket sellers were getting $2 apiece for reserved seats, the committee arranging for the President's visit broadcast a warning that holders of the fake tickets were out their money since there would be no charge to hear Mr. Roosevelt.

Reports of a brisk sale of the so-called "reserved seats" were received by the committee. In some instances pictures and souvenirs were being sold with tickets thrown in gratis.

Mr. Roosevelt speaks at Grant field, Georgia Tech's athletic stadium, during a "homecoming" celebration in his honor.

GIRL STUDENT, 15, HER FATHER AND A BOY MISSING

Dolores Bauer, 15 years old, a freshman at the Morton High school in Cicero, was sought by police last night after her mother, Mrs. Helen Bauer Lange, 1323 South Ridgeland avenue, Berwyn, reported she had been missing since Friday. At the home of Dolores' father, Arthur Bauer, 509 South Elgin avenue, in Forest Park, police learned that Bauer departed Friday after selling his furniture. Neighbors said he was accompanied by his second wife, Dolores, and Leroy Stroemer, 16 years old, 436 Des Plaines avenue, Forest Park, a sophomore at the Proviso High school in Maywood, who also is reported missing by his parents.

DROWNS TRYING TO BOARD BOAT.

WPA ADDS TO LIST OF ARTICLES IT IS TO MANUFACTURE

Responds Thus to Protest of Private Business.

With the machinery geared up to produce thousands of women's dresses, the federal Works Progress administration laid plans yesterday for the manufacture of layettes, sheets, pillow cases, underwear, children's school clothing, and some comforts. Washington has approved the expenditure of $1,500,000 on seamstress projects for Chicago and seventy-four other Illinois cities.

Announcement of the articles whose manufacture will be added to dressmaking in WPA's venture into the sewing business followed bluntly on the heels of a protest by garment manufacturers. On Friday a group of Chicago apparel makers telegraphed to Harry L. Hopkins, national chief of WPA, that the 83,000 dozen dresses included in the output for this state were the equivalent of work for 500 women in private industry.

Deny Impairing Business.

Ralph H. Burke, deputy WPA administrator for Illinois, and Mrs. Mary G. Moon, state director of women's activities, insisted that private industry would not be affected by the program.

"This work was requested by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission," declared Burke. "Garments will be distributed by the commission to persons who otherwise would not have money to buy them."

Burke said that WPA would not manufacture mattresses. Last year the IERC manufactured 78,000 mattresses over the protests of private industry.

Mrs. Moon predicted that 1,200 Chicago seamstresses would start flashing their needles this week. The project will be carried on in the Home for Friendless at 51st street and Vincennes avenue. More than four million yards of goods have been requisitioned for the state according to Mrs. Moon, and approximately 2,000 seamstresses will go to work in other Illinois cities.

WPA has on hand $140,000 worth of cotton and raw wool, the gift of the IERC, and this will be turned into comforts. Manufacturers protested in vain last year when the IERC put out 300,000 comforts.

A proposal that the city seek $114,800 WPA funds to employ 102 lawyers and 20 stenographers and clerks in special legal work was presented to Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes yesterday by H. E. Baker, Chicago attorney and head of the Lawyers Security League of Illinois. The league urged that needy lawyers be given work as public defenders, as conciliators, or masters in chancery, in Municipal court cases, and as legal experts in special assessment cases.

The federal Public Works administration [PWA], which obtains funds as WPA does from the four billion dollar congressional appropriation for shifting relief clients to "made" work, broke ground yesterday on the first government housing project for Chicago.

The project, to be known as Jane Addams Houses, will provide 305 apartments in the vicinity bounded by Vernon park, Gilpin place, and Lytle, Taylor, and Sibley streets.

BAR TO HEAR FREE SERVICE CHARGES TODAY

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The professional ethics and grievance committee of the American Bar association will consider tomorrow a Georgian's complaint that the American Liberty league offered free legal services to any one in defense of his constitutional rights.

The liberty league has stated it offered to defend only those persons who lacked funds to employ counsel. The question was raised by Carl N. Davie of Atlanta.

Dean Herschel W. Arant of the Ohio State university law school, secretary of the committee, postponed discussion yesterday because two committee members were absent.

St. Louisans Expect U. S. Aid on Jefferson Memorial

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—An executive order authorizing federal aid on the $30,000,000 Jefferson Memorial on the St. Louis waterfront failed to reach the White House today. Mayor Bernard F. Dickman and City Counselor Charles M. Hay of St. Louis said, however, they were confident of early favorable action.

RELIEF PROJECT HAS TWO BOSSES TO EACH WORKER

Million Jobs Shy of December 1 Goal.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—WPA will have to supply almost all of the additional 1,000,000 jobs which must be provided between now and Dec. 1, or in two weeks, if the $4,000,000,000 work relief program is to reach its goal of 3,500,000 employés by that date.

This was revealed today when Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, was informed by the Resettlement administration that peak employment under its $240,000,000 program could not be reached until May because of winter construction difficulties. Army engineers already have made a similar report, and delay on several northern PWA projects is held likely by officials.

Coincidentally, officials of the Resettlement administration disclosed its administrative force numbers more than twice as many persons as the relief workers hired to date, and that the amount paid for directing is about five times as great as the sum paid relief workers.

Tugwell Spending $1,750,000 Monthly.

Checking up, in view of President Roosevelt's order that budgetary appropriations for next year must be drastically cut, officials found that Administrator Tugwell has hired 12,089 persons to provide jobs for only 5,072 relief workers. The salaries of this administrative staf, spread out in eighteen Washington buildings and the field, total $1,750,000 monthly, as compared with about $300,000 paid the relief workers.

This staf, in addition to having 104 automotive units taken over from other government agencies, has bought eight passenger cars, all but one of the most expensive type, for use in Washington, in addition to four station wagons, twelve trucks and one motorcycle.

5,000 Bosses; 2,289 Workers.

Secretary Ickes also has a large administrative staf for PWA, it was disclosed, with about 5,000 at work at headquarters and in the field, for a program which eventually is expected to put about 1,000,000 persons to work, but now employs only 2,289 on relief jobs.

WPA, which is bearing the brunt of the job load, has a large staf in the field, but employs only 2,240 persons at Washington headquarters at a cost of $277,626 monthly.

Against the sizeable number of relief clients whom Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes will employ, Mr. Tugwell's aides said today that when the Resettlement administration reaches peak employment in May, only 138,000 relief workers will be on the job, for each twelve of whom there will be one administrative official.

$140,000,000, But Few Jobs.

They declared, however, that about $140,000,000 of their relief funds would be spent upon a "useful" program which would require virtually no relief workers. This is the rural rehabilitation program under which 350,000 farm families already are receiving loans and grants to put them back in sound financial condition, and under which an additional 175,000 will be helped.

About 30,000 persons will be employed by Mr. Tugwell's organization with the $31,000,000 set aside for the construction of "satellite" cities in "green belt" areas outside of large cities, these officials added.

INCREASE WAGES TO SPEED WORK ON WPA EXECUTIVES' HOUSES

Eastport, Me., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Wages of all laborers engaged in building the $36,000,000 Passamaquoddy bay project were raised to the prevailing hourly scale today as a 45 day state of construction emergency was declared.

Lieut. Col. Philip B. Fleming, construction chief, said Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, had exempted "Quoddy" from the relief scale until Jan. 1 so the village for 1,200 administrative staf members could be completed before severely cold weather.

The new scale will pay common labor 40 cents an hour, intermediate labor 55 cents an hour, and skilled labor 75 cents an hour. The new scale will more than double wages.

Until the emergency ends, said Col. Fleming, workers may work eight hours a day and six or seven days a week.

FIND RECOVERY WELL ON WAY IN HOOVER REGIME

G. O. P. Survey Based on U. S. Official Figures.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—That the American banking system was sound under the Hoover administration and recovery was under way in March, 1933, before the New Deal program became effective, is argued by the Republican national committee in an attack today on the New Deal.

"The rapidity of recovery probably was without parallel during late March to July, 1933," the article said. "This statement is based upon official statistics furnished by various government departments and bureaus.

Gains "Almost Incredible."

"The index numbers in the accompanying table show that beginning with the reopening of the banks in March, 1933, and continuing without recession or intermission until late in July or the first of August, there was an almost incredible improvement in agricultural, industrial, commercial, financial, construction, and transportation activities.

"[All figures, with the exception of farm purchasing power and farm prices, are taken from the monthly publication of the department of commerce, known as survey of current business. PARDON FOR OFFICER INDICTED IN KENTUCKY POLLS DISTURBANCES

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 16.—(AP)—With two pardons, Gov. Ruby Laffoon today saved Adj. Gen. H. H. Denhardt from trial on two indictments that followed the National Guard occupation of Harlan county during the August primary.

The indictments charged the adjutant general with criminal contempt for disobeying a temporary order of Harlan Circuit court forbidding troops to act as peace officers in the county, and with using force unlawfully to obtain possession of the ballot boxes of Cloversplint precinct in Harlan county during the primary.

The pardons ordered Gen. Denhardt "forever acquitted, released and discharged" of any other indictments or warants that might result from any action taken by him while acting under orders of the governor.

DOCTORS STUDY WAYS TO APPLY SECURITY LAWS

Methods by which physicians can take an active part in administration of medical provisions of the social security act occupied secretaries of the American Medical association during the closing session of their annual conference yesterday in the Palmer house. During discussion of the act from the conference floor, physicians warned that unless the medical societies watched the situation, appointment of incompetent administrators will result.

"Administration of the act is to be turned over to the state and local communities," Dr. W. W. Bauer of Chicago, director of the bureau of health and public instruction for the A. M. A., told the secretaries. "It is here that the local A. M. A. chapters can best step in and have a voice in the administration. One of the great the act in operation, persons not dangers is that in the haste to place qualified as practitioners of medicine may be appointed."

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association, urged in an address that the association make a survey of all medical organizations and publish the facts about them. "At present there are 135 national organizations appealing to medical men to join and pay dues," Dr Fishbein said. "This field is overdeveloped."

Frank B. Kellogg Moves Into Hoover's Old Home

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state and co-author of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact, is moving today into Herbert Hoover's old home on S street. "Just seeking a milder climate than St. Paul," was the reason the former secretary and his wife gave to friends here for their return to the national capital.

FRENCH CEMENT USE IS STOPPED ON NEW SCHOOLS

New York Ends Practice; More Steel Protests.

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—No more French or other imported cement will be used in the construction of twenty-five new public schools of New York City under Public Works administration. That was announced today by Walter C. Martin, superintendent of school buildings for the board of education.

Mr. Martin's announcement followed quickly the complaints of American cement manufacturers that federal funds designed, primarily to give jobs to the unemployed were going to foreign cement makers.

Opposed to Nazi Steel.

Meanwhile, Samuel Untermeyer, president of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights, indicated that that organization might start suit under the anti-dumping customs laws to block the purchase of German steel for the new Triborough bridge, under another PWA contract.

Mr. Martin declared a search of his records had disclosed that no French or other imported cement was at present being used in the construction of any of the 25 new public school buildings.

"I will make it stronger and say that none will be used," Mr. Martin declared. "We haven't used any French cement for some time, and then I believe we used it in only two or three school buildings because it is a nonstaining cement, suitable for setting stone work. However, American nonstaining cement is just as good. The contractors probably preferred the French cement because the bags contain a larger quantity than the bags used by American manufacturers."

Explains Factor of Price.

Asked what the board of education would do if the contractor insisted on purchasing French cement under his contract and a PWA ruling of last June 15, which permits the contractor to buy foreign materials if he can show a differential of 15 per cent and cost is more than $10,000 and 25 per cent where the cost is less than $10,000. Mr. Martin declared that the amount of French cement involved was so small he believed there would be no difficulty in having the contractor comply with board of education instructions.

Foreign Steel Also Issue.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—While the federal trade commission awaited orders to investigate hints of collusion in American steel contract bids, evidence appeared today that the controversy over use of foreign materials on PWA jobs might widen.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes both have said the commission would investigate what they called apparent evidence of collusion. German steel was bought for two PWA jobs, resulting in sharp protest by U. S. labor and industrial groups.

Both Display Interest.

While a United States Chamber of Commerce spokesman manifested "interest" in foreign purchases, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said Ickes' new regulations on foreign purchases "will meet the situation in a constructive way. If the ruling is applied to future PWA jobs foreign materials will be prevented from entering the country for these jobs. There is no justification for collusion, however. That is just as bad as foreign imports."

John M. Redpath, chief of research of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said "not only German steel, but other things are involved." He would not say what the other things are.

NOTED LAWYERS MEET TO ADJUST U. S. COURT RULES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Headed by George W. Wickersham and William D. Mitchell, two former attorneys general of the United States, a committee of distinguished lawyers met at the request of the Supreme court today to formulate uniform rules for the federal courts in trial of law cases.

Behind closed doors at the Supreme court the lawyers worked to evolve a single system of rules for cases in equity and actions at law in district courts all over the nation.

The conference was the result of an order handed down by the court last June, which directed that in view of an act of congress, passed June 19, 1914, new rules should be laid down.

The steps toward reform are necessary because federal courts have in many cases used rules in law cases along the lines laid down for state courts in the states where the district courts are situated. As a result, lawyers going from a federal court in one state to another have been confused over the lack of uniformity.

White House Occupants Dodge Remodeling Crew

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt related today that she was having trouble these days getting around in her own household. What with electricians and others doing kitchen remodeling all over the place, she said the Roosevelts were requested to stay away as much as they could because the housekeeper would like to have the White House as empty as possible. So sociability won't really get into full swing there until after the President returns from his Thanksgiving holiday at Warm Springs, Ga.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Two young men grabbed Mrs. N. L. Rose's purse early today, threw it into an alley after taking $80. Her jewels, valued at $3,000, were found untouched in the purse.

DUNHAM DEPARTS TODAY TO ASK U.S. $6,000,000 LOAN

Money Promised by Hopkins for Park Projects.

Robert J. Dunham, president of the Chicago park district, will depart today on the Capitol limited for Washington to open negotiations for the sale of $6,000,000 in park bonds to federal agencies, the funds to be used on park projects which are being planned by the federal Works Progress administration.

Robert B. Upham, city controler, and Oscar Hewitt, commissioner of public works, set out for Washington yesterday and will join Mr. Dunham there tomorrow at a conference of mayors over which Mayor Kelly is to preside. Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, will address the mayors. Mr. Kelly has been in Washington since Friday urging the approval of the park requests.

Relies on Hopkins' Promise.

The bonds to be sold by Dunham were authorized at the last regular session of the Illinois general assembly on the condition that the funds derived from the sale of the bonds would be used only as the park's contribution to the WPA projects. Mr. Dunham asserted that when park district WPA projects originally were submitted he received Hopkins' promise that federal agencies, probably the Reconstruction Finance corporation, would purchase the bonds.

The park district has had $53,864,478 in park WPA projects approved, of which $8,878,191.44 is to be paid by the district, the remainder being an outright grant from the government. According to Dunham the parks must pay a share of park WPA work because the proportion allotted to wages is less than the WPA requirements.

Mr. Dunham said yesterday that he had received notification of Washington's approval of several more park WPA projects. The approved projects include the landscaping of Burnham park [with the exception of the area leased for the lake front exposition], listed at $2,145,105; the park district "white collar" recreation project, $4,000,922; a complete trafic survey of park boulevards, $690,000; and another "white collar" project — compilation of statistical data on the superseded small park districts—$674,000.

With the announcement that additional park projects had been approved came the notice that plans for a free art gallery in the Washington park administration building will have to be set aside to provide room for the army of white collar workers, technicians, and engineers involved in carrying out the new undertakings.

Thousands Visit First Show.

Park district officials, with the Art institute, had planned an art exhibition at Washington park similar to the free art exhibit that opened at the Garfield park administration building last Sunday.

Seven thousand nine hundred visitors attended the Garfield park galleries last week. Plans are going forward to have a similar exhibit at the Lincoln park administration building opening about Dec. 15.

EARLY SHOPPERS FOR CHRISTMAS TO MAKE SAVING

"Realizing that Christmas prices this year will be higher than ever before as a result of the rising raw goods markets, the Boston Store advised its buyers some time ago to prepare for an earlier Christmas Netcher day," H. G. Hart, vice president and general manager of the store, declared yesterday. Consequently, he said, the buyers were busy in all the principal markets during the late summer giving advance orders for Christmas merchandise. This early buying resulted in lower prices, and tomorrow all Chicagoland will have an opportunity to take advantage of the savings effected, Mr. Hart added.

"A considerable additional force has been added for this sales event," he said. "Adults as well as children will enjoy our program of entertainment in the toy department this year. Many of the toys are unique. Toys are being made with an eye to the trend of the times—streamlining and educational value as well as entertainment value."

WINS DIVORCE

MRS. MILDRED RICHARDSON HILL.
[Associated Press Photo.]

Santa Ana, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Divorce of Walter J. Hill, son of the late James J. Hill, railroad magnate, and Mrs. Mildred Richardson Hill was disclosed today by Superior Judge G. K. Scovel. Mrs. Hill was awarded $25,000 in securities and $300 a month alimony.

OLSON ATTACKS MAJOR PARTIES; TALKS TO YOUTH

Wants Radical Group for 1940 Race.

New York, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota tonight asked the youth of the nation to join a third party movement to bring about a new social order.

"We need youth to help make over this sick and palsied structure in which we try to live, into a better and finer social order," he pleaded. "Enlist with us in the American Commonwealth Political federation."

Gov. Olson hopes to form that party by 1940.

Youth Understands Failure.

"The word 'fail,'" he said, "has been added to the lexicon of youth—a lexicon no longer bright, but torn and tattered and abridged until today it contains little save the synonyms for failure, for pessimism, for discouragement, for despair."

The governor estimated there were approximately 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 between the ages of 16 and 25 now unable to obtain work.

"Youth today has nothing to hope for by aligning itself with either of the older parties," Gov. Olson added. "Fundamentally, there is no difference between them, because both believe in the present order, both uphold and defend it.

Continues His Attack.

"Our opponents talk to you about American institutions, but the institutions they mean are not the American institutions of free speech and assembly, and the revolutionary and constitutional right to change government—they are the 'institutions of Rockefeller, of Mellon, of Gary, of Standard Oil, Aluminum Company of America, and United States Steel corporation."

U. S. HASTENS 16 SUBMARINES FOR ITS TREATY NAVY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—On the eve of a naval conference at which much will be said about submarines, Secretary Swanson was informed today that work was being hastened on five of the navy's sixteen new submarines. They are to be commissioned next year.

The navy's building program will give the United States full treaty strength by 1936 in battleships, cruisers, and aircraft carriers, and in submarines and destroyers by 1942. The limitations set by the Washington and London treaties expire in 1936.

The United States now has eighty-four submarines of a total of 70,020 tons, figuring forty-one ships that are over the thirteen year age limit specified in the treaties.

Great Britain and Japan, the other chief sea powers concerned, have smaller total submarine tonnage than the United States, but a larger percentage of newer ships. Great Britain has fifty-six submarines of 56,209 tons and Japan fifty-seven of 68,349 tons.

Manufacturer Will Talk on Presidential Campaign

Sterling Morton, vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, will discuss the approaching presidential campaign at a luncheon of the Chicago chapter of the University of Nebraska Alumni association on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers' department store tomorrow. Attorney Jean Cobbey is president of the chapter.

HOAN DEMANDS U. S. KEEP RELIEF LOAD OFF CITIES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee today branded "absolutely untrue" any statements that states and cities now are in a position to take over the relief burden from the federal government.

As president of the United States conference of mayors, the Socialist who has been mayor of Milwaukee since 1916 headed a delegation of more than 100 municipal executives arriving in the capital for a three day discussion of relief and other problems.

In an interview, Hoan commented sharply on a statement in the periodical review of the chamber of commerce of the United States, which said:

"There are strong intimations that the administration intends to insist that the states and their subdivisions carry the burden of relief in the future. Improvement in the economic position of the states and municipalities is such that they are fully capable of bearing a larger load."

Cites Ignorance on Subject.

After a derisive snort, the veteran mayor said there are few agencies "which know less about civic affairs than chambers of commerce."

"That's true, not only in Milwaukee, but in every city," he said. "Since the depression, merchants have had to drop out of the chambers because they couldn't pay their dues, while public utilities have doubled their memberships.

"It may be that some time in the future, cities and states will be able to care for people who can't work. But they don't have funds even for 'unemployables' right now. The federal government must give them time to adjust budgets and make plans.

"There are only two alternatives in this relief problem. These people must be fed, or they can be permitted to starve. But don't forget that when animals locked in a barn begin starving, they're likely to kick the barn down. Is there any reason to expect different behavior from people?"

Relief to Be Chief Subject.

Paul Betters, executive director of the mayors' organization, said relief will be the chief subject before the sessions which begin Monday. Reports from mayors indicate, he said, that 20 per cent of the nation's urban population still is on relief rolls.

The first discussion of relief will come Monday morning when Mayor F. H. La Guardia of New York, a member of the Works Progress allotment board, will report on progress of the work relief drive. Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, will talk Tuesday on "Looking Ahead at Relief."

Mayor Hoan said he intends to present two proposals to the convention. One would request congress to enact legislation for expanding low cost home building through municipal credit. The other would seek an amendment to the social security act to permit municipal employés to share in old age pension plans in which the federal government would match local contributions up to $15 a month.

THREATEN GIRL, 4; SLUG SISTER, 20; LOCK UP 7 IN RAID

Seven persons were locked in a refrigerator by robbers who slugged Miss Harriet Gladek, 20 years old, as they held up her father's butcher shop at 4301 West 47th street yesterday. Miss Gladek was injured when she moved to aid her sister, Dorothy, 4 years old, whom the three men threatened to torture when they were unable immediately to find money. When they got $40 in cash and $60 in checks they fled. Those imprisoned were the two girls, their parents, and three customers. After twenty minutes they released themselves and called the police.

150 Miles at Sea, He Tries to Hold Up Ship Paymaster

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The fact that the U. S. S. California was 150 miles out to sea did not deter George Albert Boyog, 20, a sailor, from threatening Paymaster Lieut. W. F. Trien with a gun and demanding funds from the ship's safe, it was charged today when the California anchored here. Trien, it is said, engaged Boyog in a scuffle and the seaman was later overpowered and placed in the brig. He faces a trial here before a navy board of inquiry.

DISPUTE 'FIRING' MARRIED WOMEN AT COTTON MILLS

Labor Official, Priest Debate Problem.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Employment of married women in the Pequot mills was defended tonight by a union leader on the ground their husbands were unable to earn enough to support their families.

This view was presented by Wilfred T. Levesque, business agent of the Independent Sheeting Workers' union. He has charged that the mills, one of New England's largest cotton textile plants, threatened discharge of women employés who married or had children.

Opposes Employing Wives.

Mgr. John B. La Bossiere, 70 year old pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, today supported such discrimination. He asserted employment of married women was "bad basically; it is bad morally and religiously, and I doubt very much if in the end it brings any great financial benefit."

Mgr. La Bossiere said that he would like to see married women barred from industry throughout the state.

"Any movement to have married women attend to home duties would be a vital step to restoring the old time American home life," he said. "It would be an important step toward curbing crime . . . . and toward closing some of the divorce mills. . . ."

Union Official's View.

"Women are in the mills," Levesque said, "because their husbands are not earning enough to support their families."

"When the strike was settled by arbitration, wages were cut, he said, an average of 11.2 per cent and "now some of the men are getting as little as $16 a week."

"That is not a living wage, and that's why wives have had to work," he asserted. The Pequot mills employ about 2,326 workers, of whom approximately 70 per cent are women, 55 per cent of whom are married, union statistics show.

HURRICANE TOLL ABOVE THAT OF WAR IN AFRICA

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Tropical hurricanes have taken more lives this year than the reported toll of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

An Associated Press survey showed today that storms had caused more than 1,600 deaths along a far-flung area from Honduras to Newfoundland. Property damage ran into millions.

The first hurricane devastated part of the Florida keys and cost more than 400 lives. At Craig key the barometer showed the lowest reading ever recorded in the western hemisphere—26.38.

Late in October more than 1,000 persons were reported to have been drowned in Haiti when drenching rains of the fringe of a terrific storm caused floods there. Two lost their lives in Jamaica, 70 in Honduras, and 5 in Cuba as a result of the same storm.

The last of the cycle of storms swept the Bahamas and the southern part of Florida. Nineteen deaths were attributed to it.

During the first disturbance, in late summer, the storms were felt with severity as far north as Newfoundland, off which coast forty seamen lost their lives.

Constipated?
DO AS DOCTORS DO
For Years Over 50,000 Doctors Have Used or Recommended
PLUTO WATER
for Quicker, Safer Relief

When a doctor is constipated, what does he take for relief? That ought to prove beyond question how safe, how gentle, how effective a laxative is.

Now here's an amazing fact! For years, over 50,000 doctors have used or recommended Pluto Water. For they know, from personal experience, that Pluto is the sure way to eliminate dangerous accumulated poisons. They know it is not a habit-forming medicine. They know its action is gentle and quick. . .

What Doctors Say

For instance, Dr. C. E. B. of Indiana says: "Have prescribed Pluto for years." Then Dr. W. M. of Michigan advises: "Pluto is the only laxative." And Dr. L. R. E. of Ohio says: "By taking Pluto Water mornings, I always stay in good shape."

Your own doctor, too, will tell you there is nothing better. And—will warn you against habit-forming drugs of all kinds. That's why you also can always depend on this famous laxative.

So, the next time you are constipated, do as doctors do. Follow the gentle "water way" to relief. Take the tasteless, non-habit-forming dose—1/5 Pluto with 4/5 glass hot water. In one hour or less you'll get relief. And what a remarkable difference it makes!

Remember, too, Pluto Water is simply a saline laxative mineral water bottled at famous French Lick Springs, Indiana. All drug stores have it. Two sizes—25c and 50c. Two hundred million bottles of Pluto have already been used—millions more each year. One of the most economical, most effective laxatives you can buy! Get some today.

MRS. ROOSEVELT DISCUSSES RULE ON COMMUNISM

Capital School Teachers Are Affected.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt commented today on the ruling which bars District of Columbia school teachers from teaching or advocating communism to their pupils.

Controler General McCarl yesterday ruled that under the law no teacher in the capital's public schools may draw a salary unless he or she signs a pledge that communism will not be taught nor advocated in the classroom or out of it. The ruling created an uproar among the 4,000 teachers who have resented any curb put upon their instruction.

Talks at Press Conference.

At her press conference today, Mrs. Roosevelt mildly ridiculed the ruling. She pictured a teacher as being unable to tell students anything about Russia except that it was twice the size of the United States and inhabited by a people called Russians.

"If some bright child should ask, 'What kind of a government do the Russians live under?' the teacher would have to answer: 'My dear child, I can't answer you,'" Mrs. Roosevelt commented.

Asked to define the phrase "to teach," Mrs. Roosevelt said: "I think it means to tell people about something. I do not think it means to advocate anything. I teach or tell my child that if he puts his fingers on the stove he will be burned—I do not advocate for him to put his fingers on the stove to have them burned."

Disclaims Pacifist Title.

"Any sincere and reasonable advocate of peace has so many thinking people with him that I hardly think you could pick out any one individual and set him above any others," she said.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, today announced that McCarl's ruling would not be interpreted as restricting the teachers from instructing students in the principles of communism. A school board attorney ruled that a teacher might explain the facts of communism without commenting upon them either favorably or unfavorably and not be considered as "teaching" communism.

PRAISE NEW DEAL AS DEMOCRATIC WOMEN CONVENE

Speakers at the state conference of the Democratic women's organization, under the auspices of the women's division of the party's national committee, held at the Chicago Woman's club praised the New Deal yesterday because "it is doing the things that women are eager to see done."

Mrs. James H. Wolfe of Washington, director of the women's division of the national committee, urged that women identify themselves with the Democratic party organization and asserted that women can now find the social ideals which they have long sponsored being put into effect by government agencies.

Mrs. Wolfe said that the national government has lent, reloaned, and given to Illinois $1,097,929,206 during the depression, while collecting from the state internal revenue amounting in three years to $490,851,867.

Miss Mary W. Dewson, chairman of the general advisory committee of the national women's division, praised the administration for what it has done for every class. More than 300 women said to represent all Illinois counties attended the conference which closed with a banquet last night.

URGES PATRIOTIC GROUPS TO FIGHT FOR BASIC LAW

Richard F. Locke of Glen Ellyn, commander in chief of the Sons of Union Veterans, urged last night in a speech in the Hotel Sherman that patriotic societies combine their efforts to oppose nullification of the constitution through the passage of laws "known in advance to be unconstitutional."

Mr. Locke spoke at a dinner given by his organization, the G. A. R. and the Daughters of Union Veterans. In the course of his address he suggested that the descendants of confederate and Union veterans might well battle together for fair dealing and constitutional rights.

"The issue [nullification] was settled once in blood," he declared. "It must not be permitted to be opened again."

Another speaker at the meeting was Prof. Charles M. Thompson of the college of commerce, University of Illinois.

IOWANS SCORE ON MUSSOLINI IN HONORING BARD

Italians Brave His Frown to Join Horace Memorial.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

University of Iowa has scored off Mussolini.

The big bravo was, and still is, against Italy's participation in the great jubilee commemorating on Dec. 8 the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Horace, Roman satirist, who wrote many piquant pieces about persons suffering from ingrowing ego.

MISS FLORENCE BRUBAKER.
[Karmen-Winger Photo.]

Months ago the university launched its plans for the celebration. Response in the United States and from South America has been amazing. Within recent months the university's press has had to print 85,000 four page to eight page leaflets to meet demands by high schools, colleges, universities, libraries, and women's clubs for program material and study courses. For every state in the Union chairmen were appointed—among them Miss Florence Brubaker of Oak Park High school's faculty, who is directing Illinois' plans for the jubilee.

A Hard Working Group.

Those chairmen did not sit around and bask in easy "publicity." They really worked, supervising hundreds of preliminary essay and translation contests, judging thousands of papers, and sending to public schools and clubs bales of literature, among it charming little comedies on Horatian themes which still can be obtained for a few cents—acting rights included—from Miss Brubaker and her aids.

But still there was no response from Italy, where Horace lived and sang.

On mere chance of a response and more as a friendly hail, Prof. Roy Flickinger, head of Iowa university's Latin department and originator of the jubilee, sent leaflets to his old friend Prof. André Horvath of the University of Budapest.

Response from the city on the Danube, which is more than sixty times as large as the seat of the university that overlooks the Iowa river, was prompt.

Prof. Horvath laid the Iowa material before the minister of education, and that functionary issued an official decree that every secondary school, college, and university in Hungary hold Horatian celebrations in December.

New and Old World Aid.

The republics of Ecuador, Chile, and Argentina sent their enthusiastic responses to Dr. Eugene Gilmore, Iowa's president. The Scandinavian kingdoms came in under the direction of Prof. Axel Boethius of the University of Göteborg. So did Spain and Finland, cheerfully acknowledging that Dr. Flickinger and his American confreres were their inspiration. France and England have also been in touch with our middle west, corn-fed Horatians.

At last Italy awoke, and then came out a story of how politics, with whiskers two thousand years long, still function in the old world.

Mussolini plans for 1937 a celebration of the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Emperor Augustus Cæsar, a dictator who made dictatorship stick for nearly half a century and who is the patron saint of the present Fasciti régime.

Mussolini wishes no Horatian celebration to take the edge off his Augustan jubilee of two years hence. Besides, Horace, although he later became Augustus' buddy, was a republican and had fought against Augustus and Mark Antony at Philippi—where he had to run for his life.

Thumbs down, therefore, on the Horace jubilee.

Middle West Wins Honors.

But the Catholic university in Milan received word of Iowa university's plans. Those northern Italians do not take Mussolini with complete pusillanimity. Milanese scholars wrote to Dr. Flickinger—and they were enthusiastic to some purpose. Pretty soon the Instituto di Studi Romani in Rome became active. By its director, Prof. Galassi Paluzzi, plans for a Horatian jubilee in Italy were officially made.

Score again for the University of Iowa.

So wonderfully do the threads of history interweave—from the banks of the Tiber to the banks of the Iowa and from the first century B. C. to the twentieth century A. D.!

Meanwhile Miss Brubaker, Dr. Flickinger, and their colleagues are "nearly swamped" with requests for material. "They come," said the Illinois chairman, who may be addressed in care of the high school, Oak Park, Ill., "from the most varied sources—high school students, club chairmen of program committees, libraries, and professional men—and we try to give specific suggestions meeting individual situations. We provide material for young people, for grownups, for hurried readers, and for serious students. There are eighteen divisional chairmen scattered throughout Illinois, and local juries have read and sifted 1,600 manuscripts submitted in the Horatian essay and translation contests."

Milan Is Enthusiastic.

In two already decided national translation contests for schools other than universities the middle west has won most of the honors.

Entries in the contest for the University of Cincinnati's prize of $1,000 will not close until the anniversary of Horace's birth, Dec. 8. That prize is anonymously offered by one of the most distinguished families in the United States, and the contest requires the submission of [1] a translation of any poem by Horace; [2] an essay on Horace and Augustus; [3] an original Latin ode in some Horatian meter. It is also required that the $1,000 be spent on travel in Italy and Greece.

The Library of Congress is making a checklist of all the editions and translations of Horace and of books about him in public collections in this country. It will be published at the expense of the Friends of the Classics at Mills college, California.

Incidentally its launching of the "Bimillennium Horatianum" has done the University of Iowa more good with enlightened people and given it more prestige where prestige really counts than have all the football victories it ever won.

BRAZIL SENDS NEW ENVOYS TO CHICAGO

Guest at Party

Miss Alzira Vargas, 19 years old, daughter of President Getulio Vargas of Brazil, was among the guests last evening at the annual international night party given at the Edgewater Beach hôtel by Mr. and Mrs. William Dewey of Winnetka. The consuls of nineteen nations attended with their wives. Annibal de Saboia, Brazilian consul, took Miss Vargas and Miss Fazi Aranha, daughter of Ambassador Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil. Miss Vargas and Miss Fazi arrived by motor from Washington Friday night with Miss Lais Aranha, the envoy's sister. The three women are staying at the Drake hotel, but plan to depart on Tuesday for Detroit and Niagara.

NEW LANDSLIDE BATTERS WALLS OF AGED MONASTERY

GRENOBLE, France, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Continued rains today brought additional tons of rock and earth against the 11th century walls of the famous Carthusian monastery, already partly destroyed by landslides yesterday.

The inner cellars and laboratory where the liqueur chartreuse was manufactured for hundreds of years, are still intact, but the ancient walls guarding it are expected to give way at any moment.

Fearing that débris from the slide soon will roll into the bed of the mountain creek Guiers and form an artificial lake, gendarmes and 400 soldiers were working frantically to protect bridges over the stream.

Conductor Shot Working at Desk in His Caboose

J. R. Cook, 51 years old, of Freeport, Ill., a conductor for the Illinois Central railroad, was wounded yesterday afternoon by a bullet fired into the caboose of a west bound freight train at Harlem avenue south of 22d street in North Riverside. At the time Cook was at a desk working on his records. The bullet, of .22 caliber, lodged in his right shoulder. He was taken to the Edward Hines Jr. hospital for treatment.

If Purse Snatcher Returns Teeth All Will Be Forgiven

Mrs. Anna Kailer, 40 years old, 1238 Winnemac avenue, lost her purse containing $7 and her set of false teeth to a young purse snatcher in front of 1220 Winnemac avenue last night. Mrs. Kailer told police the boy could keep the money, as far as she was concerned, but she wished he'd return her teeth to her in time for dinner today.

NATIONAL CHIEF OF Y. W. C. A. TO BE IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16. — [Special.]—Mrs. Frederic M. Paist of Wayne, Pa., national president of the Y. W. C. A., will visit the Milwaukee Y. W. C. A. for the first time on next Friday afternoon. Accompanying her will be members of the national board of directors.

They will be guests of honor at a tea from 4 to 6 p. m. to be given by the Milwaukee board of directors.

Mrs. Paist, active in "Y" work since her college days, three times has served as national president. She is a sister of Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford university, who served as secretary of the interior under President Hoover, and also of Curtis D. Wilbur, judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals, who was secretary of the navy in President Coolidge's cabinet.

The visit of Charlotte T. Niven, one of the national board members accompanying Mrs. Paist, has particular local interest because Miss Niven is a sister of Mrs. Amos P. Wilder of Madison. She is an aunt of the distinguished author, Thornton Wilder. After a quarter century in the foreign service of the Y. W. C. A., Miss Niven recently returned to America to join the staf of the national board.

Another of the distinguished women serving on the national board who will come here is Mrs. Herbert Edwin Hawkes of New York, known professionally as Dr. Anna L. Rose. Mrs. Hawkes has been engaged in special research with the Carnegie foundation since 1929.

The chairman of the national research committee of the business and professional women's clubs, Miss Emma P. Hirth, associate general secretary of the national board, with headquarters in New York, also will be in the party.

Miss Margaret P. Mead of Plainfield, N. J., also is expected. She is a member of the world's council of the Y. W. C. A. as well as a member of the national board.

Legion Balks at Telephone; Objects to Wives' Calls

Beloit, Wis., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Members of Mead-Allen post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars flatly refused the offer of the women's auxiliary to install and maintain a telephone in the post's new "dugout," on the lower street level under the Central bridge.

"We don't want our wives calling us up and spoiling our fun," was their comment.

A sign bearing the words, "No women allowed," is included in the equipment ordered for the dugout.

TEXAS PREACHER CONFIDENT ON EVE OF SLAYING TRIAL

Insanity Defense Seen in Police Chief's Killing.

Houston, Tex., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—A tall, robust Baptist preacher of Orange, Tex., self-appointed crime crusader, was confident tonight that he would be vindicated for shooting to death his home town police chief.

The Rev. Edgar Eskridge, 40 years old, has been in jail here since last June awaiting trial on charges of murdering Police Chief Ed J. O'Reilly. The case was transferred here on change of venue. The trial opens Monday.

O'Reilly was talking with a friend on a street in Orange when, witnesses said, the minister drove up in his car, fired at the officer and sped away across the Sabine river bridge into Louisiana.

May Plead Insanity.

The minister, who affected cowboy mannerisms, carried weapons and accompanied officers on gambling raids, has contended that he was sane on the day of the killing. His attorney, J. J. Collins of Lufkin, Tex., who visited him in jail this week, contends the preacher was ill, "mentally and physically," and indicated the defense would be based on a plea of insanity.

The state is expected to demand the death penalty.

Before the slaying the Rev. Mr. Eskridge and O'Reilly were close friends. A year before the tragedy the officer and his family were baptized into the First Baptist church, of which the accused man was pastor.

Officers Assailed by Pastor.

For several months Eskridge had warred against liquor and gambling. He claimed to have a special ranger commission authorizing him to carry weapons. He denounced local officers for their attitude toward the criminal element.

Tuesday before the slaying the officer halted the minister's car and took his pistol from him. O'Reilly said Eskridge's commission had expired and made the preacher promise not to arm himself again.

Mrs. Eskridge said her husband brooded over the incident, but the two men did not meet again until the time of the slaying.

School Prank Fractures Vertebrae in Boy's Spine

Alton, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A schoolboy's prank put 12 year old Wendell Bode in a plaster cast today. As he prepared to sit down in school after reciting, another boy pulled Wendell's chair from under him and he fell to the floor, fracturing a vertebra in his spine. He will remain in the cast, which covers his entire back, from three to nine months.

SERGEANT SHOWS COURAGE—BUT HE FINDS GUN A TOY

When excited householders residing in the vicinity of Ashland and Bryn Mawr avenues started reporting to the Summerdale police last night that a gunman was frightening them, no chances were taken. Five motor squads were hurried to the scene.

First to arrive was the squad of Sergt. Edward Erickson. The gunman was waving his weapon and weaving on his feet.

"Everybody keep quiet," ordered Erickson. "He's drunk and I'll slip up on him."

The sergeant did just that. A flying tackle laid the miscreant low. The pistol fell from his hand and some one picked it up. It was just a wooden toy. At the station its owner, Gust Straw, 69 years old, 5421 North Damen avenue, was charged with disorderly conduct.

TRAIN KILLS RETIRED SAILOR.

Washington, Ind., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Rupert Davis, 28, retired U. S. sailor, was killed this afternoon when his truck was smashed by a B. & O. passenger train here at an unguarded crossing.

MEXICO HELPS U. S. GET COUNTERFEIT GANG IN MONTEREY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The United States secret service has broken up a counterfeiting ring in Monterey, Mexico, before it put a single fake bill into circulation.

The Mexican government, which has stringent anti-counterfeiting laws, aided the American operatives.

Its operatives, the secret service said today, joined the ring and seized three Mexicans, who gave the names of Juan Manuel Brondo, Arturo Serna Garza, and Saturnino Gonzalez. The agents also confiscated a complete counterfeiting outfit, including plates and five glass negatives, with which the gang was making $10 notes on the Federal Reserve bank of Dallas, Tex.

Cosmy Mongoria, Monterey city detective, also was taken into custody, but subsequently released. He will be a witness against the three, the secret service said.

HEART DISEASE

HEART DISEASE is responsible for more deaths than cancer, pneumonia, tuberculosis, or any other single disease. It claims one out of every six beyond the age of 40—and a vast number of young people.

Reduction in this enormous death rate can come only thru early recognition of the disease by complete and thorough diagnosis and treatment.

In this way, the progress of heart disease can often be checked and many useful and comfortable years added to the span of life.

A clinical examination by a physician specially trained in diseases of the heart—blood pressure determination, urine, blood and serological tests, plus X-ray of the heart and lungs and electrocardiogram $6 and few-of-a-kind items

Tomorrow . . . We place on Sale in this Great Store Wide SAMPLE SALE . . . The Pick of the Markets in Manufacturers' Samples. . . . As you may know, a sample is the show piece of the factory and is therefore a perfect example of its line. . . . We have combed the Markets for these items. . . . Some are only one or two of a kind or style . . . but every one is a real saving to you . . . for yourself, your family . . . or your home. . . . BE HERE EARLY MONDAY . . . as many items will not last throughout the morning. . . . Many are IDEAL for CHRISTMAS GIFTS. In some instances we have added merchandise from our own stocks and special purchases at corresponding savings. Sorry, no phone or mail orders because of limited quantities.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

YOUR STAKE IN THE NATIONAL DECISION.

Mr. Roosevelt, the brain trusters and their product, the New Deal, have made a political division of the American people different from any they ever knew before. The people still know one party as Republican and one as Democratic. Although that may mean that a man who was a Republican a few years ago can be a Republican today, it certainly does not hold good in the same way for the Democrats.

The division is between people who want the government to do things for them and people who, doing for themselves, must pay in the end for whatever the government does. In very hard times a certain number of people will need assistance. Even in normal times some people will need help. When the New Deal started it was said by its authors that everything was on an emergency basis. The doctrin of emergency has been discarded. The New Deal is now intended to be a permanent plan.

People who prefer to live by their own efforts have been in the majority in the United States. They have been in the majority during the hard times and they are a majority now. They have wanted a government which made the least interference in their lives. It has always seemed to them to be safer to live under a government which kept itself aloof from the normal activities of its citizens so far as it was humanly possible. The common observation has been that when a government came close to many personal affairs of the people the consequences were very unpleasant. No benefits compensating for the disagreeable experiences could be obtained.

Whenever men have had to consult government officials before they could safely engage in private affairs they have found the situation undesirable and the results unfortunate. Most people in this country prefer to lead such lives as they can, making their conditions the best they can by their own efforts, and they have built up a great material structure upon which rest their hopes. These people are the life insurance policy holders. They are the bank depositors, real estate owners, investors and possessors of equities, and holders of property rights. The structure is the work of generations and it has been relied upon by the majority of the people to provide for the education of children, the training of youth, the security of families and for advanced years. Most of the people of the United States are personally and directly interested in the preservation and continuance of this system of social security.

Everything the New Deal contemplates and undertakes is directed against the security which people have provided for themselves. The various acts of congress and the acts of the administration empowered by them tend to destroy the protections produced by the prudence, thrift, and industry of a majority of American citizens. Measures for the relief of debtors have depreciated the value of life insurance assets. Political attacks upon investments have diminished the returns which investors relied upon. The political management of currency has nullified the good faith of contract. The rapid increase of the public debt not only must result in great tax burdens but also is a constant threat of currency depreciation.

The object of these extraordinary measures, the country is told, is the development of a system of social security which will put the minority of the people, who for one reason or another suffer the most and get the least, in a better position. They will have more in good times and will suffer less in bad ones. The future will not be so terrifying to them and their wants will not so often go unsatisfied. It is assumed that modern society is too severe in its competitive conditions for a certain number of its members. They will never be able in a free play of free enterprise to keep themselves out of trouble. The collectivist naturally puts little emphasis on natural disqualifications and most emphasis on the rigors of the competitive system. It may be that the supporters of free enterprise take too little account of difficult situations and put too much emphasis on human frailties and human folly in explaining the misfortunes of the people who can't make the best use of a free society.

Whatever may be the assumptions, it is a great deal more likely that the New Deal unchecked will tear down a system of social security which has worked better than anything the world has ever seen before than that it will bring to the least successful elements of the population any security more reliable and dependable than they have heretofore experienced. The collectivist ideas prevailing in the Roosevelt policies do not promise the minority any assured competence, even if the great federal machine could be put in operation, and these theories do promise to destroy the competence of the majority. In trying to equalize security and well being by law the New Deal does not offer the minority a haven and it does threaten the majority with a disaster.

This is the real political division in the United States today. It has no resemblance to any political issue with which Americans now living have ever been familiar. The stake which the individual citizen has in the political decisions to be made within the next twelve months will become plainer as the campaign develops. Americans never had before so much dependent on their votes. Elections with which they have been familiar were approached with the knowledge that the country would survive, be the decision what it might. The country probably will survive the election of 1936. But it may be a different sort of a country for the people who survive with it. They may find if they make a mistake that they have ordered an entirely different kind of life for themselves and one which they will regret if they put the order through.

MR. LANSING'S WAR.

The war memoirs of Robert Lansing, published seven years after his death, must give many of his American readers the shivers. Mr. Lansing succeeded to William J. Bryan as secretary of state in Wilson's cabinet after the prince of peace with his numerous peace treaties fluttering about his head scurried from the department out of the way of the German submarines. Wilson had been urged by House to give the portfolio to Page, then in London, where he had so committed himself to the British side that he was totally disqualified for any cabinet post. The choice then fell on Lansing, who had been named secretary ad interim.

The new secretary, in an administration which was politically pointing itself for return to office on the "He Kept Us Out of War" slogan, devoted himself from the beginning to precipitating his country into that war. If this statement must be modified it is only to the extent that the secretary's maneuvers would be rendered unnecessary if the allies succeeded in forcing their peace on the central powers. In Mr. Lansing's own words "an even break," or in the historic words of his chief, "peace without victory," would not do. Germany in his opinion must be destroyed as an aggressive force, and if the consummation needed American armies, American armies must be prepared to undertake it.

In July, 1915, the secretary of state took the pains to set down in a memorandum for his own guidance a "consideration and outline of policies." In it he recites point by point the orthodox case against Germany. He concludes with this statement: "The remedy seems to me to be plain. It is that Germany must not be permitted to win this war or to break even, though to prevent it this country is forced to take an active part. This ultimate necessity must be constantly in our minds in all our controversies with the belligerents. American public opinion must be prepared for the time which may come when we will have to cast aside our neutrality and become one of the champions of democracy."

In 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was writing letters to the mothers of American boys, saying that his greatest service to his country would be found in his efforts to keep these boys safely in their American homes, the gentleman behind the top desk in the state department was treating every diplomatic issue which came before him with a view to preparing his countrymen to take up the allies' burden in France. It may be seriously doubted that in doing so he was betraying Mr. Wilson's inner purpose, although his chief was making a studious effort to link British invasion of neutral rights along with German. There was no even distribution of responsibility in Lansing's mind. The German offenses were to be engrossed and the British offenses treated comprehendingly and leniently.

Mr. Lansing was preparing opinion for war. His friends and his critics may disagree as to his wisdom without altering the fact that the chief cabinet officer of the American republic, a neutral in a most difficult situation, was using his office, his command of diplomatic negotiations, and his handling of the most delicate international relations to bring his country in on one side and against another if the case of the allies seemed to approach extremity.

Americans are inclined to absolve their government of doing what they suspect or know that military autocratic governments do, of using the people of a country as pawns in the execution of some Olympian policy of world politics. Mr. Lansing's memoirs may leave many citizens of the United States in serious doubt as to whether they can trust anybody. An exalted imagination in a high place may do a great deal under cover which is not discovered until years after the consequences of which it was the cause.

Editorial of the Day

CINCINNATI WAVERS.

[New York Times.]

Cincinnati is as a city set on a hill: good government has made it illustrious. For more than ten years its affairs have been conducted by a council elected by proportional representation and dominated by the so-called Charter group of practical reformers. The city boasts a city manager, the substitution of the merit system for spoils politics, a low tax rate and the highest credit rating of any American municipality. Two years ago the Charterites, after a race so close that under the complicated provisions of "P. R." it took eight days to complete the count, won five places out of the nine in the council. This year they apparently won four and the Republicans four, with the ninth seat going to an independent, Herbert S. Bigelow, whose life for the next two years should be a merry one. The Cincinnati Enquirer bewails Charterite losses, describes the new council as a "strange mixture of sterling public servants and blatant demagogues," and calls for a reconsideration of such devices as the nonpartisan ballot and proportional representation.

In Hamilton county, which contains Cincinnati, the Charter forces met with signal defeat in their efforts to do for the large unit what they had previously done for the city. As in New York more recently Ohio counties have been authorized by constitutional amendment to modernize their antiquated government structures. The Charterites proposed a legislative body of five county commissioners elected at large on a nonpartisan ballot, a prosecuting attorney similarly elected, and an independent county executive, selected by the commissioners, who should have the appointment of all department heads, with the administrative services put on a strict merit basis. Last summer Charles P. Taft, one of the Charter leaders, predicted the adoption of the new framework of county government in spite of Republican opposition. Actually it was defeated three to two. "Graft is dramatic, inefficiency dull," the Enquirer comments. Old line politicians hereabouts also are counting heavily on that ancient political maxim.

The Vanity of Liberals

BY LOUIS M. SEARS.

[Department of History, Economics, and Government, Purdue University.]

Four points of view appear to circumscribe opinion on any subject whatsoever of other than a purely factual nature. Many things, of course, are merely true or false, or so at least they seemed till Einstein threatened Newton. But in the major avenues of speculative thought, politics, economics, philosophy, religion, four opinions only are conceivable. A person is, perforce, a radical, a liberal, a conservative, or a reactionary in any of these fields, save as permutations enter and the fields are mixed. Conceivably one might be a religious radical, a political liberal, a philosophical conservative, and an economic reactionary. Conceivably, I say, for in practice the trend of mind that dominated thought in one of these great fields would likely carry over into one or more besides.

These points of view can be broken down into as many attitudes, which are instinctive rather than the fruit of reasoning. Nothing is more evident to the critical observer than the instinctive nature of his friends' behavior. He may not recognize it in himself, but he does know of his friends that their attitudes on every speculative subject are utterly instinctive.

To be a little more precise, one friend preserves the faith once delivered to the saints. A second clings to the constitution as a solitary raft in a wide and troubled sea. A third maintains intact the precepts of a McKinley or a Cleveland. While a fourth friend sighs for the good old days when women knew that home was home and God created men as their providers. Or again, it would be unbelievably surprising if one friend did not condemn Tom Paine and Robert Ingersoll for their too conservative opinions along religious lines. It would be startling if a second friend, from the safe seclusion of sheltered wealth or a professorial chair, did not clamor for a new heaven and a new earth, with Moscow as the capital of both. It would be wholly out of character if a third friend saw any pitfalls in the New Deal or its dealers. Why worry about the horse and buggy of a past that's dead, and in the interest of public decency should have long ago been buried? These are opinions chosen quite at random on questions of the day. They could be multiplied indefinitly, but, however numerous, they would conform to type and would betray themselves to any critical observer as the fruit of instinct, not intelligence.

If attitudes are thus instinctive, and such they seem to be, how does it happen that intellectual merit is attributed to certain attitudes and dumb stupidity to others? Why is it that reactionaries never, and conservatives seldom, preen themselves upon their intellect, while radicals quite often, and liberals almost invariably, assume that their brain cortex is of a finer texture than their fellows'?

The answer lies, apparently, in the nature of the case. The two groups of conservatives find life about them good. They accept it as the natural order of existence and the intellectual power which many of them undoubtedly possess and which not infrequently lifts them very high, is employed in creative rather than in introspective ways. Whereas the liberals of either group, moderate or extreme, not pleased with life about them and eager to amend it, are driven to an introspection and a ratiocination which render them more conscious of their own thought processes, more conscious that they are thinkers, than those whose point of view is more objective and creative.

Here lies one explanation, it would seem, for the vanity of liberals. Like a patient who takes his own pulse, or who reads his own thermometer, they are always keeping tab upon their own reactions. But there is a further explanation for their Pharisaical position, their genuine delight that they are not as other men. It lies in the professional affiliation of many of their caste. The professor of the social sciences, for example, in many of our colleges is more than likely to proclaim himself a liberal. He may even flirt with red when pink does not afford sufficient color. Remote from the realities of an economic world concerning which he claims to be all knowing, he pronounces obiter dicta and other ex cathedra utterances with a finality which charms his sophomores and which seldom meets with refutation from his equals. Uncontradicted he comes naturally to feel his own omniscience.

By a further indirection he knows that he is learned. His learning might never wrest from nature the secrets she so closely guards. It might never build a bridge or operate a railroad. It might not even conjugate a Latin verb. But it serves for Olympian pronouncements on constitution or New Deal. It contributes to a new apocalypse. And it must be good because the prophet has a Ph. D. degree. The world has dubbed him clever. He agrees entirely with the world in that one respect, at least. He knows that he is clever, and he is, or thinks he is, a liberal. It must be, then, that to be a liberal is clever. It boils down to a syllogism. I am liberal. I am clever. Therefore to be liberal is to be clever. By the same token not to be a liberal is to be stupid.

Not all liberals are so crass as to express these feelings openly. But whether they indulge in blatant boasting or in gentle condescension, a conviction of superiority is implicit in their attitude. Needless to say, such complacency does not endear them to the unregenerate, who raise the age-old question: Must one who likes his cakes and ale forever bow the knee to the Comstocks and their kind? Are beer and skittles the final proof of folly? Are the mourners at life's table forever wiser than the wedding guests? Is melancholy at life's inequalities so greatly wiser than rejoicing at life's opportunities? Is pessimism more admirable than cheer? What is it but an attitude?

The liberal would be a far more genial neighbor if he could divest himself of vanity, if he could admit that his is only one of the four major attitudes; that it is just as instinctive in his own case as conservatism is instinctive in the case of some one else, and that if he must find some intellectual yardstick for measuring himself alongside of his contemporaries he must find it somewhere else than in a label cheaply worn.

It is far from present purpose to deny the liberal's intellectuality. He may be most profoundly intellectual. But so may be the deepest dyed of the conservatives. Once the liberal abandons his a priori assumption that to be a liberal is the final proof of intellect, he may be as intellectual as the good Lord permits. There is room in the liberal position, just as there is room in the other major points of view, for the widest sweeps of thought and the subtlest intellectual gradations all the way from imbecility to genius. Men of other faiths than liberal will view the liberal with a new respect once he shows that he has mastered one very simple truth, namely, that attitude is not the proof of intellect, but that in the social sciences, where opinions count as much as facts, intellect is revealed in the keenness and the insight with which a position is defended rather than in the original choice of the position. Let the liberal cease to be a Pharisee. Let him take his place among his fellows in the forum. His views will carry greater weight and his neighbors will rejoice at their emancipation from the vanity of liberals.

TURN ABOUT.

"I shall have to put you fellows in the same room," said the host.

"That's all right," the guests replied.

"Well, I think," said the host, "you'll have a comfortable night. "It's a feather bed."

"Change places with me, Dick," he groaned. "It's my turn to lie on the feather."—Grit.

HEALTH EDUCATION OF THE PUBLIC.

SOME years ago a distinguished scientist raised the query as to whether medicine had anything to offer the public beyond St. Paul's counsel of temperance. Should physicians remain silent about illness, the progress made by science in combating it, and the general rules of good hygiene? Should the public remain ignorant about disease on the theory that such information would make them overanxious?

Some of the failures of modern medicine may be laid without scruple to the lack of understanding on the part of the patient of the efforts made by his physician and hence the necessity for his full coöperation. The battle is half won if those who are in good health, as well as those who are ill, can be told some of the simple facts about disease, how it occurs, and the numerous plans available for its conquest.

In giving medical information through the medium of the press no attempt is made to propagandize anything or anybody. While mention of specific disease and progress in its treatment appears proper and sound, it should be recalled that in general information is for the benefit of all types of readers with varying heredities, temperaments, dispositions, and social conditions.

No educational force, if used aright, is comparable to the public press. It reaches directly or indirectly all the people; the one who needs it less as well as he who needs it most. Newspapers are read where radios are not owned. If newspapers are not found in the home the schoolroom makes concrete applications of their many features. Should good hygiene be the subject of discussion, greater interest is aroused if the topic is seasonal and if it calls to mind personal experiences with the condition described. Through the school child much information filters to all members of the family.

We will have to admit that people are curious about themselves. In fact, they are eager for information of the right sort if it is understandable and if it is not fear provoking in its teaching.

Physicians would be reluctant to surrender the information which they possess when it comes to safeguarding the health of members of their immediate families. While as a group they are not long lived, this fact should be ascribed to the character of the occupation rather than to a lack of proper understanding of hygiene. There is so much mental wear and tear, strain, anxiety, and responsibility that damage to blood vessels and tissues probably occurs earlier than with those who follow almost any other profession.

If the dissemination of health information produces one hypochondriac, it stimulates intelligent thinking about health on the part of a thousand. In place of making parents fussy about their children's health it helps them to meet disease problems with understanding.

The fact is that the pathway to health and to normal living is an easy one to travel. It requires some knowledge, to be sure, but a far greater fund of common sense. That there are individuals who are jittery about health cannot be gainsaid. There are people who are unduly fussy about personal appearanse, and what they say and do.

Fortunately, as the conquest of disease progresses physicians are able to offer a greater amount of assurance to patients that the conditions complained of can be relieved.

There is one health rule that we must forever preach, namely, seek skilled help before disease has made headway. It involves so simple a principle that no argument need be summoned to support it. If conditions can be detected early the remedy is usually effective. Delay is wasteful and dangerous. It is far wiser to call a physician once or twice yearly, even though the occasion may appear mildly innocent, than to procrastinate in the detection of an important disease.

How far should physicians go in taking the public into their confidence? Inasmuch as education is for the public weal, the answer must be that medical facts should include all conditions that constitute a menace to health.

DRY AIR AND COLDS.

Miss L. D. writes: In order to settle a friendly dispute between employés and employers I am asking whether or not overdry air in heated rooms is conducive to more colds. The employés believe this to be true. If we are correct would air moisteners hung behind radiators be of any benefit?

REPLY.

Probably the most prolific single cause of colds in this country is the overheating of working and living quarters. The ideal atmosphere is considered to be a temperature of 68 degrees F., with a relative humidity of from 40 to 50 per cent. At a temperature of 68 it is not difficult to maintain a humidity of 35 to 40, but let the temperature rise to about 75 degrees F. and the relative humidity may drop to the very unhealthful level of 20 per cent. This can be determined by the use of a reliable hygrometer.

Of course, water is a remedy for dryness of the air, but if the humidity is really to be affected, it would be necessary that a great deal of water be evaporated daily. In experiments with two seven room houses it was found that to keep one house 10 per cent above the humidity of the other required 64 gallons of water daily. In large buildings, the amount of water required is very great.

Water pans hung on radiators help but little, as an insufficient amount of water is evaporated.

REDUCING.

Mrs. R. C. writes: Isn't it better for a woman, 61 years old, who weighs 200 pounds, to lose two or three pounds a week than five to six?

REPLY.

Safe weight reduction is best accomplished through a gradual loss of two to three pounds per week. This method will leave few if any wrinkles behind.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

WELLINGTON, New Zealand.—Possibilities of a new trade between the United States and New Zealand are opening up, a trade in pedigree stock. A pioneer in this line is Charles E. Robertson, manager of the stock department of a foremost firm of stock and station agents who act as farm bankers.

New Zealand needs new blood in her stock because for nearly two decades she has shut off the old source of supply. An overwhelming proportion of the live stock in the country is immediately descended from English bred animals. Fear of infection with the foot and mouth disease which rages over English counties led farmers of New Zealand to bar importation of stock from Britain.

This attitude has endured now for so long that sheep and cattle are in the need of fresh blood. Efforts have been made to obtain new blood from Canada and South America, but results have not been as satisfactory as was hoped. So it was determined the United States should be investigated to see what it might yield.

The result was a wide tour by Robertson, who made more than 40 purchases of champion animals for leading farmers all over the land. The first shipment, which has already arrived, was made from eastern states through New York, but beef cattle have been assembled at Des Moines, Ia., and sent to Los Angeles where they were placed on board boat for New Zealand.

One of the early arrivals has been the three times grand champion polled Hereford bull High Stanway, which won honors in Minnesota, where he was undefeated and was twice champion over all breeds. His progeny have been unbeaten in the last few years, declares Robertson, and two of his sons and one of his daughters, all prize winners, are included in the purchases.

A famous Hereford cow, Daisy's Choice II., notable prize winner and breeder, was also purchased. The Aberdeen-Angus sire Barmar Quality, junior champion at the Chicago International show of 1932, was also bought. Practically all the Angus cattle purchased descend from Earl Marshall, most noted sire of the breed. Another outstanding animal is the polled Shorthorn hefer Silver Bracelet. Some of the hefers bought come from America's foundation herds.

Robertson gives as his opinion the fact that United States breeds are as fine as anything in the world. His travels covered twelve states and his purchases were made in ten.

UNPAID DEBT.

Brookfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How old must a bill be to be void in Illinois? 2. This is a paper bill from 1927 to 1931 which has been presented to me against my mother who has been dead a year. 3. There is only a small piece of property left to my sister and myself which is of no value and which has a mortgage on it. Can this newsdealer put this bill up against the estate? 4. This bill is also two-thirds more than it should be as I hold the last receipt paid and balance due on it.

E. P.

1. The limitation period on oral agreements is five years and on written contracts is ten years.

2. You would not be personally liable for her debts even if the statute of limitations did not run.

3. It would be necessary for him to probate the estate.

4. If he brings court proceedings, you should present your defense. It does not seem likely that the bill is large enough to make such proceedings worth while.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FARM LEASE.

Ottawa, Ill., Nov. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a renter of the farm which has a $7,000 mortgage of which I am also one of the signers as well as an heir. There are four other heirs on the mortgage and my mother, who has a life estate in the farm. She has given power of attorney to my brother to look after her interests in the farm and some other property. The mortgage is defaulted as to interest payment to the amount of $300. 1. I insist that whatever rent is available above insurance and taxes should go to the mortgage holder. 2. He claims I should leave the farm for showing the mortgage holder that he is not turning over what money he could, since my brother has no interest in the farm and apparently cares little if it is foreclosed. 3. As one of the owners and signer of the mortgage [4], do I have a legal right to remain on the farm to see that I do not lose my title to farm by keeping up the interest payments? 5. Could my brother compel me to leave the farm? My rents are all paid and there is no criticism of my management of the farm.

W. H.

1. You are right in the sense that he can force this by a foreclosure.

2. The antecedents of your pronouns are not clear.

3. You have stated that you are a renter rather than an owner.

4. If you have rented from a person who is entitled to give you a valid lease, then we see no reason why your lease should not be valid as long as you keep your rental payments up. Your interest in seeing that the mortgage is met would not increase your right to remain in possession.

5. If you mean that he is the landlord named in your lease, we see no basis for him to put you out as long as you keep up your rent payments.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

USE OF BARBED WIRE.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you advise me in connection with the legality of placing a couple of strands of barbed wire on top of a fence alongside my offices? This fence separates my offices from an alley. The fence belongs to me and is about five feet high. Boys of the wandering type scale this fence into my premises where they run around, ruining the yard, jumping onto porch, etc. Otherwise they sit on fence, kicking at the boards and breaking some of them. If not legal to place barbed wire along the top of fence, would it be legal to put it inside the fence on the side of the yard, about twenty inches from top of fence, thus making it difficult for boys to get into the yard, or sit on top of fence with much comfort?

E. C. W.

A city ordinance prohibits barbed wire along the line of a thoroughfare. In our opinion, this ought to be interpreted as covering only such a location as would be dangerous to persons legitimately using the thoroughfare, but we understand that city authorities have given a broader interpretation. If you wish to ascertain the attitude of your local police, take the matter up with them.

A DEMOCRATIC ANALYSIS.

Mattoon, Ill., Nov. 8.—In New York the Republicans gained some seats in the lower house of the state legislature, but failed to gain any in the senate. The Democrats elected more men in the state than did the Republicans since only three Republican aldermen were elected in New York City. The state of New York has been normally Republican, but they failed by several thousand votes last Tuesday of carrying the state. If the governorship or presidency had been in last Tuesday's contest, everything else being equal, the Democratic candidates for those offices would have won in New York. This, too, in spite of the fact that the eastern states are stronger Republican and more bitter against the New Deal.

How, then, can you figure this a repudiation of Roosevelt or the New Deal, especially in an off year of off years?

With President Roosevelt, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and Gov. Horner heading the Illinois Democratic ticket in 1936, the Democrats will take you *Re*publicans down the line again to the tune of '32.

Will you dare go before the Illinois property owners with the sales tax as the issue? Will you dare go before the country with the New Deal as the issue?

EDWARD F. POORMAN.

SALUTING THE FLAG.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Recently you printed a picture of school children saluting the flag which, except for the pattern of the national emblem, looks as if it might have come direct from Germany.

Patriotism is a beautiful thing when it comes from the heart. But enforced as it is now by our benighted boards of education, it becomes a menace and an excuse for suppression of free and liberal thinking. It also arouses a spirit of antagonism much more far-reaching than the influence of a small child refusing to salute the flag, which would be nil if ignored. The school board needs to study child psychology.

WHAT RUMPUS?

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Why the rumpus on nationality all of a sudden? I thought that after the ceremony of naturalization all subjects were converted into Americans. Perhaps I'm wrong. In fact, when I see communities of naturalized citizens of America living in clans, speaking their old country language, and sticking to their old country ways, I'm sure I'm wrong. As for the Irish, they are a husky, wholesome, happy, lovable lot, and I like them. Then, too, they speak English, and more than 99 per cent of them make excellent citizens.

ONE GUESS.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 6.—In the local movie houses two, or even one year ago, when the face of President Roosevelt appeared on the screen there was always wild and prolonged applause.

Last night at one of the same houses during a newsreel showing the President returning from his recent fishing trip with the same carefree grin and a happy wave of the hand, not even one hand clap, just cold, stony silence.

What is the answer?

WILMETTE HARBOR.

Chicago, Nov. 7. — On behalf of the members of this association and many others interested in our cause I wish to thank The Chicago Tribune for the editorial entitled "Wilmette Harbor," which appeared in this morning's edition. THE MARTINIQUE DISASTER.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—In the News Review of The Chicago Sunday Tribune for Nov. 10 appeared a map of "The World's Earthquake Zones," which was accompanied by a news review under the caption of "Disasters."

No. 1 of the earthquake disasters was "May 8, 1902—St. Pierre—Martinique—30,000." True, the loss of a city and its 30,000 inhabitants was a disaster, but it does not belong under the category of earthquake disasters. The public is admittedly earthquake conscious, but no more disasters need be blamed to earthquake phenomena than necessary.

The destruction of St. Pierre was a direct result of fire and the loss of life was due to suffocation and "dry boiling" by a cloud of intense heat which descended from the crater of Mont Pelée during its great eruption of that year. There were some premonitory earthquake shocks, to be sure, and a few shocks occurred intermittently throughout the period of eruption, but they caused no appreciable damage. Therefore the St. Pierre disaster should be classed as a volcanic, rather than an earthquake, disaster.

LIGHTED HALLWAYS.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Could it be possible to enforce a law for property holders, particularly owners of two story apartments, to have a small light burning in the vestibule to about 10 p. m.? There are very small globes one can purchase which would not consume much electricity. I am the wife of a physician. The calls my husband makes are often urgent, but much time is wasted groping about in dark hallways and trying to locate houses because one cannot see the address on the door nor the name within.

THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 4.—I would be grateful if readers of The Tribune would kindly call the attention of garden club members, indeed flower lovers everywhere, as well as lovers of peace, to the following:

We are trying to get the white pansy adopted as official floral emblem among the different peace organizations. Pansy, in the language of flowers, means "thoughts"; white is symbolic of peace; Hence, peace thoughts.

BALDWIN PLANS POST-ELECTION CABINET SHAKEUP

Winston Churchill May Get British Ministry.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin left Downing street today to spend the week-end at his country residence, Chequers, to figure out how he will fill in the six gaps which will be left in his cabinet as a result of the general elections. Early next week the revamped cabinet will meet to review the British position both at home and abroad as a result of this week's voting and to formulate a new legislative program.

The prime minister has decided against such an extensive reshuffling of cabinet posts as had been expected. The places to be changed are the first lord of the admiralty, the secretary for air, the lord president of the council, the secretary for colonies, the secretary for war and the minister for league of nations affairs.

New Appointees Undisclosed.

The new appointees to these posts are still Baldwin's secret. It seems likely that Capt. Anthony Eden's present post as league minister will be abolished and that Eden will be given the war portfolio or, perhaps, the dominions post. In the latter case J. H. Thomas would get a ministry without portfolio.

Reports persist that Winston Churchill will join the next cabinet, either replacing Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, who is retiring as first lord of the admiralty, or Ramsay MacDonald—an election loser—as lord president of the council with the special mission of coördinating all defense departments of the government. About other shifts, there appears no certainty as yet.

The general public understands there are to be big expenditures for naval replacements and additions and that a billion dollar loan has been mentioned. Baldwin denied this was the exact figure.

35 New Warships.

Anyway, the admiralty has plans for laying down thirty-five new warships. Britain's territorial army, corresponding to the American national guard, is to be augmented and made more effective and there is talk of training 15,000 more pilots to man the increased air forces.

The Baldwin government considers the British especially weak in this arm since England's frontiers, as Baldwin once put it, are on the Rhine, and now he would probably say they are on the Mediterranean.

The decision to strengthen the fleet, it is reported, was taken after Mussolini last June smilingly told Eden that the British fleet is not what it once was and that he was not afraid of it in the Mediterranean.

Report Deal with Greece.

Some sections of the British press this week repeated reports that following the restoration of the monarchy in Greece, five Greek ports would be put at Britain's disposal for submarine bases and that the British might consider ceding Cyprus to Greece in return.

Political circles here today thought there would be another lull of a week or ten days in the Mediterranean situation pending the outcome of the sanctions.

With trouble in Egypt, the British appear to have less and less intention of retiring any ships from the Mediterranean. And with Italian operations in Ethiopia threatening to give the Italians control of trafic which passes through the Suez canal into the Red sea and the gulf of Aden, there appears less and less chance to avoid an Italo-British showdown.

E. Shinwell, Laborite, defeated Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister, for seat in British house of commons at election Thursday.

SKIDS FALLING PLANE TO SAFETY AS MOTORS STALL AFTER TAKEOFF

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A hundred mile an hour "belly slide" off the edge of County airport and over a 30 foot embankment saved the lives of two pilots and a passenger when the motors of a Central Airline plane went dead today.

The ship fell after climbing 50 feet into the air on a takeoff, an instant after the landing wheels had been lifted into the plane.

James H. [Slim] Carmichael, 28 years old, at the controls, yelled to Tracy Baker, 47, of Chicago, the passenger, and Edward Gerber, co-pilot, to "brace themselves for a jolt and set the ship down flat.

Instead of nosing over the craft slid along the airport for 300 feet like a crazy toboggan, slipped over an embankment at the rim of the field, and plowed into a clump of saplings and shrubbery.

The ship's three motors dug a deep path in the turf as the ship skidded along, but the three occupants of the cabin were unscratched.

J. D. Condon, president of Central Airlines, declared the crackup was due to water in the gasoline taken on at the County airport.

MOSQUITO WAR STARTED TO END MALARIA PERIL

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—A state war on mosquitoes, spreader of malaria, was announced here today by State Director of Health Dr. Frank J. Jirka Jr. Several hundred men, he said, started early this week on a program of clearing and draining mosquito infested swamp lands.

The army of workers, Jirka said, will be increased in size to about 800 Monday when the program, which is a WPA project will get under full headway. The drive is in southern Illinois.

Easy Money, No Mosquitoes.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Westchester county officials were surprised today by a dispatch from Washington which said the WPA had allotted $675,902 to the county for a malaria control program. This was a new one on physicians and residents of the county, who had lived happily in the belief that malaria was not one of their troubles.

The most baffled citizen, perhaps, was Dr. Richard Slee, deputy health commissioner in charge of White Plains and 18 townships.

"We haven't heard of a case of malaria in a year," he said.

QUEZON MOVES TO BUILD ARMY IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 16.—(AP)—President Manuel Quezon took the initial step toward organizing the Philippine government's defense forces today by creating a 15 member national defense council. The council will advise President Quezon and Gen. Douglas MacArthur on military affairs.

Gen. MacArthur, former United States army chief of staf, was appointed by President Roosevelt to train Filipino defense forces under the 10 year commonwealth régime which will precede complete independence from America.

Secretary of War George Dern, who represented President Roosevelt at the inauguration of Quezon as first president of the commonwealth, was en route home today aboard the warship Chester.

700 U. S. FLYERS TO PARTICIPATE IN MIAMI AIR SHOW

Miami, Fla., Nov. 16.—(AP)—More than 700 American flyers soon will wing south for Miami's eighth annual all-American air maneuvers, Aviation Director A. H. Heermance announced today.

Displaying a sheaf of applications for hangar and field space, Heermance today predicted the concentration here Dec. 12 to 14 for the maneuvers would be one of the largest in the south's history.

Last year, 503 planes participated.

Between 60 and 90 National Guard planes are expected, as well as several hundred from the Marine corps, navy, and army units.

Cash prizes approximating $5,000 and many trophies have been posted for the racing events.

SUES WIFE AND EX-HUSBAND FOR $250,000 STOCKS

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Charging fraud in Florida and New York, John Cooper has filed suit in Superior court here against his estranged wife, Josephine H. Cooper, and her former husband, Leon Osborne Blatchford, for return of $250,000 in stocks.

Mrs. Cooper divorced Blatchford in Florida March 12, 1932, and he married her three days later, Cooper said. She told him, he charged, that Blatchford was about to sue him on alienation of affections charges and induced him when they were in New York City to place his property in her name.

Mrs. Cooper filed suit later in Florida on false charges, Cooper alleged, and the divorce was denied. She then came to Los Angeles and has been associating with her former husband, he asserted.

The show goes on for 12 months

5%	January
4%	February
10%	March
12%	April
13%	May
13%	June
14%	July
10%	August
6%	September
6%	October
5%	November
2%	December

AT the New York Automobile Show, the automobile manufacturer makes a showing—once a year. The interested public looks, but usually doesn't buy at the time. The records show that Show month is one of the lesser sales months of the year!

You never know when the customer is going to buy. The only safe program is not to let the buyer forget, to make your car Show continuous, to keep him sold—if you want sales to keep up. All-year advertising is only insurance for all-year sales.

Once consistent advertising in the New York market cost too much. Too many media were necessary. Today, one newspaper alone can do the major job of selling the major market. Because The News with more than 1,600,000 circulation daily reaches more than two-thirds of New York City families—and more of the rich suburban market than any other New York paper! And The News costs so little that the automobile advertiser can afford continuous showing!

A News page once a month costs less than a single color spread in certain magazines. A News page once a week costs less than three mailing pieces per year to an audience of the same size. A News page every day costs less than a major weekly broadcast!

If you want to make a better showing in New York next year, better make a more effective continuous showing of your cars to a majority of your customers in the New York market. The market and the medium constitute your obvious best opportunity for better business in 1936!

INTERSTATE CALL OF WITNESSES IS PROPOSED IN BILL

Plan Before Legislature; Kerner Explains Aim.

Provisions for the summoning of witnesses in one state to testify in a criminal proceeding in another state are contained in a bill pending before the special session of the legislature at Springfield, introduced by Senator Thomas E. Keane [Dem., Chicago] at the instance of Attorney General Kerner.

Illinois is thus being asked to pass a law which the Interstate Crime conference, meeting recently at Trenton, N. J., hopes will be made uniform in all states. "The lack of such a law," Mr. Kerner said yesterday, "has worked a miscarriage of justice in many a case. It was of the utmost importance during the trial of the Lindbergh kidnaping case in New Jersey, in which many of the important witnesses were residents of New York."

Provides for a Hearing.

The Keane bill provides that judges of courts of record in states adopting the law, when informed that the presence of a resident of the state is required as a material witness in another state in a criminal proceeding, shall hold a hearing to determine if the person is a material and necessary witness and if it will cause him undue hardship to be compelled to attend the trial.

Witnesses would not be compelled to travel more than 1,000 miles to a trial. They would be paid 10 cents a mile to the scene of the trial or grand jury proceeding, plus $5 a day for each day of travel or attendance at the prosecution.

Gives Witness Immunity.

The bill would give immunity to the witnesses from arrest or service of process, civil or criminal, for any charge arising before their entrance into a state on their way to attend the trial, or while returning from it.

The concluding sentence of the proposed law reads: "This act shall be interpreted and construed so as to effectuate its general purposes to make uniform the law of the states which enacted it."

SOCIETY MATRON SOUGHT IN DEATH OF DR. GEBHARDT

New York, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Two torn hotel receipts were studied by police finger print experts tonight in the hope they would yield some clew as to what happened just before Dr. Fritz Gebhardt was shot and killed early Tuesday.

The receipts were for rooms assigned Sunday night to Dr. Gebhardt and a woman whose name was withheld. A detective was dispatched to find the woman, reported to be a society matron of suburban Pelham Manor, and bring her back for questioning.

Anticipating the results of the finger print study, investigators adopted a theory that Vera Stretz, Dr. Gebhardt's former secretary who is charged with killing him, found the hotel receipts in his apartment and tore them in half in a jealous rage before shooting him.

Dr. Gebhardt's widow and two daughters are en route from Germany to claim his body.

PALESTINE BANS ARAB PAPER FOR STIRRING UNREST

JAFFA, Palestine, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The government today suspended the Arabic Daily, Al Difaa, for allegedly attempting to stir up Arabs in Palestine to follow the example of the nationalist uprising in Egypt.

Publication of the newspaper was barred for one month when the leading article compared "the revolution in Egypt with the silence in Palestine."

Since the discovery of smuggled ammunition in Jaffa last month, Arab leaders have been carrying on vigorous protests against British policies and the Jews. A general Arab strike was held on Oct. 26 and, although Arab parties voted against a repetition of the strike, another demonstration was staged last Wednesday by Arab youth groups on the return to the country of Sir Arthur Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine.

SEEKS TO IMPROVE RELATIONS BETWEEN CHURCH AND PRESS

E. W. PETERSON.

Ernest W. Peterson, religious editor of the Portland, Ore., Journal, will arrive in Chicago today to introduce to Chicago pastors and seminary heads a plan for improving relations between church and newspaper. The plan was devised by the Rev. Dr. William B. Norton, for 20 years religious editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, who now lives in Portland. He has delegated Mr. Peterson to present the program before theological schools in Chicago and in the east.

Mr. Peterson is scheduled to address the Methodist Ministers' meeting at the Chicago Temple Monday morning. Other talks will be before faculties and students of the Chicago Theological seminary, the Northern Baptist seminary, Presbyterian [formerly McCormick seminary] and a joint assembly of Garrett Biblical institute and Seabury Western seminary, Evanston.

Dr. Norton proposes a lectureship to be held in three Chicago centers, looking to practical, non-critical working relationships between church and press.

Dixon, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The new building erected by the state for the district highway department here was dedicated today by Gov. Horner and the other state officials. The building, two stories and basement, is built of reinforced cement and brick. It cost $40,000.

LESSEES OF LOOP SCHOOL PROPERTY SUE OVER OUSTER

Act to Avert Dispossession in Rental Dispute.

Occupants of five parcels of school board property located in the loop filed suits in Circuit court yesterday asking that the board of education be restrained from forfeiting their 99 year leases because of controversy over the amount of rent to be paid.

On Sept. 18 the board voted to start action to dispossess the tenants within 60 days unless rentals were paid on the basis of board demands. It is expected that a hearing on the suits will be held on Tuesday, at which time the lesees will ask for a temporary injunction restraining dispossession action until the case can be heard.

Object to New Appraisals.

The rentals for the board property, under the terms of leases signed in 1885, call for a revaluation of the property every ten years with the rental at 6 per cent of the appraisal.

The lesees objected to the 1925 appraisal and continued to pay rent on the basis of the 1915 appraisal, which gave a value of $5,303,918 to 15 pieces of school property located in the block owned by the board, bounded by State, Monroe, Madison and Dearborn streets.

The appraisal of the property in 1925 was $9,507,320, but in the 1935 appraisal, made last May, it was reduced to $7,400,000. The 1935 appraisal committee was composed of the late Wallace G. Clark and Paul Steinbrecher, realty dealers, and former Federal Judge George A Carpenter.

List of the Properties.

The properties included in the suits filed are: 6 South State street, formerly occupied by the Castle theater; 16 South State street; 26 South State street; 20 South State street, and 32 South State street, occupied by the South State Street Building corporation.

It is reported that in the case of the building at 31 South Dearborn street, on which the lease is held by the Daniel F. Crilly estate, and the McVickers theater building on Madison street, both of which have entered into the lease controversy in the past, the owners are going to permit the dispossession proceedings to be completed.

MINE UNIONIST SAYS RIVAL UNIT MAY JOIN HIS

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Ray Edmundson, state president of the United Mine Workers of America, claimed today that one of the strongest units of the rival Progressive Miners of the American union had urged striking miners to affiliate with the U. M. W. A.

Edmundson said that the amalgamated local union of the P. M. A. at Gillespie, Ill., first unit of the organization, after a bitter debate this week, voted recommendation with the suggestion that such action "would further the interests of striking miners."

William Keck, state president of the Progressives, strongly denied the action. At his office in Gillespie, Keck said such action was suggested by a "communist publication," but that the local unit had rejected the proposal.

Edmundson claimed that the action was taken by the local union so that striking miners of P. M. A. might return to work as U. M. W. A. members without breaking the strike as non-union miners.

Gulf Coast Rum Runner Gets Two Year Sentence

Houston, Tex., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Adam Smith, 32, of New Orleans, Gulf coast rum runner, pleaded guilty in federal court here to charges of smuggling alcohol into the United States and was sentenced to two years imprisonment. He also is under a year and a day sentence in Lake Charles, La., on conviction in the I'm Alone smuggling case.

Knife Wound in Throat Is Fatal to Illinois Man

Eastman, Ga., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A 53 year old man who has been in serious condition here with a knife wound in his throat died early today after he had undergone an apparently successful operation to reconstruct his esophagus and trachea. He had said his name was Mack Beaty of Centralia, Ill. Officers said he told them he had inflicted the fatal wound himself.

Governor of New Mexico Welcomed to His Old Home

Bowling Green, O., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—This town turned out en masse last night to welcome home a distinguished son, Clyde Tingley, governor of New Mexico, who arrived in Bowling Green thirty years ago on a freight train to work in a truck factory of which he later became superintendent. Gov. Tingley spoke at a homecoming celebration.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY ROBBER GETS REWARD AS HERO

Samuel McDowell Wins Tribune Prize.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon of Sept. 13 three bandits, each of them armed, rushed upon a girl cashier carrying $1,600 in currency and checks near 453 West 63d street. They opened fire upon her escort, Patrolman Samuel H. McDowell of the Englewood station, and shot him twice.

Patrolman McDowell, gravely wounded, drew his gun, shot the leader of the gang as he sought to wrest the packet of money from the girl, and then drove the other two gunmen from the scene with bullets. Assuring himself that the girl was safe, he summoned a squad car and then sought medical attention.

Hero Is 50 Years Old.

For his heroism Patrolman McDowell has been awarded THE TRIBUNE hero prize of $100 for the month of September.

A 50 year old veteran of the department, McDowell was assigned to escort Miss Beatrice Cunningham, 29 years old, a cashier in the branch office of the Prudential Life Insurance company, 453 West 63d street, from the office to the First National Bank of Englewood, a short distance down the street. Miss Cunningham carried a packet of checks and currency.

They started east on 63d street, McDowell a few paces behind the girl. At the southwest corner of 63d street and Eggleston avenue, while crowds milled past on all sides, a car containing three men drew up near the curb.

The men, all with guns, leaped from the car, and one of them hurried directly toward Miss Cunningham and seized her by the throat. McDowell drew his pistol and sought to fire, but he could not shoot for fear of wounding the girl.

Open Fire on Policeman.

The other two robbers opened fire on the policeman. One bullet struck him in the hand and another penetrated his right side. He stumbled forward, half falling to the sidewalk, but managed to brace himself on one knee. Miss Cunningham for a moment wrenched free from her assailant.

McDowell, seizing his chance, opened fire and dropped the bandit to the sidewalk with four bullets in his body. The man's companions fled to cars parked at the curb and from behind them renewed their fire on McDowell. He returned their shots, and one of them lurched suddenly, as if wounded. The third man dragged him into the car, and the machine sped away.

McDowell, managing to walk, saw Miss Cunningham was uninjured. Patrolman Timothy Ryan of the Chicago park district police, who had heard the shooting, came up and took charge of the wounded bandit. McDowell went to a nearby doctor's office and summoned the squad car. The doctor was out and he returned to the street, hailed a passing motorist, and was taken to St. Bernard's hospital.

Recovering at Home.

The wounded bandit was taken to the same hospital, where he died. He was identified as Walter Schmidt, 37 years old, a former tavern owner. He had been involved in two previous robberies.

Patrolman McDowell was found to have been wounded above the right kidney. He is now recovering in his home at 6349 South Morgan street, but will not be able to resume his work with the department for several weeks. He joined the department on May 8, 1912. For six years prior to that time he had been a bookkeeper. He is married and has three children, a girl and two boys.

In recommending Patrolman McDowell for THE TRIBUNE award Capt. Michael Tobin, commanding the 15th district, said: "Officer McDowell merits careful consideration for his valor, intelligence, and strict attention to duty, and for exceptional bravery under fire. With so many odds against him, he exterminated this potential murderer and prevented him from preying further upon society."

TRY 3 CROATS IN FRANCE FOR SERB KING'S MURDER

Trial Opens Tomorrow; 500 Guard Trio.

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Three Croats charged with complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, more than a year ago, will go on trial Monday.

Police said today they viewed the accused men—Mio Kraj, Zvonimir Pospechil and Ivan Rajtich—as merely gunmen hired by persons who desired to change Europe's peace treaty frontiers by violence.

See Nation Issue Settled.

The defendants are expected to settle, by their testimony, the question of what nation, or nations, aided the Ustachi terrorist band, to which they belonged, in plotting the death of the monarch when he arrived at Marseilles for a visit to France. Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, was slain at the same time.

Hungary stands accused by Jugo-Slavia at Geneva of harboring the Ustachi group, but has steadfastly denied the charge.

More than 500 mobile guards were brought to the scene of the trial today as a warning was received from police of other countries that Ustachi terrorists "seldom reach court alive."

Three on Trial in Absentia.

The alleged leaders of the band, Dr. Ante Pavelich and his assistant, Eugene Kvaternik, as well as Yvan Percevitch, alias Gustave Perchetz, will be tried in absentia on the same charges as the imprisoned trio—complicity in the assassination and association with known criminals.

Pavelich and Kvaternik are in jail at Turin, Italy, although no formal charges have been lodged against them. The Court of Appeals there decided the assassinations were political crimes, and denied France's request for their extradition.

Italian authorities declared France had refused to extradite 42 Italians wanted for "offenses against the state," and so would not extradite the two refugees to France. Sanctions against Italy by France and 50 other nations, because of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, have only reinforced the Italian stand.

Whether the prosecution will ask the guillotine or imprisonment for the three Croats has not been announced.

TELL PROGRESS OF U. S. FIGHT ON MARIJUANA

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Progress in the fight against the narcotic marijuana was reported today by Commissioner H. J. Anslinger.

Anslinger said wide acreages of Indian hemp have been destroyed recently in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, California, and Georgia.

While many states have laws designed to suppress the growth and cultivation of the narcotic, there is no federal law controling it. Federal agents coöperate with state and local authorities, however, in detecting marijuana cultivation, cigaret making, and sales.

"Murders and other crimes of brutality," Anslinger said, "are often committed by those addicted to this narcotic."

Emphasizing that Indian hemp, or cannabis, is "a roadside weed throughout the United States," Stuart Fuller, assistant chief of the division of far eastern affairs of the state department, also stressed dangers of marijuana. He added that in the case of this and other narcotics "adequate penalties promptly enforced," provide safeguards.

INDIANA BOY, 14, WINS MARK TWAIN ESSAY CONTEST

Hannibal, Mo., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Richard Reed, 14, Bloomington, Ind., won a nation-wide literary contest held in connection with the centennial celebration of the birth of Mark Twain.

The Mark Twain centennial committee, announcing the winner today, did not specify what the prize would be. It will be announced later.

Contestants, all under 16 years of age, were asked to write on any phase of the life or writings of the Missouri humorist who was born here a century ago.

Eighteen other winners were announced. Their prize will be a figure of Twain [Samuel Clemens] in relief designed by Walter Russell, New York sculptor.

Among these eighteen winners were Arlene Swanson, Moline, Ill., and Marilyn Brand, Milwaukee, Wis.

TAKES PURSE FROM WINDOW.

Meyer Siegel, 2547 West North avenue, told police that a man had reached into his bedroom window yesterday and stolen a purse containing $52.

WAGE EARNERS' COST OF LIVING RISING STEADILY

New York, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Living costs of wage earners in the United States, measured today by the national industrial conference board, increased 0.5 of 1 per cent from September to October.

Higher prices were reported for each of the major groups of expenditures that compose the wage earners' budget, said the board.

"Living costs in October of this year were 3.7 per cent above those of a year ago, 17.3 per cent higher than in April, 1933, the low point of the depression, and 16.9 per cent lower than in October, 1929," it was stated.

Cuba Claims Plot to Poison Water in Havana Balked

HAVANA, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Asserting they had unearthed a plot to poison the water supply of Havana, army intelligence agents today arrested Andres Rey, who, they said, was the "key man" in the alleged wholesale murder scheme. The poison plan, army agents said, was part of an anti-government campaign to prevent national elections Dec. 15.

Typhoon Swept by 60 Mile Wind Nears Philippines

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 17.—[Sunday.]—[U. P.]—A typhoon swept onward by a 60-mile-an-hour wind threatened the northern provinces of the island of Luzon in the Philippines group today. At daybreak the storm was just off the northern Tayabas coast near Baler and was moving west. In Manila it was raining and windy.

Suburban Construction Tops $1,000,000 for Eighth Consecutive Month

HOME BUILDING IS PROMINENT IN OCTOBER SURVEY

Month's Total 215 Pct. Above Last Year.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

W. H. JOHNSTON.

For the eighth consecutive month building permits in the Chicago suburbs have topped the million dollar mark. The October total, reported yesterday by the Straus Securities corporation in its monthly survey of suburban construction, was $1,695,000. This was 215 per cent higher than the total for the same month last year which was $538,000, and 9 per cent above September this year, which had a total of $1,557,000.

The total building permits issued for the ten months of this year was $12,310,000. This figure is more than twice that of the same period last year and three times as large as that of 1933.

Suburban building got into its million dollar stride in March. In July the total climbed to $1,916,000, the record month of the year and the highest since July, 1931.

River Forest Leads.

The largest amount of new building in any suburban community for last month was reported by Purdy W. Hazelton, village clerk of River Forest—$263,800. Of this, $225,000 was for the new St. Luke's Roman Catholic church, now under construction. Home construction included $37,500 of the total.

Next in volume was Chicago Heights, for which W. H. Johnston, building inspector, reported $252,800. The largest item, $227,000, was for the construction of a sewage disposal plant by the Chicago Heights sanitary district. He also reported a $24,000 addition to the Midwest Forging company's plant.

Home construction developed throughout the suburbs, with the north shore prominent in the movement. W. O. Paape, building commissioner of Lake Forest, reported $98,663 of permits and said that additional large home building and alteration permits will appear in his November figures.

Big Part for Homes.

Of Highland Park's $85,975 total, $73,811 represented eight new homes and the balance alterations, garages, and a greenhouse. In Evanston, with $74,500 in permits, two residences for $38,000 were started. E. M. Goodman, building commissioner, said that the remainder represented chiefly residential remodeling.

Kenilworth's total, $64,245, reported by F. L. Streed, village manager, included four new homes costing $55,250, a residential addition, and a retail store building. W. A. Wolff of Wilmette reported five residences costing $56,000 of a total of $62,975 permits.

Norman E. Schmidt of Winnetka reported two residences costing $40,000, and Charles Lenke of Waukegan issued permits for four new homes to cost $26,000. Joe P. Guy of Hammond reported four new homes. E. W. Hann of Oak Park issued permits for three residences, costing $25,300.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Nov. 8 to 14, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 27, with a combined cost of $409,143. For the corresponding week of last year there were 16 contracts totaling $154,000.

FIRST FHA STEEL HOUSE TO BE OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

The above modern steel residence, the first of its kind in the country to be granted a Federal Housing administration insured mortgage loan, will be open to the public today at 1506 Bonnie Brae place, River Forest. It was erected by General Houses, Inc., from designs by Howard T. Fisher, president and chief architect of that concern, and purchased by Frank P. Ross of Oak Park through John Cummings Lindop Real Estate, Inc. Mr. Ross is a co-founder of the Jewel Tea company.

Containing nine rooms, in addition to a laundry, utility room, and attached two car garage, the steel house has more than 30,000 cubic feet of usable space. More than 16 tons of steel were used. There are forty-two windows and a large roof deck for living and recreation purposes in season. Insulated throughout with rock wool, the house is equipped with winter air conditioning and is heated with warm air from a gas burning unit. The interior was decorated by Mrs. Charles W. Stiger Jr. of River Forest.

All Shops Are Rented Before Work Starts

All stores in the building just started at the southeast corner of Bryn Mawr and Winthrop avenues have been rented, according to Andrew G. Halas and Lester Duvall of the Bills Realty, Inc., rental agents. The Walgreen company leased two stores on the corner for 22 years. Other units were rented for five and ten year terms to Fannie May, Swan cleaners, Unique shop, and Helsing's restaurant. The remaining 45x135 was taken by the Shop & Save grocery and market. The stores will be air conditioned. The leases were closed before ground was broken, according to Halas.

FIELD FLATS 100 PCT. RENTED FOR ONE YEAR

All apartments rented and a waiting list in addition is the record for the last twelve months of the Marshall Field Garden apartments, according to A. J. Parkin, manager. Just a year ago tomorrow the Field apartments attained the goal of 100 per cent occupancy. This has been maintained, according to Parkin, together with a list of prospective tenants throughout the year.

Restaurant Chain Enters Chicago with First Unit

Edward Gold, president of Wimpy Grills, Inc., operating restaurant units in five cities in the middle west, has leased for ten years the unimproved land at 117 East Chicago avenue, just west of Walgreen's Michigan avenue store, and has started construction of the first of a chain of Chicago eating places. The floors, ceiling and walls will be of inlaid linoleum in bright colors. Howard L. Storch of Ross & Browne represented the owner, Ted Hill. Erwin Weil was broker for the lessee.

REAL ESTATE BONDS

During the last week the real estate bond market in Chicago has registered a slight rise in prices and shown increased activity, probably somewhat due to coincident activity in the stock market. As established earnings become apparent, there is a prompt reflection in both the demand for and price of various real estate issues, according to a local broker. Greater availability of information on current income and expenses of various properties will tend further to help prices, it was asserted.

A $400,000 OPERATION

The American Medical association is spending a reported $400,000 on a "rejuvenation" operation on its six story building at the northeast corner of Dearborn and Grand, which involves as its major surgical feature a complete face lifting and lengthening of that old structure. Two stories are to be added and new walls of Indiana limestone will replace the present brick. Holabird & Root are the architects. Details are given elsewhere on this page.

$400,000 Modernization Job Started by Medical Group

First steps in a modernization program which will involve a reported expenditure of approximately $400,000 are now being taken by the American Medical association at the northeast corner of North Dearborn street and West Grand avenue. As first announced in this section on Aug. 18, the six story building is to be heightened by the addition of two top stories and a penthouse assembly room, from plans by Holabird & Root.

Since that announcement, the rejuvenation plans have been enlarged to include a complete new facial operation for the entire structure. The exterior walls fronting on Dearborn and Grand are to be torn down and replaced with new ones faced with Indiana limestone.

Modernize Entire Building.

According to Dr. Austin A. Hayden, secretary of the board of trustees, the rebuilding program will include modernization of the entire structure, making many changes in departments.

The entire new top floor will be utilized for enlarged editorial and library space. The executive, secretarial, and business offices will be moved to the new seventh floor.

Various special bureaus will occupy the present sixth floor. The printing department and others will use the remaining lower stories. Completion of the entire modernization program is expected within seven months, Dr. Hayden said.

Founded in 1847.

Founded in 1847, the American Medical association now has a membership of 100,000 doctors out of the 130,000 practicing physicians in the United States, according to Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal published by that body. In addition to the weekly, the association publishes many medical magazines and booklets on its own presses. It employs 550 men and women on a day and night shift.

Dr. Olin West is secretary and manager. Will C. Braun, business manager, has been associated with the organization since 1891, when he started as a copyholder for proof readers.

The association first occupied quarters at Wabash and Randolph. It then moved to Wells and Washington, and later to Washington and Market. It has been at its present location nearly three decades.

Plans 1,800 Acre 'Sub' for TruckFarmers

One of the largest real estate developments in the Chicago area in several years was announced yesterday by W. J. Roney of the Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter stores, who is placing an 1,800 acre tract on the market for practical truck farmers.

The property, about ten miles south of Chicago, is between Chicago Heights and the Indiana state line. It has a frontage of approximately 10 miles on the Lincoln highway, Torrence avenue, Glenwood-Dyer road, and Burnham avenue, all concrete roads.

W. H. Schendorf of 10 South La Salle street, has been appointed sales agent for the development, which is to be known as "Roney Acres."

The tract was assembled by the late J. J. Lawler and that part of it which is improved with several buildings will be established as a model cattle feeding farm.

The balance will be divided into five and ten acre parcels, or multiples, and improved if desired, it was stated. These are to be sold, according to Roney, to practical truck farmers on easy terms and at a low rate of interest.

A feature of the development will be a model five room house to be erected shortly at the intersection of Lincoln and the Glenwood-Dyer roads. Legal details of the transaction involving the recent sale of the tract by the Lawler estate were handled by Henry J. and Charles Aaron.

LOUIS A. LANDA BUYS 30 ACRES ON WILLOW ROAD

Louis A. Landa of 7 West Madison street, premium specialists, yesterday purchased the thirty acre estate of Mrs. Melyna Kuyper on the north side of Willow road, between Pfingsten and Shermer roads, for a reported $10,000, through L. B. Anderson, broker. Slottow & Leviton were attorneys. The new owner is having plans drawn by Raymond Gregori, architect, for remodeling the present farmhouse into a modern all year home for his own use.

OLSON RUG CO. ANNOUNCES NEW PLANT ADDITION

WALTER OLSON.

Continuing his ten year program to make Chicago a center of the American rug industry, Walter Olson, president of the Olson Rug company, yesterday announced plans for the enlargement of the No. 1 mill of that concern. A one story addition comprising 10,000 square feet of floor space will be built on top of the present five story structure at Diversey and Crawford, built in 1927.

The new construction has been ordered, according to to Olson, as a result of perfection of a new process for fabrication of floor coverings. Experimental looms are now being built for installation in this space and will be used exclusively for test purposes. A section of the new unit also will be used for laboratory projects in the creation of new weaves, improvement of old ones and research with dyes, wools, and yarns.

Work is scheduled to start at once by the Lundoff-Bicknell company from plans by Weiss & Niestadt, architects. Completion is set for May, 1936. The cost, it is asserted, will be approximately $25,000, plus $15,000 for special looms and laboratory equipment.

"The building of this additional unit marks another step in the development program initiated in 1927," said Olson. "Thus far our expenditures and commitments total around $475,000, including the $415,000 unit just completed.

"We've never hesitated to continue with this program at any time during the depression, for I'm a firm believer in the fact that while we can't regain prosperity merely by spending we can do so by building. The construction and durable goods industries are the ones that need the greatest help."

Tentative plans call for the landscaping of the five acres west of the new addition as a center of public activities, with the possibility that it may be made into a park.

The Peacock Cleaners & Dyers, Ltd., have leased the premises at 526 Main street, Evanston, for their 54th store, from the American National Bank and Trust company as trustee for the Evanston block. The Wenoso company was broker. The lessees recently rented a store at 2924 Broadway.

GREAT GRANDSON OF H. O. STONE IS NOW WITH ROSS & BROWNE

A. J. BROWNE JR.

Ross & Browne announced yesterday that Aldis J. Browne Jr., who was graduated from Yale last June, is now connected with that real estate firm. Browne is of a family that has been connected with Chicago real estate for more than a century. His great-grandfather, H. O. Stone, came to Chicago in the early 1830s and spent the rest of his life dealing in local realty. Stone's eldest son, H. O. Stone Jr., together with Thomas McGill founded the firm of H. O. Stone & Co. Aldis J. Browne Sr. came to Chicago from Washington, D. C., in 1908. Later he became associated with Walter S. Ross in the firm of Ross & Browne. During 1927 Thomas J. Fleming and Michael Cantacuzene were added as partners.

BERLIN BISHOP TO AID PRELATE HELD AS A SMUGGLER

Catholic Clergy Attacked by Judge at Trial.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—Msgr. Count Conrad von Preysing-Lichtenegg-Moos, bishop of Berlin, will appear as a witness in a Berlin court Tuesday in the trial of Msgr. Peter Legge, Roman Catholic bishop of Meissen. Bishop Legge, Dr. Theodore Legge, his brother and general secretary of the bishopric, and Vicar General Dr. Wilhelm Soppa are accused of smuggling $56,000 out of Germany to the Netherlands for the purpose of redeeming a church loan at a low rate.

Msgr. Preysing was called by the defense to testify that the duties of a bishop do not necessarily involve close attention to the routine matters of finance and administration. The court refused an application of the public prosecutor to summon an expert bank witness, declaring such a witness was not necessary, "since here we have most to deal with an obvious gang of swindlers."

Find Bishop's Health Poor.

The greater part of today's hearing was occupied with the reading of correspondence which had been seized and which dealt with the financial transactions. The documents seriously compromised Vicar General Legge and Dr. Soppa, but did not incriminate Bishop Legge.

Both the bishop's private physician and the court's physician testified as to the serious state of the bishop's health. Later two parish priests, Father Morsbach of Halle and Father Beyer of Leipzig, told the court Bishop Legge was inexperienced in administrative matters.

"If the ancient ecclesiastical trial by compurgation were restored then every priest of Saxony would come forward as one man to swear to the bishop's innocence," Father Beyer said.

Meanwhile a significant precedent was set by the labor court in Essen by its rejection of an application for reinstatement by a municipal worker of Kettwig who testified he had been discharged from his job unjustly.

Why He Was Fired.

The man was discharged because, as a Catholic, he refused to transfer his children from the Catholic Youth organization to Hitler Youth. The court cryptically ruled:

"The burgomaster cannot be expected to employ any one who is not a loyal Nazi."

The Berlin press refrained from all comment on the regulations published yesterday defining the position of Jews in regard to citizenship and marriage, while most of the provincial papers buried the news on back pages. The new decrees were received with rejoicing by Aryan maid servants over 35 years of age, who are permitted to remain in the service of Jewish families. The decrees awarded part Jews full citizenship rights.

New laws restricting Jewish activities are predicted by Nazi authorities.

"The Jewish business system has been a complete contradiction to the economic ideals of the racially united nation," Secretary Backe of the ministry of agriculture said in an address to the farmers' congress at Goslar. "It is not mere chance that the economic life of the bolshevist state is directed not by Russians but by a thin crust of Jewish rulers. We see that liberalistic economics necessarily lead to bolshevism."

Sioux City Has Its Fifth Police Chief in 7 Months

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Chris Dahl, engineer on the Terminal railway here, became the fifth chief of police in seven months today. He succeeded M. E. Farley, veteran detective, who has been acting chief for a month. The council warned Dahl that he must remain sober on the job or automatically fire himself.

Granted Divorce

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

When John Horacek, 23 years old, 824 West 54th place, was ordered to pay his wife, Dorothy, $5 a week temporary alimony, the court said nothing about the expense of mailing. Reasoning thus, John deducted 10 cents each week to cover stamps and the money order. If he does it again, however, John will surely go to jail, said Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday. At the same time, the judge granted a divorce to Dorothy, who is 17 years old.

GERMANY HOPES FOR AIR LINE TO U. S. BY SUMMER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The possibility of trans-Atlantic airplane service next summer was revealed today by Baron von Eltz-Ruebenach, the national minister of posts and communications. Speaking of the existing network of postal air services, the baron expressed the hope that such service, linking Germany and the United States, would be initiated with the zeppelin LZ-129 and "perhaps also with airplanes." It is surmised that plans for the service will be carried out with the aid of anchored steamers as floating airports, as on the south Atlantic route.

Fern Andra Denies Plan to Marry Torchy Peden

Fern Andra, Illinois girl who became a motion picture star in Germany, arrived at the Blackstone hotel yesterday afternoon from Gary, the home of her parents, and denied rumors that she plans to marry William [Torchy] Peden, six day bike racer. She went to the races last night for their conclusion. "But because you go to the bike races it doesn't mean that you are going to marry a bike rider," said Miss Andra, who was formerly married to Baron von zu Weichs zur Wenne and to Ian Keith, from whom she was divorced last spring.

Police Recover $6,000 Hijacking Loot In Raids

Patrolmen Albert O'Neill and Edward Mulcahey, assigned to investigate recent truck hijackings in the loop area, last night raided an unoccupied building at 1502 South Michigan avenue and recovered loot valued at $3,500. In a raid Friday night they recovered $2,500 worth of stolen goods in a building at 120 West Polk street. The merchandise had been stolen from hijacked trucks, police said.

HITLER CREATES 'PRIVATE' ARMY TO SPY ON NAZIS

Main Duty of New Force Is to Fight Reds.

GOSLAR, Germany, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Side by side with the army, the Nazis are energetically building another "private" armed organization for work that the defense forces can't or won't perform.

It is a special branch of the black uniformed Schutzstaffel, led by Heinrich Himmler, and has the task of fighting communism in Germany. This job was outlined by the 35 year old guard leader today at a session of the German Nutrition guild's annual convention.

Qualified circles declare the special guards also have the task of police duty in war time, and of watching their brother organization, the Storm Troops, and even the army "lest those creations want to become bigger than their creators."

Bodyguards for Leaders.

Generally, the Schutzstaffel numbers perhaps several hundred thousand picked men—the elite of the private armies the Nazis established during their rise to power. They form body guards for all the high leaders, participate in parades, and perform various propaganda and unifying functions. They carry sidearms, or none at all.

The special group, however, is equipped with rifles, machine guns and howitzers. It is estimated to number 12,000. All the Schutzstaffel are big, strong men. Few are less than 6 feet tall. Before admittance to any Schutzstaffel unit a man must pass strict mental and physical tests. His ancestry must be Nordic, Teutonic and Aryan.

The men are encouraged to marry, but their fiancées must undergo the same tests. From this group Nazidom expects to produce a better race—with the Nazi tradition from birth.

Must Choose Perfect Wives.

Himmler, a prominent figure in the "blood purge" of 1934, told the Goslar convention that "recognition of the value of breeding and blood" is the first requirement of the Schutzstaffel.

"Choose mates from those most closely approaching bodily and Nordic perfection," he advised.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler sent Rudolf Hess, his general representative, to bless a drive for more and better humans along the lines described by Himmler.

Physician Shot 4 Times by Dissatisfied Patient

New York, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Dr. Ercole Fiore, 41, was shot and wounded seriously in the apartment of a patient today. Police arrested Guiseppi Falzone. Dr. Fiore told police he had been called by Falzone, who said: "You operate on the nose and it's no good." Then Falzone fired four shots at him.

Recovers Heirloom

E. Hall Wight, a provisioner of London, England, was in Chicago yesterday after a trip across the Atlantic and the continent to recover a saber of the Napoleonic era which had been in his family for six generations, but which has been lost for 60 years. The saber was presented to an ancestor of Mr. Wight in 1806 by the Territorial Infantry regiment of New Battle, Scotland, at the time of the Napoleonic wars. An uncle, David Wight, took the saber to San Jose, Cal., and after his death it was taken out of the family. Mr. Wight made the trip to California where he purchased the heirloom. He stopped yesterday at the Morrison hotel en route home.

POLISH RIOTERS BEAT JEWS; RAID SHOPS IN WARSAW

Nationalist students expelled Jews from the classrooms of the university, paraded through the center of the city, attacked 15 Jewish pedestrians and smashed the windows of 38 Jewish shops and restaurants.

Police interferred and made 20 arrests. Six were arrested when another group tried to demonstrate in front of the Czecho-Slovakian legation.

William R. Harshe Weds Miss Mildred Lawrence

Miss Mildred Lawrence, daughter of the Frederick K. Lawrences, was married yesterday to William R. Harshe in a private ceremony in her parents' home at 190 East Chestnut street. The Rev. Duncan H. Browne of St. James' church performed the ceremony. The bride was unattended, while Robert B. Harshe, director of the Chicago Art institute, was best man for his son. Upon their return from a motor trip the couple will be at home at 1400 Lake Shore drive.

POLAND SEEKS FRENCH AID TO BUILD RAILROAD

Gain in Relations with Paris Predicted.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 16.—An improvement in Polish-French relations and cooler relations between Poland and Germany were predicted today in the government press, which emphasized the arrival in Warsaw of a large group of prominent Frenchmen, delegates to the annual congress of Polish ex-service men which opens tomorrow.

Col. Adam Koc, Polish vice minister of finance who recently returned from an unprofitable visit to New York bankers, has left Warsaw for Paris where he will renew negotiations with the French government concerning a loan to complete the railroad connecting the Upper Silesian coal fields with Gdynia.

Pact Revision Demanded.

Construction was begun several years ago with French capital, but the plans were so unsatisfactory that Poland demanded a revision of the agreement.

The intrigues against Foreign Minister Josef Beck in Warsaw are continuing and the French and soviet embassies, which recently prematurely reported his resignation, stated they have heard he soon will leave his post. It was reported here that the French government has informed Poland that any financial aid is contingent upon Beck's resignation.

The application of league of nations sanctions against Italy Monday relieves Poland of the necessity of purchasing annually $2,000,000 worth of Italian tobacco.

Poland obtained a loan in 1924 from an Italian bank which arranged the tobacco deal and the sum of $20,000,000 is still outstanding. The minister of finance hopes to make arrangements with American tobacco interests, which have asked to take over the debt in return for a long term agreement to supply tobacco for the Polish tobacco monopoly.

The Italian arrangements have been irking the Polish tobacco monopoly for many years since the poor quality of the tobacco supplied by Italy has resulted in a large decrease in the number of smokers in Poland.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The City Opera company's most ambitious project turned out a brilliant success yesterday, when "Rosenkavalier" was sung before a huge matinée audience in the Civic Opera house.

At first glance, the cast printed above seems to include everybody but Adelina Patti. On more careful study, you will come to admire the skill and care of the directors of the organization in choosing from among the singers of two continents a group that fits Strauss' intentions so well.

A few fortunate circumstances, such as the presence in America at this time of Emanuel List, helped the company to provide for its patrons a performance that can only be called startling.

Deserve Credit for Accomplishment.

"Rosenkavalier" is extremely difficult. Henry Weber acted as guide through the musical complexities of the work and to Desire Defrere went the thousand problems raised by the intricacies of its stage routine. Harry W. Beatty is the man responsible for planning and executing the rococo settings and lightings.

Lotte Lehmann repeated her Elsa triumph of Tuesday in a much harder rôle. The slightly pathetic figure of the Princess von Werdenberg demands a highly intelligent woman as interpreter—there are so many bittersweet subtleties in the rôle.

Grete Stueckgold was an eloquent and vital Octavian. During a portion of the opera a woman has to play the part of a man disguised as a woman, but this handsome visitor took all such difficulties in her stride.

Marion Claire, in the melting ingénue rôle of Sophia, figured in several of the musical high points of the afternoon.

Great and Small Rôles Ably Done.

Among the male principals, Emanuel List and Robert Ringling stood out because of the importance of their parts and their vocal and physical aptness.

"Rosenkavalier" makes extravagant demands on the resources of an opera troupe. A high degree of musicianship and histrionic ability is required for the so-called minor characters as well as the major, and Ada Paggi, to choose only one, gave a performance which among less brilliant principals might be a high light of any opera. Singling her out in this way should not obscure the excellence of Lola Fletcher's comic governess and Mark Love's pompous police commissioner. Half a dozen more citations are due but space forbids.

"RIGOLETTO"

One can write more temperately of the evening performance of "Rigoletto," although some features of it deserve the warmest praise.

Despite the constant reminder of the title, we are likely to forget that Rigoletto is the principal part in "Rigoletto." John Charles Thomas made the jester's great sorrow real, and the sadness of parenthood spoke through his mouth. This, you will have to admit, is an experience you do not look for amidst the trappings of old time Italian opera.

Whether what follows is imagination or truth only the thousands present last night can decide, but it seemed that both Mila Kocova and Joseph Bentonelli improved mightily as the opera went along. The easy flowing beauty of Bentonelli's voice was a great deal less noticeable in the "Questa O Quella" than it was one act later in the garden.

Chicago Debunt of Kocova.

Mila Kocova comes from the State Theater of Prague, and was making her Chicago debut last evening. There will be an opportunity to hear her in recital here one week from tonight. Soon after that she goes to the Metropolitan for some appearances.

She can do the "Caro Nome" much better than she did it last night. If some slight misunderstanding marred the bigness of the close, why did she not repeat the whole aria? There was certainly enough applause to warant it, and these venerable operas do not suffer any from inconsistencies of this sort. The quality of her voice is excellent.

The City Opera company deserves some sort of public acknowledgement of its aggressiveness. How many troupes in the world have ever, in a total elapsed time of nine hours, presented such a galaxy of names as the afternoon and evening casts of yesterday?

The company begins its third week auspiciously. The high point of that week will be the world première of "Gale."

TRIBUNE CONTEST BRINGS THRILL TO BOYS AND GIRLS

Beautiful Gifts Go to Happy Youngsters.

Another happy group of boys and girls received prizes for getting subscriptions in THE TRIBUNE's gift contest. Many other children already have gotten dolls, skates, streamlined trains, or pool tables in the contest, with the number increasing each day.

Eleven lucky and industrious girls and five boys, among those who came to the second floor of the Tribune Tower after school Friday and presented their claims for prizes, had their pictures taken. Ten of the girls selected the genuine Shirley Temple dolls and each was insistent that she get just the style and color of dress that appealed to her. One of the girls, Bernice Kamark of 1211 Carmen avenue, decided she was too big for a doll and along with the boys chose skates for her award.

Hugging a doll almost as large as herself, 4 year old Helen Bricker of 3722 Douglas boulevard said she was very happy with her "Shirley." It wasn't hard to get the five subscriptions to THE TRIBUNE, she said. "All I did was go to my aunts and uncles."

Did It in Less than Day.

Roland Vercillo, 622 North Albany avenue, said: "It didn't even take me a day to get three subscriptions so I could have these new skates." Phyllis Hair, 7915 Kingston avenue, a striking little brunette of 9 years, said it took quite a little work to win her doll but finally with the aid of her music teacher and a subscription from her mother and father she was able to finish the job.

"It was very easy to get the subscriptions," said Alice Nelson, 11, of 3143 West 39th place, "and I think my doll is beautiful." Alice's 9 year old brother, Raymond, got in the picture with his sister although he has not won a prize yet. "I am working now so that I can get a pair of those skates," he told every one.

Many boys and girls are going to get dolls or skates from THE TRIBUNE prize contest but they do not know about it. Several parents appeared and took home the prizes to be saved for surprise gifts. The parents obtained the subscriptions themselves.

A Gift for His Sister.

One little boy of 6, who already had obtained a pair of skates, came in with five more subscriptions today and picked out a doll for his 5 year old sister who was at a party. "We are going to save it for a present and surprise my sister, so don't tell my name," he said.

When the contest started on Oct. 27, THE TRIBUNE had 2,000 22 inch Shirley Temple dolls, 2,000 pool tables, 3,000 Zephyr American Flyer electric trains, and 3,000 pairs of Nestor Johnson ice skates with shoes attached, all to be given out as prizes in the contest which closes Dec. 1. Those who wish may still enter the contest by calling THE TRIBUNE circulation department, Superior 0100, or consulting their neighborhood TRIBUNE carrier.

ANTI-BRITISH RIOTING IS RENEWED IN EGYPT; FIRE ON STUDENT MOB

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Anti-British rioting broke out in Egypt again today as the death toll in previous disorders was raised to six.

A government communique said police fired at the legs of students with whom they clashed at Zagazig and that two students were sent to a hospital. Six policemen, it was stated, were injured as the students hurled stones during the mêlée. Police broke up a demonstration in Cairo by firing into the air. Two students, wounded when they fought police Thursday, died today. Native troops were dispatched to Tantah, Zagazig, Mansourah, and other centers where disturbances have been reported.

Woman Found Seriously Beaten; Accuses Husband

Mrs. Helen Linskey, 30 years old, 4237 Broadway, was found unconscious last night on the sidewalk in front of 921 Edgecombe place. At the American hospital it was said her skull had been fractured and she had been severely beaten. She gained consciousness long enough to tell police her name and that her husband, Frank, a taxicab driver, had administered the beating. Police are seeking the husband.

Aunt of Bishop Sheil Is Robbed at "L" Station

Miss Mary Sheil, 1712 West Grand avenue, an aunt of Bishop B. J. Sheil, was robbed last night by two bandits who entered the elevated station at Paulina street and Grand avenue where she is employed as a cashier. The bandits obtained $8.30 from Miss Sheil. It was the second time in as many months Miss Sheil has been robbed, she told police.

TELLS OF SEEING LORING GIRL ON NIGHT OF MURDER

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A claim that murdered 27 year old Corrinna Loring was in Baltimore the night she disappeared from her home in Mount Ranier, Md., was advanced here tonight by a railroad station matron, who said her identification was "positive." The matron, whose name was held secret, was quoted by The Sun as saying Miss Loring talked with her in a station here about 2:20 p. m., Nov. 4. The girl, who was to have been married Nov. 5, was found garroted in the woods at Mount Rainier a week ago tonight. Police have failed to find a clew to the identity of her murderer.

Although investigators previously had held the girl did not leave her home until 8 p. m., Nov. 4, investigators attached the greatest significance to the statement of the matron who said she recognized the girl as Miss Loring from newspaper pictures.

The Sun quoted the matron as saying a young woman came into the women's waiting room of the station that evening. She told the matron that "they," who had brought her from her home near Washington, would return for her shortly because she had to be home before 9 p. m. Miss Loring is known to have had an engagement about that hour with 29 year old Richard Tear, her fiancé.

Test Pilot Hurt in Army Bomber Crash Near Death

Dayton, O., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Leslie Tower, injured here Oct. 30 in the fatal crash of the Boeing 299, America's largest bombing plane, was not expected to live through the night, physicians said this evening. Tower, the Boeing factory's chief test pilot, was one of four men who were hurt when the "air fortress" crashed as it was taking off on a test flight from Wright field, army experimental depot. Maj. P. P. Hill, chief of the army's air corps flight test section, was killed in the crash.

World War Veteran Killed by Corn Husking Machine

Pontiac, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Ola Huling, 39, was fatally injured today. He was caught in a cornhusker he was operating on his father's farm five miles north of Graymont, Ill. His father, Ed Huling, was at the corn crib. When the father returned he found his son caught in the husker. The son, a world war veteran, died soon after being taken to the house.

JAPANESE GIVEN SETBACK IN MOVE TO GRAB N. CHINA

War Lord Orders Aids to Squelch Freedom Drive.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Chinese sources said today a "death blow" has been given the movement to establish a separate government in North China, independent of Nanking, and under the control of Japanese military leaders.

Gen. Han Fu-chu, governor of Shantung province, these sources stated, ordered provincial authorities to put down any activities for independence.

Appeal for Support.

National government leaders in Nanking were represented as feeling the move for autonomy is premature and that it could not be successful unless backed by Japanese troops.

A force of Chinese troops, a dispatch from Peiping said, is on the march in Hopei province while Japanese troops are concentrated near the Great Wall. Japanese and Chinese leaders are conferring in Peiping.

Japan Withdraws Guards.

Tension in Shanghai, which has been high since a Japanese marine was slain on the street a week ago, was reduced today by the withdrawal of patrols of armed Japanese marines from the Hongkew area, where the killing took place.

Consequently the evacuation of Chinese from native sections to the security of the international settlement almost stopped. Thousands had fled their homes.

DIES BUT BODY CONTINUES WARM; DOCTORS AMAZED

MADRID, Nov. 16.—(AP)—What was first believed to be a case of catalepsy was announced today as "the most unusual instance of retarded decomposition in the annals of Spanish medical science" by a group of leading physicians.

The doctors held a long consultation at a morgue over the body of Amparo Brava, 48, a servant woman. She died Thursday, but her body had been warm since, and rigor mortis did not set in. The local physician, believing she was still alive, refused to perform an autopsy.

Physicians today pronounced her dead when minute traces of decomposition were finally discovered. Although her fingers and toes and other parts of the body were still supple, the consulting group said life apparently had been extinct since Thursday and authorized an autopsy. The woman dropped dead while doing housework.

Election Judge Accused of Fraud Asks Habeas Writ

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of Reginald M. Franklin, 43 years old, who gave his address as 12 West Lake street, was filed in the Superior court yesterday. It asserts that Franklin was illegally arrested Wednesday on a writ charging him with fraud while he served as a Democratic judge of election in the April primary of 1934. Franklin is in the county jail. He is scheduled to appear on the fraud charge before County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki Nov. 20. The habeas corpus writ plea will be heard by Superior Judge James J. Kelly tomorrow.

RIVER MAINTAINS 'NORMAL' FLOW DESPITE RAINS

Recent rains in the Chicago area have not been heavy enough to cause a reversal of the flow of the Chicago river, according to Horace P. Ramey, assistant chief engineer of the sanitary district. Rainfall reverses the Chicago river's flow an average of from 10 to 14 times each year, said Mr. Ramey, but during the fall—consequently that of the river—the level of Lake Michigan usually is dropping so that a greater amount of water can be carried "normally" by the channel. He said the level of the lake dropped from three to four inches during September and October and a proportionate amount during the first half of November.

CHANCE REMARK UNITES MOTHER AND TWO SONS

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A chance conversation between an Omaha attorney and a filling station attendant led today to the finding by a Nebraska mother of two sons she had not seen for years.

Edward McIntyre, 25 years old, and Henry McIntyre, 27, farm hands working south of Red Bud, Ill., said today they are the sons Mrs. Dora McIntyre of Omaha has been seeking. In reply to her telegram that they come to her, they said they were without funds for the trip and asked her for financial aid.

Marshall Nye, the attorney, stopped last summer at a Red Bud filling station at which Matthew Bergdorf was attendant. Nye mentioned he was from Omaha. Bergdorf asked him if he knew the McIntyre boys, who he understood formerly lived there. Nye said he did not. He drove on.

Yesterday Bergdorf received a telegram from Nye asking about the boys. Bergdorf sought them out. They told him they had been adopted by the late Adolph Schrieber, a farmer near Red Bud, from a Fremont, Neb., orphanage. Mrs. McIntyre said she had not seen them since they were placed in the orphanage.

Florist Arrested by Police for U. S. Quiz on Big Still

Albert Yarro, 35 years old, 4030 Crystal street, a florist, was arrested by the Maxwell street police yesterday at the request of E. C. Yellowley, Chicago chief of the alcohol tax unit. Mr. Yellowley, it was reported, wishes to question Yarro about a large bootleg still which was raided last March at 973 Cullerton street.

ROCK ISLAND ARSENAL SHIPS FIRST NEW U. S ARMY COMBAT TANKS

These tanks, smaller than the one rail, consigned to Fort Benning, Ga. which recently made a cross-country run to Washington, D. C., are designed for infantry use. They are of the caterpillar type and capable of a speed of 60 miles an hour.

Each tank is subjected to several hundred miles of testing over hill roads before leaving the arsenal for duty.

Civic Groups Protest Dirty Streets in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—While the city health commission demanded a grand jury investigation to fix the blame for "unclean" downtown Los Angeles streets, five civic organizations made formal protests against "intolerable conditions" and demanded that the streets be cleaned. Streets have not been cleaned for more than a week because of a political feud.

U. S. CASH GOES OVER THE SEA TO BUY FOODSTUFF

Farmers Here Paid Not to Grow Produce.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Money is going out of the United States at an increasing rate to buy foreign foods. Observers consider this a strange condition in a land of agricultural surpluses where pigs have been so plentiful they have been destroyed and corn and wheat so abundant millions of acres are kept out of production.

A big percentage of the money going abroad to buy foods produced on foreign soil is for hogs, corn, and wheat, or their products such as fresh pork, hams, bacon, and flour. All of these are products that farmers in this country have been paid not to produce during the last two seasons. And all of them carry a processing tax imposed by the federal government under the Agricultural Adjustment administration's restricted production program.

Imports Increasing.

There is a regular tarif duty on all of these products—hogs, corn, and wheat—and in addition importers must pay a charge equal to the AAA processing tax paid on these commodities grown in the United States. Even such barriers fail to keep these foreign foods out of the country. They are coming in at an increasing rate, far in excess of last year's imports.

Despite the opposition of many, including farmers, to restricting production following the 1934 drouth and to collecting federal processing taxes on hogs, corn, and wheat, the government went through with its reduction program again this year. Crops were cut to the point where American importers were encouraged to go abroad for more of these commodities. These food imports have been increasing even in recent months, according to reports of the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. These reports show, for example, that as late as August this year imports of hogs, corn, and wheat and their products totaled more than 5½ million dollars compared with slightly more than a half million dollars last year.

Live Hogs Imported.

During the first eight months of this year more than 24 million dollars worth of foreign pork, hams, shoulders, bacon, corn, wheat, flour, and macaroni alone were brought into this country. Less than 1½ million dollars worth of these foods were imported during the same period last year, and approximately 2 million in 1929. In addition 691,347 pounds of live hogs valued at a figure in excess of $52,000 had come in from foreign countries over tarif and processing tax barriers up to the first of September. Last year during the same period only 496 pounds of live hogs, valued at $45, were imported, according to official figures.

These import figures do not include the long list of foreign foods exclusive of the commodities that carry a processing tax. The total list of import foods brought into this country between the first of January and the end of August this year amounted to approximately a half billion dollars, or 130 million dollars in excess of the imports for the same eight months' period in 1934.

EMILE FRANCQUI, BELGIAN WIZARD OF FINANCE, DIES

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Emile Francqui, 72, Belgian financier who once was known as "copper king of the Congo," died today. Francqui last year, given dictatorial powers over the Belga, maintained it on the gold standard during a crisis.

Regarded by the Belgians as a financial wizard, Francqui began his career as an army officer. It was he who, in 1891, gained the Belgian Congo for King Leopold II. by leading a Belgian expedition into Africa.

After his coup in Africa, he went to China as consul general at Tientsin. Later, as a civilian, he gained important concessions there. He represented Belgium in the drafting of the Dawes and Young reparations plans.

Barton Smith, Ex-Head of Toledo Blade, Dies

Toledo, O., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Attorney Barton Smith, an active Mason, died this morning after a five years' illness. Mr. Smith was born in Joliet, Ill., in June 2, 1852. After graduating from the University of Michigan he came to Toledo. He became president of the Toledo Blade company until that newspaper was purchased by Paul Block in 1926. He is survived by a daughter and two sisters.

Fawn Orphaned by Gun Grows Up

Two years ago the upper picture, showing a fawn nestling beside body of mother killed by hunter, caused widespread comment. The lower picture is of the fawn as it appears today after being raised by Blaine Brannan, gamekeeper, near Bay City, Mich. The animal must hobble through life on three legs because the fourth was crippled by bullet.

ILLINOIS FARMS HELD 100 YEARS BY ONE FAMILY

Descendants of Buyer to Hold Reunion.

La Salle, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Two areas of Illinois land in La Salle and Putnam counties near La Salle, now comprising five farms of 160 acres each, have remained in the possession of the same family for 100 years. On Nov. 21 the descendants of James Alexander Jr. of Wheeling, O., who obtained a patent to this land from President Martin Van Buren in the 1830s, will hold a family reunion at La Salle as a tribute to their ancestor who had faith in Illinois land as an investment.

Although the family has owned the property for a full century, none of them ever lived on the farms, which have been so well managed during the century there never has been occasion to mortgage a single acre of the land.

Land Cost $1.25 an Acre.

Mr. Alexander, farmer, lawyer, and member of congress, became impressed with the fertility of Illinois soil on one of his trips back from New Orleans, where it was his practice to sell the wheat he raised in Ohio. At that time most farms were located on high ground, but Mr. Alexander believed that great fertility lay in the lower lands of the prairies and purchased from the government at $1.25 an acre the land his descendants now own.

On his death in 1846 title to the property passed to his daughter, Louisa Alexander Thompson, and is now held by the two surviving members of her family of six children, Mrs. George Brown of Cleveland, O., and Thomas Mitchell Thompson of Iowa City and Marshalltown, Ia.

Makes Numerous Inspections.

Although 85 years old, Mr. Thompson, an attorney, retains active management of the farms his grandfather purchased. The buildings on the land are modest, but he has taken great pains to see that the fertility of the soil was maintained. He has selected his tenants with care and personally inspected the farms several times a year.

Police Applicants Will Show How Agile They Are

Twenty-five hundred applicants for civil service police jobs in the Chicago park district have been notified by Stephen Forst, employment superintendent for the park district, to appear for competitive physical examinations at the Gage park field house, 55th street and South Western avenue, tomorrow morning. Mr. Forst explained that the tests will be made on pulling machines, gripping machines, and other such devices for strength testing. "Our policemen must be agile," said Forst.

Falling Glass in Burning Building Cuts Firemen

Firemen Arthur Daly, 29 years old, 7844 Laflin street, and Patrick O'Connor, 38 years old, 3751 West 60th street, were cut by falling glass yesterday as they helped extinguish a minor blaze in a vacant building at 616 South Wabash avenue.

WIDOW OF FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE L. G. STEVENSON DIES

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Lewis G. Stevenson, widow of the former Illinois secretary of state, will be brought here tomorrow for burial. She died at the sanitarium in Wauwatosa, Wis. Mrs. Stevenson, daughter of the late W. O. Davis, Bloomington newspaper publisher, and granddaughter of Jesse W. Fell, pioneer Bloomington and Normal civic leader, died early today of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Her husband died in 1929. He was the son of Adlai E. Stevenson, vice president of the United States during Cleveland's second term.

Mrs. Stevenson's survivors include a son, Adlai E. Stevenson, Chicago attorney, and a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Lives, wife of the American consul in Algiers.

YULE SHOPPING HOLDS NO FEAR FOR THESE TWO

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Two women who do their Christmas shopping early, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Minister Ruth Bryan Owen, sat side by side on a White House divan today with serene smiles at yule-thoughts.

Separately they have arrived at the same system of picking up appealing gifts as they meet them throughout the year.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she had her Christmas shopping almost all done.

Mrs. Owen described the "Christmas ship" on which she will sail Dec. 8, arriving at her Copenhagen post on Dec. 19 or 20, and said she already had composed a poem for her Christmas card.

She went to Copenhagen on the Christmas boat last year, too, and her poem told how it seems to come sailing in on a boat with a Christmas tree at the mast-head.

George Hill Dies; Retired Capital Correspondent

Collinsville, Conn., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The death of George Griswold Hill, 67, former Washington correspondent for the New York Tribune and London Times, was announced here today by the Rev. W. Herbert Mayers, rector of Trinity church. Mr. Mayers said Hill died at his home last night. The newspaperman, who retired in 1930, had been ill for some time. Hill, a native of Montreal, was educated in the public schools of Chicago, and attended St. Ignatius college. He covered the White House during the administrations of Taft, Theodore Roosevelt, and Wilson.

NEED POLITICIAN IN DEMOCRACY, SAYS EDUCATOR

Sigma Delta Chi Holds Annual Convention.

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Specia.]—"The politician in this country is indispensable to our democracy," John D. Salter, associate professor of political science, University of Wisconsin, told delegates and alumni attending the 20th annual national convention of Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity, on the University of Illinois campus today.

"He is a natural phenomena of public life today, and not a legal device," Mr. Salter said. He must have professional "it," in the speaker's opinion, to be successful.

Robert E. Park, visiting professor of sociology, said the English language has been altered by newspaper and magazine usage.

Reviews Syndicate History.

Elmo Scott Watson, editor of Publishers' Auxiliary, presented a history of newspaper syndicates in the United States.

"Every newspaper man should carry on some research in journalism," Alfred M. Lee, University of Kansas and head of the Sigma Delta Chi research committee, told the assembly. He said the fraternity, by stimulating and by publicizing research, will make useful contributions to the professional standards of journalism.

Delegates decided that the new national president to be chosen tomorrow should appoint a committee to study alumni chapters, their organization, activities, and progress with a view to an expanded alumni program.

Three are Initiated.

Philip Kinsley, CHICAGO TRIBUNE feature writer, W. W. Loomis, treasurer of the National Editorial association, and Charles H. Dennis, editor emeritus of the Chicago Daily News, became associate members of the University of Illinois chaper at model initiation ceremonies tonight.

The initiation team consisted of Everette E. Sentman, Chicago, president of the local chapter; Robert R. Dean, Ashton, Ill.; Alfred A. Moore, Yorkville, Ill.; Dave E. Welling, Elgin, Ill.; Elbert L. Herron, Shelbyville, Ill., and Jay R. Prillaman, Rossville, Ill., with Wesley Swanson, associate in English at the University of Illinois assisting.

JOHN KEYS DIES; SPORTS WRITER AND A WAR VET

John W. Keys, 38 years old, a sports and feature writer on the Chicago Daily News for the last fifteen years, died yesterday in the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Kowalk, 6449 North Nordika avenue, of a lung ailment resulting from combat service during the war. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon from the chapel at 6754 Northwest highway. Burial will be in Acacia Park cemetery.

Mr. Keys, who lived at 328 Lake avenue, Park Ridge, was born in Horton, Kas., and he came to Chicago in 1920 after serving on the stafs of the Kansas City Journal and the Kansas City Star. He served in the world war as a sergeant and battalion sergeant major in the 140th infantry, 35th division, and was cited for gallantry in the Argonne offensive.

Gen. E. D. Dimmick, Vet of Three Wars, Dies at 95

Palo Alto, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Gen. Eugene D. Dimmick, 95, veteran of the civil and Spanish-American wars and Indian campaigns, died at his home here today. Gen. Dimmick headed the honor guard when President Abraham Lincoln's body lay in state at the capitol. He was wounded in the civil war and cited for the rescue expedition to the Rough Riders in Cuba. He served in the battles of Gettysburg and Bull Run.

IOWA-ILLINOIS BRIDGE WILL BE OPEN TOMORROW

Horner and Herring to Attend Dedication.

Bettendorf, Ia., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A dream of a half century will become a reality Monday when the new $1,800,000 Iowa-Illinois Memorial bridge between Bettendorf and Moline, Ill., is dedicated.

Gov. Clyde L. Herring of Iowa and Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois will clasp hands in the middle of the bridge as the feature of the dedication ceremonies. It will be a big day for the tri-cities as it will be the first time in history that Moline has been linked with the Iowa shore.

Built with WPA Loan.

More than a year's labor, preceded by several years of planning and many, many years of dreaming, was required to complete the project. Erected at a cost of $1,800,000, $1,446,000 was a PWA loan and the remainder an outright grant from the federal government. The substructure was built by the Kansas City Bridge Co., of Kansas City, Mo., and the superstructure by the McClintic-Marshall corporation of Chicago.

The bridge will be open for public inspection from 8 a. m. until 2 p. m., but no vehicles will be allowed on the bridge during these hours. The dedication ceremonies will start at 3 o'clock.

Mayors to Speak.

Talks will be given by Mayor Merle F. Wells of Davenport, Mayor A. Henry Arp of Moline, Mayor John Bengston of Rock Island, Mayor Charles Carpenter of East Moline, and Mayor William Slover of Silvis.

At 6 p. m. a dinner will be given at the Rock Island arsenal cafeteria at which Ray Murphy of Ida Grove, Ia., national commander of the American Legion, will be the speaker.

The bridge is to be dedicated in tribute to the men and women who served in the world war. Its main span, 758 feet long, is supported solely by cables. The span is sixty feet above the high water level of the Mississippi river, allowing ample clearance for river craft.

WILLIAM RHODES, ADVERTISING MAN 35 YEARS, IS DEAD

William E. Rhodes, 56 years old, president of Rhodes and Leisenring company, publishers' representatives with offices at 307 North Michigan avenue and in New York City, died yesterday at El Paso, Tex., en route to Tucson, Ariz., where he was going in an effort to regain his health. He had been ill for six months.

Mr. Rhodes had been in the advertising business for 35 years. He was born at Chariton, Ia., and opened an advertising office at Des Moines in 1899. The following year he came to Chicago, and in 1912 he founded the firm of Rhodes and Leisenring.

The body will be brought to undertaking rooms at 1253 North Clark street tomorrow, but burial will be at New London, Ia., where Mr. Rhodes spent most of his youth. Surviving him is a brother, Lewis C. Rhodes, of Muscatine, Ia.

Die 5 Days Apart

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES A. WHEELER.

Funeral services for Charles A. Wheeler, who was separated by death from his wife of 58 years for only five days, will be held tomorrow morning in the chapel at 316 West 63d street. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery. Mr. Wheeler, who was 81 years old, died Friday, and his wife, Eva, died last Sunday. Physicians attributed his death to heart disease. Parents of both moved to Wheaton, Ill., in 1855, from different parts of the country. After attending Wheaton college together they were married. They spent much of their lives in Chicago, living last at 115 East 70th street. Surviving them are a son, Claude A., an architect, and a daughter, Mrs. W. B. Lowry.

KURT SCHINDLER, MUSIC DIRECTOR, COMPOSER, DIES

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Kurt Schindler, 53 years old, musical director and composer, founder of the MacDowell chorus, later known as the Schola Contorum, which he conducted for 17 years, died tonight in his apartment in the Hotel Wyndham, after a long illness.

In January, 1926, he left the Schola to accept an offer of S. L. [Roxy] Rothafel to take charge of the Roxy theater, then being built. The new association was of short duration, and during the season of 1926-'27, Mr. Schindler directed the Musical Forum, which he established, in a series of concerts. Lately he had devoted himself almost entirely to his duties with the Schirmer Publishing house.

Sensational news! A startling discovery that revolutionizes Foreign reception. Every 1936 American and Foreign Philco model now comes to you completely equipped with the EXCLUSIVE Philco Automatic Built-In Aerial Tuning System—an amazing invention that doubles the number of Foreign stations you may now hear and enjoy in your home.

With the discovery that successful short-wave reception depends on sensitive aerial adjustments, Philco engineers now bring you a complete system that automatically adjusts the aerial to match the wave lengths of each short-wave band—a system that seems to reach out with magic fingers and pull in the very program you want to hear!

Europe, South America, the Orient—A World of NEW Radio THRILLS!

No Foreign reception like this has ever been known in radio before. It is yours in the 1936 Philco alone! For the first time a radio set that is designed, engineered and equipped to give you the full thrills of Foreign programs. More power and volume on each station—greater clearness—noise and fading reduced to an absolute minimum. A radio, at last, that makes it really worth your while to trade in your old radio and share the vast store of fascinating entertainment that comes to you every day from foreign shores.

WHAT, NO PASSES! A BADGER RIPS INTO WILDCAT LINE

WILSON

John Wilson of Wisconsin carries ball for a smash into Northwestern's line in first quarter of yesterday's game at Dyche stadium, where the Wildcats registered a 32 to 13 victory. He picked up four yards. At this stage the Badgers figured line plays would get them places, but later they learned that passes were their best weapon and put across two touchdowns. The aerial offense failed to match the Northwestern running attack, led by Ollie Adelman, who crossed the Wisconsin goal line three times. A crowd of 20,000 saw the game which resulted in Northwestern scoring its second Big Ten victory.

IRISH AVERT DEFEAT IN LAST MINUTE OF PLAY

BY ARCH WARD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

The football player, not the bard, carried on where Andy Pilney left off at Columbus two weeks ago to lead Notre Dame to a 6 to 6 tie with a gallant Army eleven after all seemed lost.

The Army thrilled 80,000 who packed Yankee stadium to see the 22d meeting of football's oldest intersectional rivals by scoring a touchdown in the first quarter with amazing suddenness. It came on a beautifully executed 40 yard forward pass from Monk Meyer to Ed Grove that was completed on the one yard line. Grove fell over the line for Army's six points as Shakespeare tackled him.

Only Seconds to Go.

The longer the game went the larger loomed that touchdown. With less than two minutes to play, however, the Irish went to work with a fury that wrecked a season for Ohio State and almost upset Northwestern in the closing moments of play. Taking the ball on his own 15 yard line after an exchange of kicks, Shakespeare personally supervised an uninterrupted parade that Army couldn't stop until the ball was planted behind its goal ten seconds before the final gun.

It was Shakespeare this and Shakespeare that as Notre Dame drove up the field. To most of the 80,000 it was as you like it, but to West Point adherents it was the merchant of menace.

Let's take a look at the record. It is Notre Dame's ball on its own 15 yard line, about two minutes left to play and the score 6 to 0 in favor of the Army.

Shakespeare whirls around his right end for nine yards and Layden spins around the other flank for six and a first down on the 30 yard line. Shakespeare fakes a pass and reels off 11 yards for another first down. Shakespeare passes to Fromhart for seven. Layden tosses one to Fromhart for a first down on Army's 45. Shakespeare bolts through Army's left tackle for five, and then passes to Layden for a first down on Army's 29. The field judge glances at his watch. There can't be more than a few seconds remaining.

Shakespeare's pass to Layden is incomplete on the goal line and Notre Dame protests vigorously that Grove, Army defense man, held Layden so

Temple Backs Ram Through Hilltop Line

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A pair of bruising backs, Johnny Kusko and Vince Renzo, aided by a scrappy line, spoiled Marquette university's hopes for an undefeated season when they led the Temple Owls to a 26 to 6 decision over the hitherto unbeaten Hilltoppers here today before 20,000 in Temple stadium.

The Marquette line, outplayed for the first time this season, found itself unable to cope with the twists, turns, reverses, and smashes of Kusko and Renzo, who piled up first down after first down to lead the Owls to four touchdowns. Kusko, in for Dave Smukler at full back, proved himself the equal of the injured star.

Marquette, unable to go anywhere in the first half, during which it made one first down, put up a great fight in the second. Buzz Buivid and the Guepe twins, with Roy McMahon helping out at end, staged a dazzling aerial offensive in the third quarter to march 87 yards for the Hilltoppers' only touchdown. Temple, which had crossed the enemy goal line three times in the first half, again counted in the last quarter.

Buivid's Passing Helps Losers.

The Owls' superiority today was indicated by their first downs, 20 to 6. Marquette, unable to gain on the ground, took to the air for its only successes. With Buivid doing most of the tossing, the Milwaukeeans completed 10 forwards in 23 attempts for a net gain of 102 yards. In this department only were they superior to Temple, which completed three passes in ten attempts for 29 yards.

The Owls' steam roller went to work early and put across the first touchdown after 9 minutes of play. The drive started in midfield, where Temple received a punt. With Kusko and Renzo doing the heavy work, a first down was registered on Marquette's 38 yard line, and Kusko immediately drove through for another on the 20 yard mark. After a time out, he added 5 yards more. Renzo then threaded his way through for a touchdown. Docherty added the extra point.

Marquette managed to stave off several Temple threats until late in the quarter, when Kusko, Longsderff, and Renzo collaborated in another drive from midfield to the Milwaukeeans' 11 yard stripe as the period ended. Kusko ground out five yards in two attempts and then hit the line for another touchdown on the third play of the second quarter. Lauterbach, Hilltop guard, blocked the attempted kick for point.

An interception set the scene for the third Temple touchdown before the half was over. Marquette, passing desperately in an attempt to catch up, had one of Buivid's tosses intercepted by Ed Walker, Owl end, who hurried it back to the losers' 32 yard

URAM'S SCORING RUNS DAZZLE MICHIGAN, 40-0

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Thirty-five thousand spectators, mostly Wolverine sympathies, attended the debacle, their number from tributary territory being reduced by a morning drizzle and arctic blasts through the huge amphitheater.

It was a great Minnesota eleven, playing flawless football, against a fighting but futile Michigan squad. With their forward wall outclassing the home eleven and breaking up Michigan's running attack, which has not been notable all season, the Gophers had the ball most of the time. Superb blocking made the rest of the task comparatively easy, whether it was Sheldon, Beise or George Roscoe carrying the ball in line thrusts, or the sophomore duo of Tuffy Thompson and Andy Uram getting away for long runs.

Michigan Sacrifices Secondary.

Because of Minnesota's power, Michigan was forced to play what amounted to a nine man line much of the time on defense. Thus, when elusive Gophers passed the scrimmage line, through which their blockers had cleared the way, Michigan's two secondary defense players were taken out by interference.

Michigan had hoped for a dry, fast field. The tarpaulin cover was removed an hour before the kickoff, leaving a slippery surface. The footing would not have changed the result, although Minnesota ball carriers twice slipped and fell without being tackled when seemingly on the way to touchdowns. Michigan had hopes for some of the breaks traditionally in its favor in previous contests, but there were no breaks. Considering the moist ball, the contest was notable in furnishing only one fumble in 60 minutes, that by Whitrock of the Gophers who recovered his own juggle with the loss of only one yard.

They Held Twice, Anyway.

Michigan supporters, here and afar, looking for some salvage from the unhappy scene, may bestow plaudits on Capt. Bill Renner and Matt Patanelli for unflinching defense all afternoon; to Chris Everhardus for several brilliant runs and what ball carrying was done, and to the remainder

Northwestern's Runs Defeat Wisconsin's Passes, 32-13

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Football fans who love everything that a bang up open game of football can produce should feel very sad if they weren't among the 20,000 who saw Northwestern's Wildcats beat Wisconsin's Badgers, 32 to 13, at Dyche stadium yesterday. The game had everything that running, passing, kicking can give to football.

The two teams weren't fighting for any kind of a title or medal, but they gave the customers one whale of an afternoon for their money what with the Wildcats making 369 yards from scrimmage to 18 for the Badgers, while the Badgers countered with 288 yards gained from passing to none so gained by the Wildcats. These startlingly varying techniques brought the two teams to a ratio of 14 first downs for Northwestern to 11 for Wisconsin.

Great Day for Backs.

Everything and everybody was rapid except the officials. Heavily bundled the officials were waddling about far from many of the plays. Their slowness afoot gave the Badgers several lusty yelps, but their work scarcely affected the ultimate outcome.

With the usual salute to the hard working linemen it is easy to say that it was a great day for the ball handlers.

Eddie Jankowski and Lynn Jordan, brilliant performers in a scorned Badger ensemble many times in the past, outdid themselves yesterday, Jankowski mostly as a pass receiver and marathon runner and Jordan as a passer par excellence.

Adelman Scores Three Times.

Don Heap, one of the outstanding heroes of the Wildcat triumph over Notre Dame a week ago, lived up to expectations, with individual gains of 162 yards. But he cannot be called the hero of the piece. The palm goes to a youth who never before had sparkled for the Purple, Ollie Adelman, a junior from Milwaukee. This young man made three touchdowns, all on magnificent sprints. In eight tries he made 117 yards for an average of 14.1. Three of these eight tries carried him over the goal line. Only one was a failure, when he was thrown for a four yard loss. The kid was a flash and he was more. A little feller, he made his second touchdown after battling off a half dozen burly gents who had their hands on him.

The passing and running thrills didn't get started until the second half. A thirty-four yard run by Heap early in the third quarter soon bloomed into the third Wildcat touchdown.

Call Jankowski Out of Bounds.

Shortly afterward Jankowski took a pass from Jordan on a play that started on his 34 yard line and ran to the Wildcat goal line. When the officials got up to the scene they decided that Jankowski had stepped

THREE UNBEATEN COLLEGE ELEVENS ARE UPSET VICTIMS

Ranks of the unbeaten, untied teams in major college competition were lessened by three yesterday as North Carolina, Syracuse, and Marquette were defeated in upsets. Duke whipped North Carolina, 25 to 0; Temple stopped Marquette, 26 to 6; and Colgate humbled Syracuse, 27 to 0.

Other unbeaten teams, notable Minnesota, which conquered Michigan, 40 to 0, in a Big Ten game, maintained their perfect records. Besides Minnesota, they include Dartmouth, Princeton, California, Southern Methodist, Texas Christian, and New York university, all of which were victorious yesterday.

OHIO DEFEATS ILLINOIS, 6-0, ON DYE'S LONG RUN

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—William Harrison [Tippy] Dye may only be substitute quarter back to Ohio State but as far as Illinois was concerned this dismal, rainy afternoon in the Buckeye stadium, this welterweight, the smallest and lightest player on the Buckeye squad, was the reason the Illini lost to the Buckeyes, 6 to 0. By its victory Ohio State kept pace with Minnesota in the Western conference championship race and now sees no reason why it will not share Big Ten honors for the first time in 15 years.

Young Mr. Dye decided the issue today early in the first period when he grabbed a long soaring punt from the toe of John Kanosky and danced a broken path to the Illinois goal, a net gain of 63 yards during which no one of the Illini tagged his person.

Dye's Run Decides It.

Dye's brilliant run occurred in the sixteenth play of the battle and the thousands might have gone home then unless they were interested in the game fight of the Illini, who twice in the fourth quarter halted the burly Buckeyes when they had first down within five yards of the goal. The homecomers—official attendance for the scrap was announced as 43,921—preferred to remain and thus they witnessed an anti-climax worthy of Illinois' fighting record.

Dye's run accomplished a victory which Buckeye power and passes could not produce. Dick Heekin's quick kick from Ohio's 44 yard line, which rolled to Illinois' four, provided the setting. Jewett Cole vainly tried to return the ball but after two yards he went down under a scarlet wave. Thus from his own six yard strip, Kanosky was forced to kick. He got away a long drive which came to Dye as the Ohio safety man retreated to his own 37 yard line. It was a 57 yard punt, a splendid effort.

Blockers Guard Dye.

Dye took the ball unmolested. He ran straight up the west side line to midfield where a teammate blocked the Illinois right end. Then Dye swung parallel to the goal and raced across the gridiron. The Illinois men had thought Dye cornered, but this change in direction carried him into the open. Quickly, a phalanx of Buckeyes joined to escort him and five of them bore down on Wib Henry, the last defender.

Henry backed up, hoping for help. None could come to his rescue and

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Gustav Kilian and Heinz Vopel, cycling newcomers from Germany, who got so very serious-minded after being scolded by American race officials last Tuesday, won the six day bike race at Chicago Stadium which ended at midnight last night. The surprising foreigners' margin over the second place team of Norman Hill-Jerry Rodman was four laps. The Torchy Peden-Jules Audy team was third.

The Germans, before 15,000 who had accepted a boost in turnstile tarif to see the finale, were returned victors after giving much better known performers a grand lesson in bike propelling. Last night, especially, they made such famed gents as Gerard Debaets, Torchy Peden and others look like kiddie-car chauffeurs.

Places Germans on Probation.

The riding of the Germans from Tuesday noon till the finish was relentless, daring, skilled, and heady. Warned by Referee Kramer after the second night of racing that they were not riding a satisfactory race in their first Chicago appearance in that there was evidence of a conspiracy with the Peden-Audy team to gang on Gerard Debaets and Bobby Thomas, flops in the race but highly rated at the time, Kramer placed Kilian and Vopel under probation with threats of keeping them out of the New York race which starts Dec. 1.

The rookies from Der Fuehrer's country were in the lead from 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon except for 30 minutes Friday night when Honeman-De Fillipo led. Incidentally, Honeman had dropped to last place, 10 laps behind the Germans, two hours before the end of the race.

Maintain Technical Lead.

There were brief spans when Kilian and Vopel were tied in mileage, including a spell early yesterday morning when eight teams were tied in laps. But the Germans had enough points to maintain a technical lead during these close intervals.

Kilian and Vopel took a one lap lead during the jamming which attended the sprints yesterday afternoon. They maintained the advantage during a "non-union" jam between 5 and 6 o'clock when the stadium had

HOOSIERS RUN UP 24-0 SCORE OVER MAROONS

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Indiana university days on the home grounds of Chicago's Maroons are few and far between, but yesterday was one of them. The Hoosiers made the most of it. They ran, they passed, they plunged, and they defended so perfectly they never were pressed. And after sixty minutes of that sort of action had been reeled off on Stagg field the crimson clad athletes from the adjoining state were victors for the fourth time in their twenty-five seasons of football commerce with the Midway pillar of learning. The score was 24 to 0.

All this unhappiness might easily be charged to the fact that Jay Berwanger, the back who challenges anybody's all-American judgment, was present only in spirit. Hampered by injuries suffered in his epic struggle against Ohio a week ago, the tow headed sensation from Dubuque, Ia., couldn't travel. He stayed in there most of the time, but the effort to make a memorable occasion of the last home appearance of his collegiate career was just a swan song out of tune.

Hoosiers Take Lead.

The Hoosiers, foiled in a point getting attempt in the first period because Capt. Reed Kelso's toe wasn't clicking at the moment, swung into action in the second quarter with their first ten points. The last three of these came because the captain's toe did click. Then the wearers of the crimson fairly tore up the turf in the final quarter with two touchdowns, one coming as the struggle ended, to add a deft touch to a battle that otherwise was drab for the 12,000 spectators.

The Maroons, unable to show any of the dash that a week ago lifted them to a temporary 13 to 0 lead over Ohio, mustered real strength on only one occasion. Right at the start they paraded from their own 20 yard line to the 20 yard line of the enemy. An intercepted pass, the first of four in which the Hoosiers played the part of larceny artists, put a stop to that. The Maroons made another bid in the fourth quarter but it was mild. It went only to Indiana's 39 yard line and concluded when another pass was intercepted.

Indiana Total 350 Yards.

If figures mean anything, the Hoosiers earned all they carried away. In total gains they piled up 350 yards against 148 for Chicago. The Hoosiers registered 13 first downs to 11 for the Maroons. Only 6 of the latter were on ground plays. The Maroons,

Capt. Dick Crayne of Iowa barely manages to gain in a line smash against Purdue yesterday at Lafayette. Crayne's feet are sticking out of the pile of players. PURDUE DEFEATS IOWA, 12 TO 6, ON M'GANNON'S RUN

Half Back Intercepts Pass, Races 65 Yards.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 16.—Purdue's Boilermakers, robust young men who ordinarily are accustomed to hearty football fare, but who have been existing on a misery ration of seven points for the last three weeks, enjoyed a feast this afternoon at Ross-Ade stadium. This banquet consisted of two savory touchdowns which sent them off with a 12 to 6 victory over Iowa's Hawkeyes before a Dad's day gathering of 17,000.

The victory was the Boilermakers' first in four weeks, and gave them a .600 rating in the Western conference standings with three victories and two defeats. After having been able to score but one touchdown in losing their last three games, the Purdue lads today, functioning for the first time since their opener as a physically able unit, looked more like their old selves. The triumph also enabled them to even their all-time series with Iowa at seven decisions each.

Mr. Isbell's Right Arm Is O. K.

The Boilermakers have Ceril Isbell, Frank Loebs, and Tom McGannon to thank for those two appetizing scores of the afternoon. Isbell, the Texas sophomore, whose eccentric left shoulder went amiss in the first game against Northwestern has had his left arm in a fancy harness which allows his arm only about six inches of freedom. His right arm is doing quite nicely, however, as attested by a perfect spot pass to Loebs early in the second quarter for the first Purdue touchdown, one on which Loebs incidentally made a catch as neat as the toss.

There Goes McGannon!

To McGannon, the elusive Evansville sophomore, who has taken Jim Carter's place in Purdue hearts, goes the credit for the victory, however. After Iowa had come back to tie the score in the first minute of the third period, on a pass from the fleet Oze Simmons to Homer Harris, colored Hawkeye end, McGannon decided to do a little catching himself.

He detained Simmons' pitch on his own 35 yard line, and then, after wriggling his way through what few Hawkeyes were on balance, he skittered up the center of the field 65 yards for a touchdown.

Aside from these valuable contributions to the afternoon's success, Purdue supporters can be proud of the manner in which every Boilermaker conducted himself whenever Simmons had the ball. The crowd at first shuddered when the colored boy from Fort Worth, who has been toting a football well and often against Iowa's foes this autumn, got his hands on the ball, but they were reassured by the end of the first half by the unceasing vigilance of the Boilermakers, notably the linemen. Aside from his touchdown pass to Harris, Oze went nowhere, being restrained to 13 yards in ten attempts from scrimmage.

Iowa Leads in Ground Gained.

Counting plays from scrimmage, passes, and runbacks of punts and interceptions, the Boilermakers showed a total of 300 yards against Iowa's 311. Purdue produced eight first downs against Iowa's six. Of nine Boilermaker passes, three were completed for a gain of 50 yards; four were incomplete, and two were intercepted. The Hawkeyes threw twenty-two for a total of 104 yards, eight being complete and four intercepted. Purdue held the Iowans to 55 yards on running plays.

Iowa Stopped on 10 Yard Line.

Selby made a nice return of Crayne's opening kickoff to his own 36 yard stripe, and then took the ball to the Iowa 46 yard line, in two smashes, whence Isbell finally punted to Iowa's 26 yard line. Crayne twice failed to gain, and quick kicked to Gift, who fumbled, and Osmaloski recovered for Iowa on the Purdue 34 yard line. Crayne, on the first play, appeared in the clear until Loebs pulled him down on the 17 yard mark. Simmons and Bowlin were halted at the line, and Drake stopped Bowlin again. Crayne's pass to Bowlin was incomplete, and the Hawkeye threat was ended.

After a punt exchange, Crayne dubbed a punt, Bell recovering for Purdue on the Purdue 45 yard line. On fourth down, Isbell, on a reverse, broke off tackle for eight yards and a first down on the Iowa 42 yard line. Isbell and Drake made it first down on the Hawkeye 30 yard mark. Iowa took the ball when Isbell was thrown for a 12 yard loss as the quarter ended.

Loebs Scores On Pass.

Crayne then punted to the Purdue 34 yard mark. Isbell dashed around end for nine yards to start the touchdown parade. On the next play he passed to Loebs, who was downed on the Iowa 30 yard line. Isbell and Drake picked up five yards, and McGannon twisted his way to the Hawkeye 15 yard line. Purdue was penalized for offside. Finally, on fourth down, Isbell threw a spot pass to Loebs, who made a grand running catch at the three yard line and romped over for a touchdown. Isbell's try for the extra point was low, and the Boilermakers led, 6 to 0.

In the last two minutes of the half, Simmons intercepted a pass after it had popped out of Loeb's arms, and sped down the sidelines to Purdue's 34 yard line. Bell intercepted an Iowa pass as the half ended.

Iowa Ties It Up.

The Hawkeyes made it 6 to 6 in less than a half minute at the opening of the third quarter. Lannon returned Woltman's weak kickoff to the Purdue 48 yard line. On second down Simmons passed to Harris, who was in the clear with only a 15 yard sprint for a touchdown. Crayne's kick for the extra point was wide.

Loebs took Crayne's kickoff after the Iowa touchdown and attempted a lateral pass which was fumbled, but Bell recovered on his own 20 yard line. An offside penalty and a seven yard gain by McGannon made it first down on the 32 yard mark. Isbell then fumbled while trying to race around right end, and Lannon recovered for Iowa on the Purdue 40 yard line. Simmons and Crayne were stopped, and then Simmons tossed the flat pass, intended for Lamb, which McGannon intercepted on his 35 yard line and carried it down the field for a touchdown. Isbell's kick for the extra point was short.

Simmons Has Tough Time.

Except for the opening minutes, practically all of the fourth quarter action ensued in Iowa territory where the Boilermaker forwards were doing a neat job of keeping Simmons in check.

Simmons was injured in the final minute, and went out protesting. On the next play, Lamb, from his 35 yard line, passed to Crayne, who ran to the Purdue 32 yard line. The game ended when Drake intercepted another pass.

ILLINOIS B TEAM WINS, 14-13, FROM NOTRE DAME

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Illinois' B team beat the Notre Dame reserves today, 14 to 13. Glazer scored for Illinois in the first quarter when he retrieved the ball and ran for a touchdown after the Illini had blocked a punt. Leonette kicked goal.

In the second quarter McGuire caught a pass from Snell and scored for the Irish. In the second half Pearson ran twenty-five yards for the second Illinois touchdown, after which Newlin kicked goal. Crowdy intercepted a lateral from Tischler in the last quarter and scored a touchdown for Notre Dame. The try for the extra point was good.

WILLIAMS BEATS AMHERST, 13-0, TO CLAIM TITLE

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Eddie Stanley, leading scorer of the east, made two touchdowns as Williams trounced Amherst, 13 to 0, today to capture the Little Three championship. The scoring was in the first and last periods.

The 53d meeting between Amherst and Williams was witnessed by 11,000.

Defeated only by Princeton—14 to 7—early in the year, Williams lays claim to being one of the best small college teams in the east, as well as Little Three champions.

Pitt Pounds Husker Line to Triumph, 6-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Pittsburgh's football team nailed Nebraska's offense to the ground this afternoon, chopped holes in the defense, and scored a 6 to 0 triumph over the Cornhuskers, champions of the Big Six conference.

Sophomore Frank Patrick, 200 pounds of power and speed, split the westerners' line for a touchdown early in the second period to the cheers of 35,000.

He missed the kick and the scoring was over, but the Panthers, leading the fight all afternoon, further demonstrated their superiority by clicking off 12 first downs to 4 for Nebraska and gaining 188 yards from scrimmage to the invaders' 54.

Husker Line Pounded Down.

Led by Lloyd Cardwell and Sam Francis, the Cornhuskers presented a back field that chilled the hearts of Pitt followers even in the final minutes.

But the brawny Nebraska line was pounded down by the fast charging Panthers and their backs were at the mercy of Pitt tacklers, particularly Acting Captain Vin Sites and Frank Souchak, the Pitt ends. This pair spilled the Nebraska ball carriers for losses all afternoon, smeared well executed spinners and laterals before they had time to jell.

Patrick Drives to Score.

After a first period, which saw the teams fighting toe to toe, Hub Randour, Bob La Rue, and Patrick pounded along to a first down on Nebraska's 24 as the quarter ended.

Patrick blasted through tackle for 18 yards on the first play of the second period, Randour hit guard for four, and La Rue laid the ball on the edge of the goal line. On a fourth down Patrick drove through the center for the score. He missed the kick.

Panthers Halt Advance.

Robert Benson knifed through for 11 yards, Francis made it first down on Pitt's 47, and on the next play John Howell flipped a pass to Elmer Dohrmann, who in turn tossed to Francis. The big full back was dropped on the Pitt 40. Here the advance was halted by the Panther line.

A few plays later Ray Morrison grabbed Leon Shedlosky's fumble on Pitt's 37 yard line. The Huskers took to the air for a last try, but their passer was hurried and their receivers blanketed. Cardwell got 9 yards on a toss from Henry Bauer. The other tries failed and Pitt took the ball on downs shortly before the game ended.

Maroons Beat Bruins, 1-0, on Marker's Goal

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Gus Marker's first period goal tonight gave the champion Montreal Maroons a 1 to 0 victory over the Boston Bruins as the clubs opened their 1935-'36 National Hocky league season.

The Maroons took advantage of a penalty to score. Roger Jenkins was sent off for tripping and on the next play Lionel Conacher passed to Marker, who caught it on his stick and deflected it past Tiny Thompson into the corner of the net.

TORONTO BEATS RANGERS.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Young Nick Metz, a junior in amateur hocky only two years ago, scored two goals as Toronto defeated the New York Rangers, 3 to 2, in a National league game tonight.

Metz scored the first and third goals for Toronto, his second coming with less than four minutes to play and scarcely a minute after the Rangers had tied the score at 2 to 2.

Metz's first goal, after a pass from Hollett, sent the Leafs away to a lead in the second minute of the game. Glen Brydson tied up the score in the second period and Conacher sent the Leafs away to another lead in the last minute of that period.

Lineup:

MISSISSIPPI IS 26 TO 0 VICTOR OVER CENTRE

Danville, Ky., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Centre college suffered its sixth defeat of the season today as a vastly superior University of Mississippi football team disheartened a homecoming day crowd by triumphing, 26 to 0.

Paced by Runt Hapes, who was in on every play, Ole Miss ran over the Colonels and piled up 17 first downs against four for Centre.

Centre was unable to get anywhere with the Mississippi line and resorted to passes time after time, attempting 16 and completing five against five completed out of 11 tries by Mississippi.

Hapes personally gained more yards from scrimmage than the entire Centre team, plowing through the center of the Colonel line repeatedly for big gains until replaced by Bernard in the final quarter.

Luther Beats Upper Iowa, 7-0, for Conference Title

Decorah, Ia., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Anton [Butch] Stolfa's seven yard dash around end gave Luther a 7 to 0 victory over Upper Iowa today. This victory clinched the Iowa conference championship for Luther. Grangaard dropkicked the extra point.

Toledo Beats Buffalo, 18-6, to Honor Coach

Toledo, O., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The University of Toledo observed "Jim Nicholson day," honoring its resigning coach, with an 18 to 6 victory over the University of Buffalo on a slippery gridiron today.

Kilian, Vopel Win Bike Race by Four Laps

been cleared of customers following the matinée. While the riders were rolling around on the flat at a snail's pace, feet on handlebars, etc., Debaets, who had been feuding with Peden and other riders, suddenly cut loose. Violation of the usual recess agreement caused a big excitement among track attachés as judges and scorers were recalled from nearby restaurants and retreats.

Germans Gain Five Laps.

At 8:43 last night the Germans really started showing the customers some classy work. They gained a lap on the field in a terrific joust with Peden-Audy and Lands-Dempsey. Two minutes later they gained another lap, chased by five teams. They gained a lap alone in a big jam which ended at 9:12 o'clock, and four minutes later they gained two laps, while Peden-Audy were gaining one.

Their foray at 9:16 had placed the German boys five laps ahead of the second place team of Hill-Rodman, six laps ahead of Wissel-Grimm, Schaller-Yates, and Lands-Dempsey. Peden-Audy were seven laps back and Debaets-Thomas were eight laps behind.

Kilian Hurt in Pileup.

The pedaling continued hot but with no one gaining on the leaders until the jamming was suspended at 10:20 o'clock. The Germans' newly won following got a big shock at this juncture when Kilian had to be carried to his bunk following a bad pileup with Dempsey and Schaller. It took 30 minutes to get the tumblers patched up and back on the track.

Results of the last hour sprints follow:

1—Rodman, Audy, Dempsey, De Fillipo.

LITTLE WOLF SEES BIG CHANCE TO BEAT O'MAHONEY

Chief Little Wolf, Navajo Indian wrestler, is sure he can overthrow Danno O'Mahoney, champion of the world, in their rematch booked at the Chicago Stadium a week from tomorrow night.

Wolf has the best record, match for match, of any of the Irishman's present challengers and he points to the fact that he has beaten several topnotchers in faster time than other contenders could achieve. Few have survived his Indian death lock specialty hold.

Judging from the two supporting matches signed on the show, it will be the best wrestling program ever held in the Stadium. Hans Steinke of Germany is to be one of the principals, with Fred Grobmier as his opponent. Pete Mehringer, tackle with the Chicago Cardinals, is matched with Jim McMillen in the semi-windup.

Bill Delancey Winning Battle Against Pneumonia

Danville, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Catcher Bill Delancey of the St. Louis Cardinals apparently has won his long battle against pneumonia. His condition has improved steadily, his physicians reported. His appetite is good and he no longer runs an excess temperature.

TONIGHT'S GAMES.

Hoppe vs. Layton.
Kieckhefer vs. Bozeman.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The bulldog affair into which the play for the world's three-cushion billiard championship has developed went on unabated in the Bal Tabarin bowl at the Sherman hotel yesterday.

Welker Cochran, San Francisco, bounded on toward the title when he slapped down Johnny Layton, defending champion, in a thrilling 50 to 46 match. Pounding along right behind him and ready to scrape all the skin off the back of his heels were Willie Hoppe and Arthur Thurnblad.

Hoppe Wins a Thriller.

They, too, had triumphed during the most exciting day's play of the tournament. Thurnblad captured his sixth straight victory when he beat Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, 50 to 37. Hoppe dashed along to his sixth triumph also, when he won the greatest thriller of the meet from Jay Bozeman, 50 to 48, in 37 innings.

For the first time since the tournament opened Cochran's right to dominate the field was challenged stoutly by Layton last night. The defending champion was in fine stroke, and his generalship was superb. He took a 9 to 1 lead in the fifth, and Cochran wasn't able to catch up until the 15th inning, when the score was deadlocked at 18 points for each player.

From then on they played with great caution, yet jumped on shots that could be made with great enthusiasm and successfully executed them.

The turning point came in the 33d inning, when Cochran was enjoying the lead. Layton started an across the table shot with great power behind it. The ball hit the cushion, sailed up into the air and just as quickly bounded back and hit Layton in the chest.

Art Just Marches Along.

Referee Durocher called the foul shot. Layton lost a point. He rallied gamely in the 43d and 45th innings and made eight points, and was within two points of the lead. The score was Cochran, 48; Layton, 46. Then Layton faltered. When he faltered, Cochran got busy again and made one in the 45th and another in the 46th to win and remain the only undefeated player in the battle for the championship.

Willie Hoppe turned back Bozeman in a game that Bozeman on several occasions appeared to have at his mercy.

In the final game last night, Allen Hall of St. Louis defeated Tiff Denton of Kansas City, 50 to 42.

INSPIRED HOOSIERS TIE UP UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO STAR—Jay Berwanger, playing despite an injury that kept him from practice all week, is stopped in an attempt to penetrate Indiana's line at Stagg field yesterday. Up against a superior line, the Maroons made only one sustained march, when they advanced from their 20 yard line to the Hoosier 20 yard stripe. An intercepted pass halted that march. Then Indiana started its running, passing, and plunging that brought a decisive 24 to 0 victory.

The attempt gained little, so little, in fact, that the Badgers were credited with only 18 yards from scrimmage. But passes were different. Wisconsin scored its touchdowns via the air and picked up 288 yards while hurling passes. Northwestern won the game, played before 20,000, by a score of 32 to 13.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The Bears meet the Giants today at Wrigley field. Nothing need be added to that statement to arouse football fans. Thirty thousand are expected to see the two old rivals renew their series, which has developed some of the best football on record. The kickoff today is set for 2:15 o'clock.

Both teams ended their preparations yesterday with a short workout, the Bears drilling in Lincoln Park and the Giants on a playground near Wrigley field. Both held lectures last night. Wrigley field, the scene of the game, on which each team's division championship hopes are greatly dependent, has been closed to players all week because of recent rains. The field has been covered and, except around the edge of the gridiron, it is expected to be in excellent condition for the fleet backs on which each team has staked hopes of victory.

Cripples in Shape.

On the occasion of their last meet, three weeks ago, the rivals were badly crippled. The Bears won, however, 20 to 3. Since that time Coach George Halas has been able to get his squad in shape and the Giants, with an off day last Sunday, have been fortified by the return of keymen who were unable to oppose the Bears in New York.

Giant-Bear games are always wide open, sensational affairs. In this connection, one need only recall the 23 to 21 game in the playoffs in 1933 and last year's tennis shoe incident in New York. Today's game promises to be no exception, although it is posible that the Giants, with Ken Strong, Harry Newman, and Dale Burnett back at their best, may attempt to run more than usual against the Bear line, which they believe to be below its usual strength.

The return of Strong, one of the league's best kickers, is expected to be a prominent factor in the Giants' defense. Strong's absence in the New York game placed the Giants at a great disadvantage and is said to have been largely responsible for the Bears' three touchdown rally in the last half.

Sisk Will Start.

Halas announced yesterday he would start Johnny Sisk at right half back. Sisk has been one of the most effective backs on the squad in recent games and has earned the starting assignment over Gene Ronzani, who splits his time between half back and relieving Jack Manders at full back, and Reds Pollock, the freshman sensation, who has not fully recovered from injuries.

Bronko Nagurski, the old Giant nemesis, who has been working out with the Bears all week, may be in uniform, but Halas said yesterday his injured hip, suffered in training at Delafield, Wis., before the All-Star game, had not healed sufficiently to permit his playing.

Bears Can Take Lead.

While these two contenders are clashing they will keep one ear cocked for announcements of the Green Bay-Lion game in Detroit and the Cardinal-Dodgers contest in Brooklyn. The results of these two contests will be as important to today's Wrigley field combatants as the outcome of their own affair, for the Bears must beat Green Bay to qualify for the title playoffs and the Giants are having all they can do to stay ahead of the Dodgers in the eastern division.

Each team is hoping for victory today, with the Giants lending moral support to the Cardinals and the Bears holding their fingers crossed for the Lions. Bear and Detroit victories will send the Chicagoans into first place in the western division and the league.

ELEVEN GAMES CARDED TODAY IN COUNTY LEAGUE

Eleven games are scheduled in the Cook County Football league today. Six teams in the league are still undefeated. They include Our Lady of Grace, Shawnee Braves and Roamers A. C. of the North Division and Sheehan's Taverns, Oak Park Senators and Ambassadors A. C. of the South and Suburban divisions. Today's schedule:

Gladiators A. C. vs. Athletics, Lake Shore park, 3 p. m.

GIANTS AND BEARS RENEW HOSTILITIES TODAY

The New York Giants, anxious to gain revenge for the 20 to 3 defeat inflicted by the Bears earlier this season, invade Wrigley field today. Ken Strong, Giant half back, injured early in the year, is back in the lineup today. This veteran is a great punter and place kicker.

Against the Giants the Bears have such offensive threats as Johnny Sisk, half back, who of late has been in top form. He's a former Marquette star.

Another player upon whom the Giants count today to earn revenge is Ed Danowski, also a half back. A former star with Fordham, his passing ability makes him dangerous in the pro league.

Western Pro League Race Tightens Sports Review of Week

The struggle for the championship of the western division of the National Professional Football league grew a little tenser last week. Green Bay's Packers continued to ride at the top by overwhelming the Detroit Lions, 31 to 7, at Green Bay, thereby pushing the Lions into fourth place. The Chicago Bears defeated Boston's ineffective Redskins, 30 to 14, to take undisputed possession of second place.

The Chicago Cardinals, whose surprising string of victories had kept them in the lead through the greater part of the season, moved back into third place by beating Philadelphia, 12 to 3.

Brooklyn, the only club in the eastern division which has threatened the supremacy of the New York Giants in any way, dropped out of its first place tie when Pittsburgh trounced the Dodgers, 16 to 7. The Giants were idle and thus maintained their lead.

Standings show that the strength of the league lies almost entirely in the west, all four western clubs having a record for the year equal to or better than that of the Giants, who are preëminent in the east. The standings:

WESTERN DIVISION.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.	Pts.	O.P.

Chicago Bears	5	2	0	.714	150	62

Frank Navin, Owner of Detroit Tigers, Dies.

When Frank J. Navin bought an interest in the Detroit Tigers in 1903, his ambition was to win a world's baseball championship. Year after year he saw the Tigers fall short of his goal. In 1907 he saw them win the pennant, only to fall before the Chicago Cubs in the world series. In 1908 he became president of the club, pushed the Tigers to their second consecutive pennant, again saw them lose to the Cubs. Again in 1909 he saw them win the American league title, then lose to the Pirates.

Then came a long Detroit baseball depression. Nothing that Navin or his managers did was able to lift the Tigers back to the pinnacle. Ty Cobb, the greatest star of his day, faded and passed out of baseball, new stars came up, served their time, passed on. Still Navin tried.

Five years ago physicians told him he should give up baseball, avoid all exictement if he valued his health. His answer was to borrow money, buy Mickey Cochrane, the Athletics' star catcher, and with Cochrane as manager led the Tigers to a pennant in 1934. His goal seemed near when the Tigers took a 3 to 2 lead over the St. Louis Cardinals in the world series. But again it was a false hope. St. Louis won, four games to three.

This year his dream materialized. Detroit won the pennant again, beat the Cubs, 4 to 2, for the world title.

Last Wednesday, five weeks after his great victory, Navin went out to the Detroit Riding and Hunt club, for his daily ride, a custom of years. A short time after he had left the clubhouse Mrs. Navin saw his horse galloping back along the bridle path, riderless. With a groom she searched the grounds of the club, found her husband unconscious, lying beside the road. He was rushed to a hospital, but died a few hours later of the heart disease from which he had suffered for years.

Navin was 64 years old. He had bought an interest in the Detroit club in 1903 when he became secretary and had been president since 1908, when William H. Yawkey, his partner, retired.

Blackhawks Remain Unbeaten in Hocky.

The National Hocky league's season went into its second week still on a part time basis. It will get into full swing this week with all teams seeing action in the five months' campaign that leads to the Stanley Cup playoffs. Chicago Blackhawks played only one game during the week, tying the Detroit Red Wings, 0 to 0, at Detroit and remained undefeated. Other scores last week:

Sunday—Detroit, 1; New York Rangers, 1.
Thursday—Toronto, 1; New York Rangers, 0.

Letourner Forced Out of Bike Race with Broken Toe.

With the toe taped up, Letourner took his place at the starting line that night. Twenty minutes later in the first spill of the race, Letourner crashed to the track and was forced out of the race with a cut over his eye. Georgetti continued alone until Bob Lipsett crashed. Then Georgetti teamed up with Lipsett's partner George Dempsey and went on with the race.

With the Letourner-Georgetti team out, a couple of young Germans, Gustav Killian and Heinz Vopel became the sensation of the race. They went into the lead Tuesday night, but last Friday night after 81 hours Bill Honeman and Mike De Fillipo went to the front.

Back came the Germans an hour later to regain the lead, which they stretched to five laps last night.

Burt Shotton, former manager of the Philadelphia National league club, and manager of the Rochester Redbirds of the International league last season, was appointed manager of the Columbus team of the American association on Monday. Ray Blades, Columbus manager, will pilot Rochester. Both teams are farms of the St. Louis Cardinals.

MISHAWAKA WINS INDIANA PREP SECTION TITLE

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Mishawaka High school's football team won the eastern division championship of the Northern Indiana High School conference here today by defeating Riley of South Bend, 21 to 0. It will play Horace Mann of Gary next Saturday at Mishawaka for the conference championship.

In the two other games played today, South Bend Central knocked Elkhart High out of the championship with a 13 to 0 victory, while Michigan City won, 15 to 13, over Peru, Ind.

CONCORDIA WINS OVER NORTH PARK JUNIOR, 7 TO 0

In a last minute drive yesterday Concordia of River Forest scored the only touchdown of a battle with North Park Junior college to win, 7 to 0. Concordia began a march from its own 20 yard line in the last few minutes of the game, and did not stop until Griffin went over the goal line. Co-Captain Weber kicked the extra point.

The game was the feature of the eleventh annual homecoming celebration at Concordia. The victory maintained Concordia's undefeated record this season. It also stretched Concordia's string of victories to eleven.

1,500 Dogs to Be Benched at Coliseum Show

Two days of activity in five judging and exhibition rings will be offered at the Coliseum next week-end in Chicago's biggest dog show next Saturday and Sunday, it was announced yesterday by A. F. Kramer, president of the Western Specialty Clubs' association, sponsor of the event.

Judging of the twenty different breeds included in the show will proceed continuously from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m. on Saturday and Sunday. The north annex of the Coliseum, with 3,000 ringside seats, will be devoted to the prize ring activities.

1,500 Dogs Will Be Benched.

The main Coliseum hall will be reserved for benching, where all of the approximately 1,500 dogs may be viewed by the spectators during both days except for bulldogs, on exhibition Sunday only. The south annex will provide informal entertainment, since all of the exercising, trimming, and grooming of the dogs for the judging ring will be done there.

Highlights of the judging and exhibition program include special performances by working and trick dogs, children's handling contests in nine different breeds and one open class, a costume parade, and the climax—the parade of champions—in which many of the outstanding dogs of the entire country will go through their paces.

The judging program is as follows:

SATURDAY.

JOLIET DEFEATS ROCKFORD, 22-0, FOR BIG 7 TITLE

Joliet High school's heavyweight football team won the Big Seven championship by defeating Rockford, 22 to 0, at Joliet yesterday. Joliet finished its season with four victories and one defeat.

The Rockford lightweights evened the score by playing a 6 to 6 tie with Joliet to annex the conference title.

Week Boxing, Mat Schedule Proves Heavy

This week's Chicago boxing and wrestling schedule is one of the heaviest this year. Professional boxing shows will be held at Marigold Gardens tomorrow, Guyon's Paradise Friday and 124th Field Artillery armory Saturday. Amateur cards will be presented at Coulon gymnasium and 202d Coast Artillery armory tomorrow, Loyola university gymnasium Tuesday, St. Bernard gymnasium Wednesday, 132d Regiment armory Thursday and Madison Athletic club Friday. Wrestling programs are scheduled at White City tomorrow and Merry Gardens Wednesday.

Frank Sagilio, the Cicero slugger, will return to local action in the eight round headliner at Marigold Gardens. An eight round semi-windup between Milt Aron, Dubuque, Ia., and Puggy Weinert, Chicago, has added to the card's attractiveness.

Davey Day Meets Bernard.

Davey Day, west side lightweight challenger, and Roger Bernard, Flint, Mich., body puncher, will be principals in the ten round feature bout at Guyon's Paradise in what will be Carl Stockholm's debut as a promoter.

The show at the 124th Field Artillery amory, the first of a series of Christmas charity events in this city, is being presented under the auspices of the Fifth Ward Democratic club.

James C. Mullen and Nate Lewis, Chicago Stadium matchmakers, have arranged the card, the windup of which will bring together Billy Celebron, Rockford, Ill., welterweight, and Lou Halper, Newark, N. J., at ten rounds.

Celebron, managed by Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion, is a strong right hand hitter. He demonstrated this accomplishment in his march to an international Golden Gloves championship and a National A. A. U. crown in 1933.

Bouts on this week's boxing and wrestling schedule include:

MONDAY.

At Marigold Gardens—Bob Tinsley vs. Frank Sagilio [8], junior welterweights; Milt Aron vs. Puggy Weinert [8], welterweights; Bus Breese vs. Hershie Wilson [6], welterweights; George Bittner vs. Johnny Erjavec, heavyweights.

At White City—Bull Curry vs. Pat Newman, one fall, 90 minute time limit; Charles Grubmeyer vs. Toots Culver, Cleve Welch vs. Jack Sperling, Walter Elkins vs. Jim Landis, Eddie Slake vs. Bob Roberts, each one fall, 30 minutes, all light heavyweights [wrestling].

At Coulon Gymnasium—Wendell White vs. Barnell Johnson [3], and seven other bouts [amateur].

TUESDAY.

At St. Louis, Mo.—King Levinsky vs. Ray Steele, mixed match [10]; Dave Barry vs. Winfrid [Moon] Mullins [8], featherweights.

WEDNESDAY.

At Vancouver, B. C.—Ceferino Garcia vs. Gordon Wallace [10], junior welterweights.

At Merry Gardens—Several professional wrestling bouts.

At St. Bernard gymnasium—C. Y. O. quarter-finals.

THURSDAY.

At 132d Regiment Armory—C. Y. O. quarter-finals.

FRIDAY.

At Guyon's Paradise—Davey Day vs. Roger Bernard [10], lightweights.

At Madison Athletic club—Seven amateur bouts.

SATURDAY.

At 124th Field Artillery armory—Billy Celebron vs. Lou Halper [10], welterweights; Pat Murphy vs. Mickey O'Shea, welterweights; George Dixon II. vs. George Reilly, lightweights; Davey White vs. Sailor Born, lightweights, each six rounds, and Sammy De Pasquale vs. Sammy Scoglio [4], featherweights.

OHIO WESLEYAN WINS.

Delaware, O., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A plunge by Full Back Mohler from the 1 foot line in the last three minutes of play gave Ohio Wesleyan a 6 to 0 victory over a stubborn Marshall college team today.

ENTRIES CLOSE IN CITY BOWLING MEET TONIGHT

Expect 400 Teams for Tourney Saturday.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Increased interest in bowling and proof that those engaged in the sport have more money to spend are reflected in figures from headquarters of the City Bowling association, which will hold its 32d annual tournament, starting Saturday, Nov. 23, at the Schueneman West Town alleys.

This first big event of the season for Chicago district bowlers yesterday had drawn 372 teams, Secretary Al Sindelar announced, and with entries being held open until midnight tonight, he expects the 400 mark to be reached. Last year when the Pabst Blue Ribbons of the Classic league won the five man championship, 333 teams were in the competition.

Sindelar will accept entries today for all the events, doubles, singles, and five man, at the 29 West Randolph street alleys. Teams with averages of 900 and over will shoot in the major division and those with 899 and under will be placed in the junior class. In the doubles 370 and over is major division and 185 or over is the top class in the singles.

North End League.

Jack Sampayo and the Michelobs featured the rolling in the North End Traveling league. Sampayo shot a 290 game which helped him to a 702 total and the Michelobs totaled 3,067 to take the odd game from the Westers. Wally Daglow, leadoff man for the Roosevelts, topped Sampayo's total, however, when he hung up 704 to aid his team in downing the Milfords.

On North Side Alleys.

Bus Udell of West Ridge Recreation picked up a spare, got nine strikes and then nine pins for a 289 game, high for the season in the Northwest Traveling league. The big game helped Udell get a 678 series. Although the Faetz five shot 3,034 for best series of the week the team lost two games at North Town, led by Louis Fratini's 664. . . . Roosevelt Brewing banged out a 3,210 series that included an 1,119 game for two victories over Fuller Press in the Gold Coast Major league. These two teams and the Budweisers now share first place with 18 won and 12 lost. Wally Daglow continued his hot pace with a 716 series which gave him the individual leadership with a 207 average. . . . The league leading Raab Clothiers were jolted two of three games by Kruse Service, but they still hold a slight edge over Neumann Tailors in the Chicago Junior Traveling league.

Randolph League.

After stiff argument with Mary Ann Bread, the Birk Brothers, largely through Lellinger's 672 series, won two games and tied the Budweisers for second place in the Randolph league. Each has won 19 games and lost eight. The Mineralites increased their lead by winning two from Burlington Route and now have won 20 of 25 games. Among the best individual totals were: A. Butler's 701 for the White Caps, Maricich's 693 as a substitute on the Boyle Motors, Petersen's 691 for Roosevelt Brewing, and P. Butler's 661 for the White Caps.

On South Side Alleys.

Don Pinc registered a 721 series, high for the South End Traveling league, but his team, the Marzanos, lost two out of three games to Archer-Kedzie, which totaled 3,182. Milo Weisner's 206 average leads the league. . . . Kruse Undertakers shot 3,081, and Bruck-Wiesner Recreation, 3,002, for the best team efforts in the Bruck Major league. A. Plunge and D. Devito tied for the best series of the week with 664s.

Eli Maricich continues to hold first place with 19 won and 6 lost, good for 120 points, in the All-Star Individual league at White City. Today's schedule will be:

Here and There.

While shooting 2,821 for second high series of the season, the Burlington Comets hung up a 1,053 game in the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad league. Kennedy contributed 245, and Goodwin, 223, toward the big game. Individual honors went to Al de Roo with 647, high for the season.

Alex Sandquist, who has been hot in the Randolph league, banged out a 700 series to help the Red Devils break all records in the Butler Brothers' league. . . . E. Bulow picked up the 9-7 split for the second successive week in the Cuneo Press league. George Cesal Jr. led the office team with a 611 series, and his team, which is leading the league, totaled 2,713.

This afternoon at 2:30 the Pabst Blue Ribbons will shoot a house team at the Idle Hour and next Sunday this star lineup will appear at Waukegan Recreation. . . . This brings to mind the benefit match arranged by J. A. Tinney of the Pabst company in conjunction with the Stockyards American Legion post. The match will bring together the Pabst five and a team picked from bowlers of the packing house of the stockyards Dec. 1 at 8 p. m. at the Auburn Park Recreation, 79th street and Halsted, for the benefit of the nine destitute children of Marty Kehoe, former alley keeper, who died recently. Kehoe, nominal proprietor of the Auburn Park alleys, incurred heavy losses when the stockyards fire destroyed his old establishment.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Navy defeated North Carolina in a cross-country meet today, 24 to 31.

RANGERS INVADE STADIUM ICE TO BATTLE HAWKS

New Yorkers Prove Ability to Travel.

The travel weary New York Rangers who journeyed from their training camp at Winnipeg to open the season last Sunday at Detroit against the Red Wings, then treked to Montreal for a game with the Canadiens, then to New York for their home opener against the Maple Leafs Thursday, then to Toronto for a return engagement with the Leafs last night, will battle the Blackhawks at the Stadium tonight.

The schedule laid out by the trip makers of the National Hocky league would be a tough one for a team made up of the hardest kind of youthful athletes, but when it falls to the lot of a team which has on its roster more veterans than any other major league hocky aggregation, it is positive proof of the durability of pro hocky players.

Line Starts Tenth Season.

No reference to the colorful Rangers organization could be made without mentioning the Bill Cook-Frank Boucher-Bun Cook line which has started its tenth season.

This goal getting combination that in nine seasons of major league hocky accounted for 1,013 points came near being broken up when Manager Lester Patrick announced that because Earl Seibert, the Rangers' perennial holdout, was again running true to form by refusing to sign a contract prior to the start of the season, he would use Bill Cook in the stubborn one's place at defense.

Sentiment Wins Out.

Sentiment governed, however, when the schedule actually opened and tonight hocky fans will see the 39 year old world war veteran glide out to his old ring wing position on the Rangers' famed first line.

Lorne Chabot, Vezina trophy holder and regular guardian for the Blackhawks, who has had his left knee in a cast since Oct. 17, will participate in the practice sessions next week.

CHARLIE DRESSEN SIGNS AGAIN AS REDS' MANAGER

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Charlie Dressen today signed a one year contract to manage the Cincinnati Reds in 1936. There was no disclosure of terms reached. It was understood Dressen received an increase in salary over last year, though he lost in a quest for a two year contract.

"Charlie Dressen can manage the Reds as long as I am connected with the club," declared Larry MacPhail, general manager of the club.

Dressen in turn squelched rumors that he had differed with MacPhail over points of management.

"The report that I asked for a noninterference clause is the bunk," he snorted. "I have never said to any one that MacPhail interfered with me in a single instance on the playing field. He never did, and the responsibility was mine in everything pertaining to the playing end of the game."

DUKE HAMMERS NORTH CAROLINA FOR 25-0 VICTORY

Tar Heels Handed First Defeat of Season.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—North Carolina's Rose bowl aspirations were knocked to pieces today when Duke climaxed an ordinary season with a stunning 25 to 0 upset before nearly 47,000, the largest crowd in southern football history. Duke's victory also toppled the Tar Heels from the ranks of the nation's undefeated teams.

Duke came up with a powerful running attack to score in the second period, again in the third, and then counted twice in the fourth. North Carolina, however, made 13 first downs to five, but could not make them count.

Two of Duke's four touchdowns came after intercepted passes, while the others were scored on runs of 47 and 30 yards by Jule Ward and Clarence [Ace] Parker, respectively. Parker was the big star of the game.

ALABAMA, 38; GEORGIA TECH, 7.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Alabama swept over Georgia Tech in a drive of power today to score a 38 to 7 victory before 12,000.

Georgia Tech's touchdown in the second period with Alabama well out in front was a spectacular bit of passing that caught the Crimson back field flatfooted. Edwards shot a 15 yard pass to Gibson, who took two or three steps and, as Alabama players swarmed in, lateraled to Koneman, who ran 21 yards for the score.

Alabama rolled up 462 yards, 355 by rushing, for 22 first downs, while Tech's gains amounted to 174 yards for eight first downs.

TULANE, 20; KENTUCKY, 13.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Tulane swept to a 20 to 13 victory over Kentucky university here today behind the passing of Troy Odom.

Kentucky scored first after a drive in which Ayers dashed 22 yards and Davis 20. Ayers missed the placement. Tulane's first touchdown came early in the second period after Odom recovered Simpson's fumble on the Wildcat's 37 yard line. Odom then passed to Watson, who dashed five yards for the score.

Tulane's second touchdown came when Odom tossed to Memtsas, end, who ran eight yards across the goal. Watson's placement was good.

Davis scored Kentucky's last touchdown after taking a pass from Jackson on Tulane's 40 yard line and weaving through a half dozen tacklers. Hay added the extra point.

L. S. U., 13; GEORGIA, 0.

Athens, Ga., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Louisiana State whipped Georgia, 13 to 0, today in a spectacular battle before about 20,000. The triumph of the Tigers about clinched the southeastern conference championship.

Louisiana outplayed Georgia nearly the whole game and scored in Fatherree's brilliant 95 yard run and a fourth quarter sprint of 22 yards by Bill Crass.

Early in the first period, Georgia worked its way to the L. S. U. five yard line, where the Tigers held. On the second play Mickal dropped back in punt formation and faked a kick as Fatherree cut behind him in the end zone and took the ball from Abe's hands to gallop the length of the field for a touchdown. Fatherree actually traveled 105 yards. Mickal place kicked the extra point.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN WINS.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 16. — [U. P.] — Texas Christian turned in a 28 to 0 victory over the Texas Longhorns today and preserved its record of being unbeaten this season. Texas Christian unleashed a barrage of passes to roll up its margin of victory.

FLORIDA, 20; SEWANEE, 0.

Gainsville, Fla., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Hub McAnly blazed the way with two touchdown runs today as Florida came to life in the last half and overpowered Sewanee, 20 to 0, before 6,000. It was the first Florida victory in six games.

VIRGINIA TIES VA. TECH, 0-0.

University, Va., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The University of Virginia and Virginia Tech battled to a scoreless tie in the rain here this afternoon, the fourth scoreless tie of the season for Virginia and the third consecutive tie with Virginia Tech in Scott stadium.

BAYLOR, 20; CENTENARY, 0.

Shreveport, La., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Baylor defeated Centenary, 20 to 0, before a homecoming crowd of 7,000 today. Soon after the first period started, Masters, right half back, went over for a touchdown after a series of passes had carried the ball to the Centenary 2 yard line.

Baylor scored two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter on a dash by Kimbriel, and on a blocked punt, which Buchanan recovered over the goal line.

BLACK HORSE POLOISTS BEAT SOLDIERS, 14½-14

The Black Horse Troop polo team nosed out Fort Sheridan, 14½ to 14, at the Chicago Riding club last night. With the Troopers trailing by four goals as they went into the final period, their hard riding and harder hitting brought them a tie with only a few seconds to play. Capt. Ed Greiner fouled on a difficult shot, causing the loss of a half point penalty as the gong sounded ending the game.

In the opening match, the Riding Club Bees defeated the Edgebrook Polo club, 14½ to 5. Bill Carney Jr., 16 years old, led the home club scorers with six goals, Harvey Moseley was credited with five and Leon Mandel got two. The Edgebrook trio divided scoring honors equally.

RING UP THREE MORE POINTS FOR INDIANA'S HOOSIERS

BUSH
KELSO
DILEO

Capt. Reed Kelso of Indiana, who specializes in field goals, finds this kick from the Chicago 14 yard line easy and sails the ball between the uprights for three points. That made the score 10 to 0, but still those Hoosiers were not satisfied. Before the Maroons left the field in their last appearance of the season before a home crowd Indiana pushed over 14 more points for a 24 to 0 victory, and its first triumph in the Big Ten this season.

OKLAHOMA BEATS KANSAS STATE ON FIELD GOAL, 3-0

Manhattan, Kas., Nov. 16.—(AP)—A thirteen yard place kick gave the University of Oklahoma a 3 to 0 victory over Kansas State today in a Big Six conference football game on a muddy field.

Bill Breeden, Oklahoma half back, kicked the goal to climax a drive started late in the first period featured by a thirteen yard pass, Breeden to Karey Fuqua. It carried to the Kansas State 7 yard line. On fourth down, as the second period opened, Breeden dropped back to the 13 yard line to send a sodden ball between the goal posts. Kansas State never threatened. Lineups:

KANSAS BEATS COLORADO.

Boulder, Colo., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Kansas defeated Colorado 12 to 6 today. After Kayo Lam, Colorado star, threw a 44 yard touchdown pass to Wagner in the first period Kansas scored on a driving attack in the second period ending with Peterson's drive over center. In the third quarter another Kansas march was climaxed by Hapgood's offtackle run for a touchdown.

QUARTER-FINAL C. Y. O. BOUTS TO OPEN TUESDAY

With preliminary sectional competition completed, the attention of the committee in charge of the annual C. Y. O. boxing tournament hereafter will be directed towards the staging of the quarter-final and semi-final rounds, which are scheduled to be held within the next ten days.

Quarter-final matches will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights of this week, while the semi-final bouts will be held next Monday and Tuesday nights, Nov. 25 and 26. The winners of the semi-final bouts —16 class A and 16 class B—will clash at the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday night, Dec. 4, in the final bouts. A crowd of 21,000 is expected to witness the title finals.

Three gymnasiums will be scenes of battles this week as the sectional qualifiers in the C. Y. O. meet—128 in all—go through the quarter-final round. They are Loyola university gym on the north side, St. Bernard's gym on the south side and the 132d Infantry armory on the west side. Suburban qualifiers in the tournament quarter-finals will meet at St. Bernard's gym for the right to advance to the semi-finals together with the south section representatives.

Survivors of the quarter-final round will seek to earn a berth on the Dec. 4 Stadium program when they meet at the C. Y. O. Center gym, 31 E. Congress street, in the semi-finals Nov. 25 and 26.

TOM OTTEY WINS CROSS - COUNTRY TITLE; 4TH IN ROW

Gloucester, N. J., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Tom Ottey, former Michigan State runner and national A. A. U. 10,000 meter champion, today became the first runner to win the middle Atlantic A. A. U. cross-country title four times.

Ottey, running unattached, beat a field of 66 to win the six mile race in 35 minutes 24 seconds. Joe Sullivan, Philadelphia, who won the national junior title at Trenton last Sunday, finished second in 36 minutes one second.

Ottey won his previous middle Atlantic titles in 1929, 1930, and 1931. He will compete next Saturday in the national A. A. U. cross-country race in New York.

pressed most of the time, took chances in the air to the extent of 20 passes, 8 of which were completed for 49 yards. Indiana connected on 6 of 14 passes for 65 yards. And Chicago didn't intercept a pass against the 4 plucked out of space by the Hoosiers.

The Indiana backs, helped on their way by the superiority of their own line, went places. Leading in this particular was one Ray Fox from Michigan City, Ind., who in 14 ball carrying attempts netted 57 yards, not to mention 19 yards on two successful passes he tossed. Corbett Davils ran for 64 yards in 15 attempts. But the high point in average yardage was reached by C. W. Norton, who answered two summons with 29 yards, 26 of which came when he twisted through the Maroon defense on a 26 yard expedition that netted the first of the two touchdowns in the last quarter.

Berwanger Gains 24 Yards.

The ailing Berwanger was involved in 10 ball lugging jobs and his total advance was only 24 yards. But he tossed 8 passes, 4 of them completed for 30 yards. Warren Skoning, the Maroon full back, topped his gang with 33 yards in 12 tries. Fred Lehnhardt advanced 11 yards in four efforts. Ed Bartlett in 8 summons finished with a net loss of 8 yards, but he threw four passes, all of which connected, for a gain of 18 yards. Adolph Schuessler threw four passes but none found a receiver.

The Maroons tossed a scare into their own rooting section right at the outset. Gillerlain took the initial kickoff by Indiana and ran it back to Chicago's 34 yard line where he fumbled. Anderson recovered for the Hoosiers. On the first play Davis slipped off right tackle to Chicago's 20 yard line. Two line plays failed and the Hoosiers then took to the air but lost the ball on downs when two successive passes by Huffman were broken up.

The Maroons rallied from this escape by staging a sixty yard march in which Berwanger made one contribution of 16 yards but the drive ended on Indiana's 20 yard line when Dileo intercepted a Berwanger pass. The Hoosiers lost no time cashing in on the interception but the effort proved futile. They swept down the field to Chicago's 5 yard line but were moved back five yards on an offside penalty. Then Capt. Kelso endeavored to boot a goal from placement but the ball sailed wide of the uprights.

Hoosiers Start Drive.

Just before the completion of the first quarter Berwanger punted out of bounds on Chicago's 48 yard mark. This time the Hoosiers couldn't be checked in their touchdown quest. After a two yard plunge by Walker, Fox broke through left tackle for a first down on Chicago's 35 yard line as the first quarter closed.

The second period opened with the Maroons being assessed 5 yards for offside. In two plays Fox skipped through to Chicago's 18 yard line. Huffman plunged for two more. Cherry branched out over right end for a first down on the 5 yard line. Walker made two yards. Then Davis tore through the left side of the Maroon line for a touchdown. Capt. Kelso's placement for the extra point made it 7 to 0.

Not many minutes after Indiana's initial score there came the happening that poured three more points into its collection. The Maroons worked the kickoff back to their own 41 yard line where Berwanger decided to toss a long pass. The foxy little Fox cut in and stole the ball out of the air. Then he raced from midfield to Chicago's 15 yard line before he was flattened by Fitzgerald of the Maroon back field. Fox continued to be an annoyance by reeling off 5 more yards at left tackle. Walker was thrown for a yard loss and Fox recovered three but the Hoosiers elected not to attempt another charge. Instead Kelso dropped back and registered a placement from the 14 yard line, swelling the score to 10 to 0.

After a scoreless third period Anderson intercepted a Maroon pass and came back to Indiana's 47 yard line before being dropped. The Hoosiers soon converted the interception into their second touchdown.

The initial play after the interception was a six yard smash through center by Anderson. He followed with two more drives that netted first down on Chicago's 40 yard stripe. Anderson broke through at center for three more yards. Cherry swung wide to his left but picked up only two yards. A pass thrown by Huffman to Schaefer was good for a first down on Chicago's 26 yard mark. Norton, subbing for Anderson, then broke through the Maroons' left tackle, cut back behind the line of scrimmage, and raced through an assortment of weary Maroon tacklers for a touchdown. Kelso kicked for the extra point.

Score Late in Game.

The final touchdown which the Hoosiers rushed across while the clock was ticking off the last few seconds started when the Maroons failed to make connections in a desperate aerial attack. Four tosses in succession failed and Indiana took the ball on its 45 yard line. After a three yard sprint by Fox, Obenchain, on an end around play, raced to Chicago's 31 yard line. Fox lost a yard and retired because of an injury. Indiana took a loss of five more yards for delaying the game.

Then Filchock passed to Schaefer, who was nailed on the Maroons' 23 yard line. Another pass sailed through the air, this one from the arm of Norton. Kenderine took the ball two feet from the goal line, but stepped out of bounds as he crossed the corner of the scoring zone. Walker then ripped through the line for the touchdown as the final pistol shot was fired. On the try for the extra point Miller fumbled momentarily, but recovered, abandoned the kicking effort and sprinted around Chicago's right end for the 24th point.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Held in midfield for three quarters, Drake university resorted to the tricks of aerial football today to score in the final period and tie Iowa State college, state rival, 7 to 7.

With only five minutes of the fourth quarter left the Drake Bulldogs made their first deep charge toward the goal. When a 20 yard forward pass was allowed on interference on the Iowa State 30 yard line, it was a comparatively simple task for Paul Rafferty, 163 pound half back, to plunge from the 1 foot mark for the score.

My Ubl, veteran Drake ball carrier and kicker, was called from the bench to kick the tying point.

Iowa State took command shortly after the opening kickoff and scored with ease in the first quarter. The touchdown was made by Rollie Rushmore, end, who stood unmolested behind the goal and accepted a pass from Bill Allender from the 6 yard line. Fred Poole place kicked the extra point.

140 LAPS CARDED IN MIDGET AUTO RACES TONIGHT

Drivers from coast to coast will clash in the midget auto race events tonight at the 124th Field Artillery armory, Cottage Grove avenue and 52d street.

A total of 140 laps will make up the program, time trials being scheduled for 6:30 p. m., and the first race going on at 8:30. The biggest share of the prize awards will go to the first four finishers in the opening series of 15 lap races and to the six leading drivers in the 50 lap event which will close the program.

A race will be staged for the cars making the best records in the time trials, another for drivers failing to qualify for places in the earlier events, and a third for cars of the four cycle type.

Chief interest will be centered upon the performance of Tony Willman, Milwaukee, who captured the title last season and is pressing Pat Warren of Los Angeles for first place in the point standing. Warren has returned to the west coast temporarily, so that Willman is conceded a good chance to take the lead.

CHAMPAIGN WINS, 20-16.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Champaign today defeated Pekin High in a Big Twelve school conference game, 20 to 16.

So. Methodist Triumphs Over Arkansas, 17-6

Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 16.—[U. P.] —Southern Methodist's strongest football team in years routed the University of Arkansas, 17 to 6, today in a Southwest conference game.

In the second quarter Bobby Wilson, S. M. U. star back, passed 31 yards to Tipton to put the ball on the 9 yard line. On the next play Wilson passed over the goal line for the first touchdown. Orr added the point. Orr kicked a field goal from placement in the third period from the 24 yard line to make it 10 to 0. Burt passed from the Arkansas 34 yard line to Turner, who received on the 9 yard line and dashed for a touchdown in the final quarter.

Arkansas' touchdown came late in the final period when a pass, ruled complete, gave the Razorbacks the ball on the S. M. U. 1 yard line. Rucker crashed through for the touchdown.

RICE, 17; TEXAS A. & M., 10.

Houston, Tex., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Texas A. & M. treatened to spoil homecoming for Rice here today, but failed to weather a third quarter attack and lost, 17 to 10.

Rice was trailing in the final moment of the third quarter, 10 to 7, when Friedman lateraled to Wallace for a first down on the A. M. 37 yard line. McCauley passed to Wallace on the two yard line, and Friedman plunged over.

Sylvester made the victory certain by kicking a field goal as the fourth period opened.

Hanover's Runs, Passes Defeat Ball State, 20-13

Hanover, Ind., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—The Hanover college football team, which went on strike last week, returned to Indiana conference competition today and defeated Ball State, 20 to 13.

Passes and subsequent long runs accounted for each of the touchdowns. Hammond scored two Hanover touchdowns, while Pottebaum added another. The latter and Armater made extra points.

Feasel and Hesher received passes from Sutton to score Ball State's touchdowns. Sutton added an extra point.

Marquette Opens Up.

Temple marched up field after taking the second half kickoff, but Art Guepe halted the threat when he intercepted a pass and was downed on Marquette's 13 yard line. Art went 23 yards on a sweep, and then Buivid opened up with passes.

McMahon and Guff snared three aerials to take the ball to the Temple 20 yard line. A forward lateral, Buivid to Art Guepe to Al Guepe, added 12 yards, and on fourth down Buivid tossed to McMahon in the end zone for the touchdown. Cuff's kick for the extra point was deflected.

Line plays, with Kusko again showing the way, scored for Temple in the fourth quarter. The big full back finally sent a shovel pass to Davidson for the fourth score. Capt. Peeples of Marquette blocked the try for the seventh point.

Overlooked, perhaps, in view of the high total were two great goal line stands reminding of Michigan teams of the past. One was right at the start on its 8 yard line after Tuffy Thompson had carried back the opening kickoff for eighty-five yards to be forced out of bounds by Earl Meyers. Four times the Gophers were repulsed in their charge with Renner, Frank Bissell, and Mel Kramer in the thick of it. Again in the second period the Wolverines took the ball on downs on their 3 yard mark.

Perhaps those goal line stands kept the Gophers from running up a higher total, which with another touchdown would have eclipsed any other setback in Wolverine annals. While Minnesota established a conference mark, 'way back in 1892, Cornell amassed a count of 44 to 0 against Michigan. Statistics, while overwhelmingly favoring Minnesota, except in punting, where Michigan excelled widely, hardly reflect the Gophers' mastery of the situation. Statistics:

FIRST DOWNS—Minnesota, 13, with 12 by rushing and 1 by passing. Michigan, 6, with 3 by rushing, 2 by passing and 1 by penalty.

YARDS FROM SCRIMMAGE—Minnesota, 487, with 432 by running and 45 by passing. Michigan, 134, with 99 by rushing and 35 by passing.

YARDS LOST BY PENALTIES—Minnesota, 50. Michigan, 15.

FUMBLES—Minnesota, 1, recovered by Minnesota. Michigan none.

Michigan Wins Something, Anyway.

Capt. Renner of Michigan won the toss and chose the north goal with a strong favoring wind. Everhardus kicked off to Thompson, who started down center behind great interference and ran to Michigan's 8 yard line before being forced out of bounds by Earl Meyers. Here followed Michigan's first goal line stand. Beise cracked the line for a yard. Patanelli stopped Roscoe with a yard gain. Renner brought down Roscoe, recipient of a lateral, at his left end after four yards. Beise lateraled to Thompson, but Bissell and Kramer were on the scene and Michigan took the ball on its 3 yard line.

With a favoring wind, Michigan averted the inevitable for ten minutes. Receiving a punt on Michigan's 39 yard mark, however, the thundering herd lowered its horns and drove ot the 7 yard line in five plays, with Uram's 18 yards as the longest distance on an off tackle slice. Beise next went through guard and tackle for the first count. Levoir missed the try for the additional point. Score: Minnesota, 6; Michigan, 0.

Bang! Another Touchdown.

It took the Gophers only two minutes to add another. The climax was a 59 yard run by Andy Uram outside the opposing left tackle in which he twisted away from Smithers and Sweet. Levoir place picked the extra point, making it Minnesota, 13; Michigan, 0.

Just before the quarter ended Uram scored again on an almost identical play dashing 71 yards to the goal. Lavoir again added the extra point.

Minnesota's fourth touchdown came with three minutes to play in the second period after long punts by Sweet and then by Renner had proved advantageous to the Wolverines. Taking the ball on Minnesota's 18 yard mark, Thompson went through tackle for 15. Pete Guitro, another Gopher sophomore back, soon broke through and ran 62 yards to the goal, but the play was called back and Minnesota penalized 15 yards for clipping. On fourth down thereafter, Roscoe passed over the center of the line to Vernal Levoir, who ran the remaining 15 yards for a touchdown. He added the additional point and it was Minnesota, 27; Michigan, 0.

On the opening kickoff of the third period, Levoir received, handed the ball to Tuffy Thompson, who ran nearly out of bounds to the left, came almost to a dead stop, emerged from a small opening and reversed his field to the right, traveling 92 yards for the fifth Minnesota touchdown. Levoir missed the try for point.

The final blow to Michigan's prestige occurred after six minutes of the fourth period, when Minnesota marched without losing the ball from Michigan's 40 yard line. With a first down at Michigan's 7, Roscoe gained 2 yards. The Wolverines were penalized to the 1 foot line for offside. Then Beise went across. Levoir added the point.

STURDY ILLINI DEFENSE HOLDS BUCKEYES

Bettridge of Ohio State plunges through Illinois line for three yards and Cole comes up fast to toss him. Cantwell (60), one of the 13 men the Champaign team used in holding the Buckeyes to a 6 to 0 victory at Columbus yesterday, is rushing up to lend assistance on the tackle. The game was decided in the first quarter when Tippy Dye returned a punt 63 yards for a touchdown. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

M'KENDREE WINS WITH RALLY IN 4TH PERIOD, 6-0

Lebanon, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Kenneth Wilson led the undefeated McKendree eleven to a 6 to 0 victory over North Central today.

With only two minutes to go the wily Wilson, leading scorer in the Little 19 conference, caught Spiegler's punt on his own 44 yard line and dashed down the sideline to North Central's 10. Then he took the ball through right tackle for the only score of the game. It was McKendree's fourth conference victory. The lineup:

CARBONDALE TRIUMPHS.

Charleston, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—After scoring twice in the third period Carbondale Teachers withstood a Charleston rally for a 13 to 9 decision today.

Carbondale climaxed a 70 yard march with a 14 yard pass, Hill to Broadway, for the first score. A few minutes later Hill dashed 48 yards for the second touchdown. Emery added the extra point.

Units plunged four yards across the line for the Charleston touchdown in the fourth quarter and Klink added the extra point. An automatic safety accounted for the other two points.

LADYSMAN AND POLYMELIAN ARE SOLD TO PUTNAM

Ladysman was purchased from W. R. Coe, and Polymelian from Hugh Fontaine, manager of Coe's Shoshone stud, near here, when the latter operated the extensive racing establishment. E. J. Tranter represented Putnam.

The price paid for Ladysman was not announced, but it is reported that it was nearly equal to the sum from the combined sale of Pompey, his sire, and Osculator, another young son of Pompey, at the dispersal auction of the Coe breeding stock here last Monday. Pompey was purchased by A. B. Hancock and J. C. Stone for $20,000, and Osculator was bought by Woodward & Smith, owners of Valinda Farms of Texas, for $18,000.

Just before leaving for home Putnam announced Ladysman will be trained for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, and in the event he wins, 50 per cent of the winning purse will be pai dto Coe as part of the purchase price.

Both stallions were on their way back to California today and will be taken to a farm leased by Putnam.

2,500 ATTEND LAST RITES FOR FRANK J. NAVIN

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—[U.P.]—The body of Frank J. Navin, who refused to relinquish management of his Detroit Tigers until they had won a world series, was placed today in a Mount Olivet cemetery mausoleum impressive funeral services.

Navin's chauffeur and barber rubbed elbows with leaders in the worlds of baseball and business who attended the requiem high mass at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament.

An honor guard of the Knights of Columbus stood at the bier as the Miserere, ancient Gregorian chant, was played on the organ. More than 2,500 crowded the nave of the church for the services, but less than 200 made the journey to the cemetery.

Those attending the services included K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner; President William Harridge of the American league, J. Louis Comiskey, president of the Chicago White Sox, and Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Tigers.

Ohio State Beats Illinois, 6-0; on Dye's 63 Yard Run

at Illinois' 15 yard line, near the eastern side of the field, Henry went down as if an avalanche had struck. Dye continued without pause to the goal. Then Sam Busick, substitute for Merle Wendt at left end, essayed the kick for the point. The ball shot to the right of the posts leaving the Buckeyes still vulnerable if the Illini could score a touchdown.

That opportunity never came, however. In fact, the Illini were hard pressed to avoid another touchdown and when the final gun had sounded must have felt that they had done better than their supporters had hoped.

Illini Use 13 Men.

Thirteen men carried the flag for Illinois. Ken Nelson and Francis Cantwell, at left end, and Charles Galbreath and John Berner at right tackle, were the only positions doubly manned. The other players fought for 60 minutes. A makeshift backfield, which included Kanosky, until this week a member of the Illinois B squad, could not gain consistently. These backs never threatened, but on defense, Illinois fought furiously.

Perhaps it is not fair to say that playing conditions favored Ohio State inasmuch as the Buckeyes could not score except by Dye's punt return. But Illinois, seriously outweighed, never was in position to pass, its best offensive weapon. Three times the Illini called for passes. Two of these were incomplete in the waning minutes of the first half. The others, a fourth period toss by Henry, fell far short of the intended mark and into the hands of Gomer Jones, Ohio State center, who returned eight yards to Illinois' 30 yard line and thus established the fulcrum for the Buckeye lever in the closing minutes of the battle.

Rain Hinders Players.

This was a drab, uncomfortable football day. A stiff north wind, carrying a drizzling, chilly rain for the first half, soaked the spectators and stiffened the fingers of the players. The rain ceased in the closing periods, but the teams must have been handicapped.

Five degrees colder temperature and the weather man's forecast of snow flurries would have become fact. The gridiron, protected until 30 minutes before the initial kickoff, provided an apparently firm footing. The ball, however, was difficult to control and almost impossible to pass, despite Ohio's record of four completions in seven attempts. These successful passes were due more to the position of Illinois defense and the Bucks' superior backfield speed as they ran at angles into the flat zones than to accurately timed throws.

Illinois manufactured five first downs, none in the last period. Ohio State registered 13 and played the game in Illinois territory. This game was distinctly a kicking duel. Consider 30 punts, seventeen by Illinois, a total of one-fifth of the plays for the afternoon and visualize the struggle.

Kanosky Does Kicking.

In its 17 kicks, nearly all by Kanosky, Illinois averaged 42.9 yards. Ohio State, in 13 kicks, averaged 39.8 yards. The story is told by the fashion in which kicks were covered. Ohio State returned 161 yards after kicks, 63 yards on Dye's one stirring trip. Illinois not only could not recover receivers as well, but could not block for its own kick returns by Cole, who brought the ball back 55 yards on the 13 Buckeye punts.

Ohio State fumbled twice in the first half. Both mistakes ended serious threats. On the first, Gene Dykstra took the ball for Illinois on his 21 yard line. On the other, in the second period, George Frederick ended a Buckeye march by grabbing the loose ball on Illinois' 37 yard line.

Inwood Smith recovered his own team's fumble in the third period to match Cole's recovery of Illinois' only misplay in the first quarter.

Ohio Makes Late Drive.

Illinois might have forced Ohio State into difficulty in the first period after Dye's run, but when Kanosky's punt, a drive of 60 yards, rolled dead on the Buckeye 1 yard line, Dykstra, in attempting to down the ball, carried it over the last line for a touchback, a loss of 19 yards.

Now let us review the closing minutes when the Illini, who must have been conscious of impending defeat, refused to yield another point and twice stopped the Buckeyes when their rivals had first down within a jump of the counting zone.

Capt. Jones of Ohio State started the trouble with his pass interception. From this point on Illinois' 30 yard line Ohio State gained 6 yards in three drives and failed to make a first down on the fourth and last chance. Illinois was offside, however, tho fifth offside penalty called against the Illini, and State had a first down 19 yards from the goal.

Buckeyes Are Stopped.

John Bettridge made three yards and then Stan Pincura, No. 1 quarter back, substituted for Dye, threw to Joe Williams for a first down five yards from the last line. Williams lost four yards in two trips at tackle and then Pincura had two incomplete passes to his credit, the last a long sideward throw which went out of bounds. It was Illinois' ball on its 9 yard line and Kanosky's kick to Williams gave the ball to the Buckeyes on the Illini 45 yard line. Pincura, suffering from a shoulder injury, was withdrawn from the battle.

Frank Antenucci plunged for two and then Dye passed to Frank Cumiskey for a first down on Illinois' four yard line, where Henry had forced the Ohio State end out of bounds. Bettridge smashed for two yards, and Williams went to within six inches of the goal. Antenucci then hit the line, but while he went over the ball was dead at the line of scrimmage where his knee touched the ground. Fourth down. This time Bettridge made a desperate effort, but Kanosky came in to hurl him back for a two yard loss and Illinois took possession.

Ohio Resumes Attack.

Kanosky kicked out to Williams, who returned 15 yards to the Illinois 31. Seven plays, all into the line, brought the ball to Illinois' seven yard strip as the game ended.

Illinois had a net gain of 56 yards from scrimmage, but held Ohio State to 89 yards. Illinois failed to complete a pass. The Buckeyes completed four in seven efforts for 77 yards, bringing the total yardage from scrimmage to Ohio State, 166; Illinois, 56. Figuring in punt returns and returns from kickoff and Ohio State led, 375 to 129.

Six penalties cost Illinois 40 yards. Two first half penalties on Ohio State, one for holding and the other for clipping, cost the Bucks 30 yards.

WASHINGTON WINS OVER MISSOURI UNIVERSITY, 19-7

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Bob Hudgen's runs, and a sturdy defense enabled Washington to win, 19 to 7, over Missouri today.

A homecoming crowd of 8,544 was held in suspense as the Missourians completely dominated the second half.

Four times in third and fourth periods Missouri had the ball, first down with goal to go, and each time Washington repelled it. Missouri made 17 first downs to Washington's seven, and gained 165 yards from scrimmage to 94 by the Bears.

Hudgens ran around his right end for the final 5 yards in a 39 yard drive that netted Washington its first touchdown in the first period. His second touchdown, in the second period, was a 60 yard dash. Chick Droke scored the other Washington touchdown late in the first quarter.

Herb Grenda, an end, scored Missouri's touchdown in the second period, taking a pass from Jack Frye when Missouri had the ball on Washington's 9 yard line.

BENTON, 59; ELDORADO, 0.

Benton, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The Benton Rangers crushed Eldorado today, 59 to 0. Leon Hall scored six touchdowns on end runs and played less than half the game.

ST. BENEDICT'S TRIUMPHS, 26-0, IN INDOOR GAME

Artful broken field running by Ervin Weiffenbach and an adept passing combination, Morty Ruberry to Leo Deutsch, gave St. Benedict college a 26 to 0 victory over St. Viator last night at the 124th Field Artillery Armory.

St. Benedict took the lead in the first five minutes of play. The Kansas team received the kickoff, but lost the ball on its own 45 yard line on an intercepted pass. On the next play, however, Gene Neff, St. Benedict full back, intercepted a pass and brought the ball to the St. Viator 42 yard line. After two plays had gained seven yards Weiffenbach went around end for 35 yards and a touchdown. Deutsch's try for the extra point was wide.

Fumble Is Costly.

A few minutes later Harry Evans, St. Benedict's left tackle, recovered a Viator fumble on his own 40 yard line. With Weiffenbach, Neff and Leo Danaher carrying the ball the Kansas team advanced to St. Viator's 2 yard line. Weiffenbach then went wide around end for a touchdown. Deutsch kicked goal giving St. Benedict a 13 to 0 lead.

Two long passes gave St. Benedict another touchdown midway in the last quarter. With the ball on his own 40 yard line, Ruberry threw to Deutsch, who was brought down on St. Viator's 33 yard line. After a plunge failed to gain, Ruberry again passed to Deutsch, who took the ball at full speed on the 5 yard line and scored. Deutsch then kicked goal.

Ruberry Goes 20 Yards.

Ruberry went 20 yards off tackle in the closing minute of play for St. Benedict's last touchdown. O'Rourke's try for the extra point failed.

St. Viator threatened to score in the first period, advancing to the St. Benedict 15 yard line. On fourth down Saia withdrew to the 26 yard line for a place kick, but failed.

St. Viator had another chance in the third period when Bill Walsh intercepted a pass and ran 35 yards to the St. Benedict 20 yard line. Three plays failed, however, and Frank Straub punted out of bounds on St. Benedict's 5 yard line.

James Bonko, Froebel High Football Player, Dies

Gary, Ind., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—James Bonko, 16, left guard on the Froebel High school football team, died in Mercy hospital today of injuries suffered last night in a football game between his team and the Lew Wallace High school team, also of Gary. Bonko, the son of Michael Bonko, 1260 West 17th avenue, suffered a fractured skull near the end of the game when he broke through the Wallace line to tackle William Hermes, half back, and was buried under a mass of players.

MONMOUTH STILL UNBEATEN; WHIPS AUGUSTANA, 18-0

Little 19 Leaders Score with Passes.

Monmouth, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Monmouth college kept its football record clear in the Little Nineteen conference by trouncing Augustana, 18 to 0, today. Augustana was helpless on offense most of the time, but good punting by Crippen kept Monmouth from scoring more frequently. Early in the game Laing returned a punt to midfield and a pass, Whelan to Newbury, put it on Augustana's 16 yard line. A lateral from Barnes to Whelan gained 12 and then Lusk took the ball over.

In the third quarter Reid returned a punt to Augustana's 36 yard line. A pass, Reid to McConnell, made it first down and Carville carried the ball through center to score. In the fourth quarter Lusk ran 25 yards to the 12 yard line and scored three plays later. Lineup:

Touchdowns—Lusk [2], Carwile.

Substitutions: Augustana—Ends, Fried, Richards, Graflund; tackles, Potter; guards, Hedman, Miller; backs, Grumley, Gelhaar, Innes, Edwards, Clark.

MILLIKIN, 26; VALPARAISO, 0.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—James Millikin scored a 26 to 0 victory over Valparaiso today, rushing over three touchdowns in the first half and adding another in the fourth period.

In the first period Ross fell on a blocked punt in the end zone and Burgener raced 55 yards to score after catching a 10 yard pass from Allan. Claudon scored in the second period on a quarter back sneak and Rochkes plunged over in the final period.

Valparaiso did not make a first down by rushing.

WESLEYAN WINS, 13-6.

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A forward pass for seventeen yards in the last two minutes gave Illinois Wesleyan a 13 to 6 victory over State Normal today.

Early in the first quarter interference on a pass gave Wesleyan a first down on the Normal 10 yard line. Clyde Peterson and Tony Kaska plunged to the 10, and a pass from Capt. Willard Benson to Myron Fulton, right end, gave Wesleyan its first touchdown.

Interference on a pass gave Normal a first down on Wesleyan's 26 yard line in the third period. Dick Welty dashed to a first down on the 2 yard line and then went over for the touchdown.

Late in the final period Wesleyan started passing, Fulton taking Benson's toss in the end zone for his second touchdown of the game. Benson kicked the extra point.

ILLINOIS COLLEGE WINS.

Macomb, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Illinois college defeated the Macomb Teachers eleven today, 18 to 6. Ed Hanson, former Schurz High school athlete, along with Russ Speuhr and Clarence Lorenz, also of Schurz High, led the Illinois attack.

Early in the first quarter two long passes, Hanson to Smith and Hanson to Speuhr, put the ball on the Macomb 4 yard line. Donat plunged for the score. Later in the same period, a forward-lateral, Hanson to Speuhr to Waller, followed by a forward pass, Hanson to Smith, put the ball on the 10 yard line. Smith carried it over.

Both teams scored in the second period, Hanson and Smith alternated on running plays to put the ball in position for the Illinois touchdown. Smith carried it over. Western scored on a long pass, Edlin to Carter, and a sixty yard run by the receiver.

BRADLEY, KNOX TIE.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Bradley held Knox to a 6 to 6 tie today.

A first quarter march by Knox terminated in a touchdown by George Ritchie. Bradley scored in the second quarter on Don Miller's lateral to Merle Berry on the eight yard line. Bradley made eleven first downs to Knox's seven. Lineup:

NOTRE DAME AND ARMY TIE, 6-6, BEFORE 80,000

Irish Avert Defeat in Last Minute.

he couldn't make the catch. No success. The field judge has the gun in his hand apparently ready to fire. Shakespeare passes to Millner, and this one is ruled complete because of Grove's interference with Millner's reception. Coach Elmer Layden rushes in a substitute. It's Danbom, who replaces Miller at full back.

Trophy to Shuler.

Then came the play that was to decide whether Notre Dame would return with its fourth consecutive victory over its oldest rival. Shakespeare, of whom you have read before, held the ball. Fromhart, whose cool leadership and expert forward pass receptions had played a prominent rôle in Notre Dame's brilliant comeback, was nominated to try for the point. It was wide by inches and the game ended, 6 to 6, than which there could be no fairer outcome of this particular battle. The game ended immediately after the ensuing kickoff.

There was a rush for possession of the ball at the gun. Shakespeare, serving as Notre Dame captain, made a grab for it. So did Shuler, Grove and Meyer of the Army. In no time there seemed to be scores of Notre Dame and West Point players in a wild scramble. They soon were joined by overzealous spectators, who climbed over the restraining walls. Disorder appeared imminent when out of the center of the mob walked Elmer Layden, the Notre Dame coach, with the ball in his arms. He trotted over to Bill Shuler, captain of the cadets, and placed the coveted memento in his hands. He was patting the Army leader on the shoulder as the two disappeared from view.

Typical Irish-Army Fight.

This was a typical Army-Notre Dame struggle. It was mostly along the ground, man to man, body to body, fought with unremitting fierceness minus any show of rancor. Both teams displayed magnificent spirit and able coaching as they swayed back and forth between the 20 yard line, unable to put on a consistent advance against charging that came in swiftly and tackling that seldom or never missed.

From the time the spruce, gray ulstered cadets marched into the stadium to the martial strains of their band until the last gun had been fired, there always was something to rivet the fans' attention, make him tingle with excitement and rejoice that he was there. Stirring music by bands from both schools, officers of all ranks, captivating girls in their furs and orchids and a crisp November afternoon set the stage for New York's biggest football day.

Notables Are There.

Two of the most authentic of the fighting Irish, Gen. William D. Connor, superintendent of the military academy, and Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, commander of the second corps area, were yelling desperately for the Army. They were teammates on the 1895 West Point eleven. There were some noted Irishmen on the Notre Dame side of the field, too, and not the least of them were Alfred E. Smith, James J. Farley, Thomas J. Courtney, who came from Chicago to give his vocal chords a workout, and Frank Walker.

Herbert Hoover, who seemed to be a neutral observer, was there and so was Max Reinhardt, producer of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," who came out to meet Shakespeare. He said he always thought Shakespeare was an older fellow.

Although Army was leading on points for more than 59 of the 60 minutes, Notre Dame was ahead in every department of the statistics. It always was the more dangerous eleven, but its attack invariably was braked down by fumbles, penalties, or Army's alert secondary defense. When the Irish really began to look like Notre Dame, they had the dash, the zip, and the better cohesion. The blocking, which was ineffective in the first half, was almost perfect in the last quarter.

Meyer Is Star.

Notre Dame's running plays were clicking with beautiful precision and its deception and ball handling were so expertly done that in that final drive it was difficult from a distance to tell who had the ball.

Save for that fourth quarter finish Army matched Notre Dame's greater versatility with flaming courage and a robust defense that refused to budge when its goal was endangered.

With due genuflections to Shakespeare Army presented as fine a back as there was on the field. His name was Charles R. Meyer, son of Lieut. Col. Charles B. Meyer, now stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill. His father was captain of the Army baseball team years ago. Meyer, who was born at West Point, today matched the hero achievements of Wilson, Cagle, Oliphant, and others who have made football history at the academy.

Meyer weighed 142 pounds when the game started and only 136 when it wac over, but he proved convincingly to 80,000 that when Army meets Notre Dame it isn't the size of the dog in the fight. It's the size of the fight in the dog.

It was Meyer who threw the 40 yard pass to Grove that gave his team the lead. It was Meyer who kicked out of bounds on Notre Dame's 1 yard line and again on the 11 and 17 yard lines to keep the Irish deep in their own territory throughout the first half, and it was Meyer who raced 50 yards shortly before Notre Dame made its tying touchdown to save what appeared to be certain victory for his mates. It was no fault of Meyer's that the present generation of cadets will pass out of West Point without experiencing a triumph over Notre Dame. It was 1931, a year before the present West Point seniors enrolled at the academy, that Army last won from its old intersectional foe.

It was Meyer's kick which sailed out of bounds on the 2 yard line that led to Army's touchdown. Shakespeare, generall regarded as the best kicker in college football, but who met his match today, hoisted the ball back to midfield. Quarter Back Grohs of the Army ran it back to Notre Dame's 40 yard line. On the next play Meyer passed to Grove for a touchdown. Grove's try for point was wide of the posts. The first quarter ended a moment later, and an entire new team came in for Notre Dame.

Break Upsets Irish Plans.

Wojcihovski gave Irish supporters their first chance to shout when he recovered Grove's fumble in midfield. Wilke passed to O'Neill for 20 yards and a first down on Army's 30 yard line. Elser lost seven, two line plays failed to gain, and Wilkie kicked out of bounds on Army's 12 yard line. Meyer kicked out to his own 37 yard line, and then came a break that staved off a possible Notre Dame touchdown. Wilke passed to Zwers, who apparently caught the ball on Army's 11 yard line, but after a scramble in the air officials ruled Grove of the Army had gotten possession of it. That was the last scoring threat by either team in the first half.

Notre Dame advanced into Army territory early in the third quarter. Getting the ball in midfield on an exchange of kicks, Shakespeare passed to Fromhart for eight yards, and Carideo made it a first down on Army's 40. Millner caught Shakespeare's pass for a nine yard gain, and Layden banged the line for a first down on Army's 28. The threat ended when Army recovered an Irish fumble on its own 35 yard line. Grove's 14 yard run around his left end was nullified by a 15 yard penalty on the Cadets for holding. Just before the third period ended Notre Dame again was well down in Army territory, due to clever running by Shakespeare. It was 26 yards from the West Point goal when the final period got under way.

Long Runs Futile.

Here the Army defense braced again, and after making one first down, the Cadets kicked to Notre Dame's 3 yard line, but Wilke raced the ball back to his 21 yard line. Elser, faking a kick, crashed through his left tackle for 33 yards and a first down on Army's 46. This put new life into the battle. Elser and Gaul nibbled at the line for five yards, after which Wilke passed to Gaul, who fumbled after catching the ball, Army recovering on its 30.

Notre Dame's supporters sighed when Meyer sped around his right end for 50 yards. It appeared he was running away with whatever chance the Irish had of overtaking their foes. Notre Dame's regulars, who had been resting since the start of the final quarter, returned to the war.

Army couldn't gain, and Meyer kicked out of bounds on Notre Dame's 15 yard line. Then came the 85 yard march that resulted in Notre Dame's touchdown.

The statistics follow:

THE END OF AN AIR RAID—ARMY SCORES

Cadet Ed Grove, Army half back, winding up a 40 yard pass play in the first quarter at the Yankee Stadium yesterday with a touchdown against Notre Dame. Bill Shakespeare, Notre Dame half back, is giving chase. Grove took the ball on a pass from Cadet Monk Meyer, a Fort Sheridan (Ill.) boy. Notre Dame came back to score in the last minute of the game, but missed victory when Wally Fromhart, its quarter back, missed the point after touchdown. The score ended in a tie, 6 to 6. PRINCETON RUNS UP 27-0 SCORE AGAINST LEHIGH

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Princeton's mighty football squad made ready for its season-end games with Dartmouth and Yale by scoring a 27 to 0 triumph over Lehigh before a crowd of 15,000 in Palmer stadium today.

Thirty-two Princeton men took part in the engagement, the 37th between the two colleges. Substitutes performed in all but the second quarter. The second stringers pushed over two touchdowns in the first period, and the varsity duplicated that feat in the second. The second half was turned into a punting duel which found neither team in scoring territory.

Princeton Is Undefeated.

The triumph was Princeton's seventh straight of the season and enabled the team to maintain its undefeated and untied pace. Dartmouth, next week's foe, also has a clear record and Coach Fritz Crisler spared his regulars and gave his substitutes experience in preparation for that conflict.

Jack Irwin, a dash man in track, scored the first touchdown on a lateral pass from MacMillan after Princeton had taken the ball on Lehigh's 22 yard line as the result of a penalty. Ed Givens place kicked for the extra point.

A quick kick by MacMillan which gave Lehigh possession on its 4 yard mark led to the second tally. Heller punted to the 25 yard line. Jim Marks ripped through the line for a touchdown. Again Givens kicked the extra point.

Regulars Take Up Task.

The Tiger regulars took over the job at the start of the second quarter, and on the first play Garry Levan galloped 19 yards for the third score. A few minutes later, he took Peet's punt on his own 30 yard mark and twisted and pranced his way 70 yards for the fourth and final score. Ken Sandbach, regular quarter back, made one try for extra point, but missed the other to complete the scoring.

YALE, 55; LAFAYETTE, 0.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The Yale football team's "breathing spell" came to a close today as the Bulldogs' entire squad routed Lafayette, 55 to 0, in the bowl. Bernie Rankin and Tom Curtin each scored two touchdowns to lead the Yale attack.

A small gathering of 5,000, the smallest to watch a varsity game in the Yale bowl, cheered as the sons of Eli dashed up and down the gridiron to count eight times, mainly on long runs, to pile up Yale's heaviest score of the season.

GEORGETOWN, 13; MANHATTAN, 0.

New York, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Georgetown, coming to life suddenly in the second half, handed Manhattan college a 13 to 0 drubbing in cold, wind swept Ebbets field today gefore 12,000 spectators.

All 13 points were made by Co-Captain Joe Meglen, 190 pound kicking full back, the first less than a minute after the third quarter began and the other as the climax of a 34 yard passing and running attack in the fourth period.

NAVY 28; COLUMBIA, 7.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 16.—(AP)—John Snead Schmidt, hard running half back, romped through Columbia's defense today for three touchdowns to bring Navy's sailors a 28 to 7 victory over the Lions in the midshipmen's final home game, played in a cold rain before 13,000.

Columbia's touchdown came in the final period as a result of a blocked kick which Klingensmith recovered for a score.

VANDERBILT WINS, 13 TO 7.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Led by Capt. Willie Geny, Vanderbilt today defeated Tennessee, 13 to 7, for the first time in nine years before 15,000.

Unmindful of mud on the field and rain that fell during part of the game, Geny paced his mates to a dazzling triumph, scoring both touchdowns and starring in all departments of the game.

Northwestern's Runs Defeat Wisconsin's Passes, 32-13

out of bounds on the 8 yard line. The Badgers howled and the stands gave the tardy officials the bird. But the ruling stood and the Badgers failed to make the remaining eight yards.

A few minutes later the Badgers again found themselves in possession of the ball in their own territory. Again Jordan passed to Jankowski and again Jankowski ran to the goal line. This time Jankowski's run was a model of open field progress in which he went over without getting near the side lines.

Adelman's second and third touchdowns and one by Fred Benz, Badger end, came in the fourth quarter. The Wildcat substitute hero bloomed from a pass intercepted by Hinton. There was a first down by Hinton. Then Adelman took the ball on a play from the Wisconsin 34 yard line and fought his way to the touchdown.

Adelman Runs 65 Yards.

Soon afterward Wisconsin launched an amazing forward pass attack with Jordan tossing to Jankowski, Benz, Peak three times and finally to Benz for the touchdown. It was in this sally that the Badgers fattened their completed pass total to 12 in 25 attempts.

And then, on the first play after the kickoff, Adelman took the ball and ran 65 yards to a touchdown to wind up the hilarious day.

And now to go back to the start of things: The Badgers began as if they meant to do some upsetting in a hurry. Tommerson returned the opening kickoff to his 38 yard line and then added four more. He then shot a forward pass to Jankowski, who made a first down on Northwestern's 46 yard line. Jankowski hit the center of the line for eight yards, then made another first down on Northwestern's 35 yard line. A pass and a running play failed; then the Badgers got mixed up on their signals and when Clauss passed from center there was no back in position to catch the ball. It rolled to Wiscon's 42 yard line and though the Badgers recovered, it was apparent they were pretty much crushed by the gum-up.

Tommerson Fumbles Punt.

Tommerson punted to Cruice on the Wildcat 30 yard line and after a couple of offside penalties, one by each team, the Wildcats went to work. Heap made it first down with a twelve yard shot to Northwestern's 42 yard line, and after Cruice had failed to gain, reeled off twelve more yards. The Badgers slowed down the Wildcats to make them kick. Tommerson fumbled and recovered on his 8 yard line and the panic was on more than ever. Heap returned Tommerson's punt to Wisconsin's 35 yard line and on two plays reached Wisconsin's 19 yard line, after which Bender went inside his left tackle on an end around play for a first down on Wisconsin's 9 yard line. On the next play Heap went off his right tackle for a touchdown and Duvall added the point from placement. Ten minutes' play had been completed when the scoring started.

The way was paved for the second Wildcat touchdown at the close of the first quarter when J. Wilson fumbled Toth's punt and Lind recovered for Northwestern on Wisconsin's 19 yard line. Heap went around his left end to the 10 yard line on the last play of the first quarter.

Adelman Is Sent In.

Adelman was sent in at the start of the second quarter to replace Heap and Schemed while Duvall was making it first down with a one yard plunge. Then Adelman went around his left end and crossed the line standing up for the touchdown. Duvall again added the point from placement.

Near the close of the half Wisconsin launched a pass play from Northwestern's 25 yard line. Jordan took the ball, retreated to his 35 yard line, and shot a pass to Tommerson, who made a great leaping catch on the goal line. As he came down the gun was fired. It was decided that Tommerson had been downed a foot short of a touchdown.

Duvall rammed over the Wildcats' third touchdown after five minutes of play in the third quarter. A thirty-four yard run by Heap paved the way for this one. Don broke through his right tackle and ran down the side line to the 11 yard line.

Duvall Takes It Over.

Three plays with Cruice, Heap, and Bender carrying the ball, gave the Wildcats first down on the 1 yard line. On his second jab Duvall went over but failed to add the point.

Heap's run seemed to give a lot of gents, notably Jankowski of the Badgers and Adelman of the Wildcats an idea of what can be done by running rapidly and elusively over the lawn. You've been told how the idea was carried out. The statistics:

Davidson Scores 14 to 6 Victory Over V.M.I. in Mud

Lexington, Va., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Virginia Military institute rallied in the fourth period and plodded 81 yards through mud and rain to a touchdown, its only score against the Davidson Wildcats, who won, 14 to 6, today.

Washburn College Beats Creighton University, 20-3

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Washburn college of Topeka, Kas., today defeated Creighton university, 20 to 3. Creighton scored first, Bokmueller making a field goal in the second quarter.

Indiana State Takes Final, 16-0; Finishes 4th

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Indiana State clinched fourth place in the Indiana conference today by defeating Evansville, 16 to 0, in its final game of the season.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Syracuse's hope of an undefeated season ended today with a 27 to 0 beating at the hands of Colgate.

Colgate was complete master throughout the game, moving through the air and on the ground to punch over a touchdown in the first period, two more in the third and another in the fourth. At no time did Syracuse threaten.

So thorough was Colgate's mastery that the Maroon rolled up 18 first downs to Syracuse's five, and gained 245 yards on the ground to its opponent's 48. In the air, Colgate advanced 113 yards as against Syracuse's 46.

Syracuse made several remarkable stands in defense of its goal line, once repulsing the Maroon invader on the one foot line and again turning them back within the 10 yard mark. Offensively it never did get a chance to move into action.

New York, Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—New York university smashed to within one game of its first perfect season in history today when it hammered out a 48 to 0 decision over Rutgers. Not once since N. Y. U. began playing football back in the 19th century has it finished the season undefeated and untied. Today's triumph was its 7th of the 1935 season. Thanksgiving the Violets will face their last and greatest obstacle—Fordham.

DARTMOUTH WINS, 41-6.

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Dartmouth's undefeated Indians, who have been perfecting an aerial attack all season, set it off for the first time today and overwhelmed Cornell, 41 to 6.

Passing was the motive power for every Indian scoring drive and they succeeded in every period except the third, when a Dartmouth replacement unit was in action. The Cornell touchdown, made from the two yard line by Jack Batten, climaxed an eighty yard Ithacan flight against this substitute eleven early in the final period.

PENN, 33; PENN STATE, 6.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's football machine got the monkey wrenches out of its works today for the first time this season and battered the Nittany Lions of Pennsylvania State college 33 to 6 before 40,000 at Franklin field.

Lew Elverson was first scorer, counting on the fifth play of the game with a 33 yard off tackle slant after a straight down field march from the kickoff. In the third period Bill Kurlish went over after heading a 50 yard touchdown march. Franny Murray and a pair of substitutes, Half Back Josiah McCracken and End Bob Shueneman, each counted in the closing period.

HARVARD WINS, 41-0.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Harvard crushed the University of New Hampshire team 41 to 0 in the stadium today.

Harvard's attack moved more consistently than in any game this year. Harvard gained 316 yards by rushing against 82 for the visitors. The Crimson completed eight of twelve forward passes for a total of 122 yards, while New Hampshire completed only three out of fourteen. The Crimson intercepted four of the attempts.

California Wins Over Pacific, 39-0

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—California marched to the threshold of an undefeated, untied football season today, pushing the little College of the Pacific from its path, 39 to 0, in a nonconference game.

Pacific gave 20,000 plenty of action, but it was unable to stop California, which closes its regular season at Palo Alto next Saturday against Stanford.

IDAHO LOSES, 13-0.

Corvallis, Ore., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Joe Gray, fleet half back, starred as Oregon State defeated University of Idaho, 13 to 0, on a muddy field today.

His 69 yard run with a punt in the third period brought Oregon State its second touchdown. Recovery of a fumbled punt over the Idaho goal line gave Oregon State its first score in the first quarter. Duncan's punt slipped through the hands of Ward into the arms of Joslin, Oregon State end.

STANFORD, 32; MONTANA, 0.

Palo Alto, Cal., Nov. 16.—[U. P.]—Two full backs, overshadowed for two years by Bobby Grayson, emerged from the obscurity of the sidelines today to lead Stanford university to a 32 to 0 victory over the University of Montana.

They are Freddy Williams of Olathe, Colo., and Ray Todd.

Resting for next Saturday's championship game with the undefeated University of California team, the first string remained on the bench and the reserves faced Montana.

TROJANS WIN, 20 TO 10.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A fourth quarter passing attack, which netted two touchdowns, enabled Southern California to come from behind and defeat Washington State, 20 to 10, today.

Davie Davis, Trojan quarter back, directed the bombardment, throwing a 19 yard pass to Bibbs to place the Trojans in scoring position for the first touchdown. Shortly after Davis tossed 20 yards to Beatty, who scored the second touchdown from the five yard line. Davis made the other score on a 13 yard run.

Washington State's touchdown came in the second quarter on a 24 yard pass, Goddard to McCormack. Johansen kicked a field goal from the 15 yard line in the third period.

Harrier, Locked in as Race Starts, Makes Up Ground

Harold Smith, freshman harrier of Wheaton college, was locked in the locker room during the Loyola invitational cross-country meet and did not start the race until the other contestants had already traversed a half mile. Smith managed to overtake the tailenders before the race ended.

MICHIGAN STATE PASSES CRUSH LOYOLA, 27 TO 0

Warmbein and Agett Lead Scoring Marches.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—Advancing at will behind a sturdy line, Michigan State's two alternate back fields ran Loyola of Los Angeles down to defeat, 27 to 0, before 12,000 at Gilmore stadium today.

The accurate forward passes of Kurt Warmbein and Al Agett made ground gaining easy on two goalward marches, and the alert line play of Howard Zindel and Fred Schroeder, a substitute tackle who fell on a fumble for a touchdown, kept the local boys in trouble.

After Loyola had held State for downs on the former's 20 yard line and again on the 4 yard line in the first quarter, Zindel blocked an attempted quick kick by Jim Haggerty, Loyola full back. From the 17 yard line, where Zindel's arm deflected it, the ball bounced toward the side line. Joe Buzolits, center, scooped it up and, with Allman providing hasty interference, ran for a touchdown.

Within four plays of the kickoff which opened the second half, Michigan State had scored again, Wiseman bucking over after a sequence of plays in which Wiseman ran back Loyola's opening kickoff for 34 yards to Loyola's 33. Agett passed to Richard Edwards, half back, to put it on the three yard line, and it took two bucks by Wiseman to go over.

In the fourth quarter a Loyola offside penalty and another of 15 yards for unnecessary roughness put the ball on Loyola's nine yard line, from where Agett went across.

Michigan State added a fourth touchdown just before the game closed when a punt bounced out of the hands of George Snell, Loyola quarter back, and Schroeder, sub State tackle, got the ball as it bounced backward from the 5 yard line over Loyola's goal.

for Healthy, Handsome HAIR...

① 50 SECONDS to rub—natural oils are restored, circulation quickens, your hair takes on new life, has a chance.

Use VITALIS and the famous "60-SECOND WORKOUT"

FOR healthy, handsome hair—go right down where health begins—right to the hair roots themselves. Don't let a too-tight scalp pinch them. Don't let a too-dry scalp starve them. Loosen and relax your scalp—schedule yourself for real hair-health with Vitalis and the famous "60-Second Workout."

The pure vegetable oils of Vitalis help replenish the natural oil that both your scalp and hair need so badly. And Vitalis and the "60-Second Workout" stimulate the scalp—bring new circulation around the hair roots—restore the normal, natural lustre of healthy hair. Loose dandruff disappears. Your hair looks more alive. Your scalp feels better. And you escape entirely that "patent-leather" look.

Use the "60-Second Workout" twice a week—or as often as you want. Another suggestion: Use Vitalis and a vigorous massage before and after your regular shampoo—and you'll have a clean, healthy scalp—a well-groomed head of hair.

The two teams marched into the final round yesterday by triumphing in the semi-finals. Lindblom defeated Marshall, 6 to 0, at Mills stadium before 5,000, and Parker won from Schurz, 13 to 0, at Normal park in the presence of 3,000.

A 9 yard pass from Capt. Ted Hennis, 170 pound quarter back to Albert Valiquet, 17 year old half back, in the second quarter gave Lindblom its victory over Marshall. The pass climaxed a 60 yard drive.

Pick Site Tomorrow.

Lindblom, which will appear in the finals for the second successive year, threatened to score again in the third period, reaching the 1 yard line, but Marshall held. Marshall penetrated into Lindblom territory several times, but did not threaten seriously to score.

The site of the championship game will be determined tomorrow. It probably will be played at Stagg field. The winner will meet the Catholic league titleholder for the city championship under the auspices of Chicago's Own Christmas benefit at Soldiers' field Nov. 30.

Elvidge Is Star.

Glenn Elvidge, sophomore quarter back, starred in Parker's triumph over Schurz, north section champion, which was the favorite in the game. Elvidge scored the first touchdown when he grabbed a 20 yard pass from Kenneth Wood in the first quarter.

In the fourth period Elvidge dashed through center for 15 yards for the second score. Schurz threatened twice, reaching the Parker 7 yard line in the second period and the 11 yard line in the last quarter.

NEW TRIER HANDS MOLINE ITS FIRST DEFEAT, 9 TO 0

Moline, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—New Trier High school, Chicago suburban champion, moved a step nearer the Illinois state prep title today by defeating a hitherto unbeaten Moline team, 9 to 0, before a homecoming crowd of 4,000. New Trier outplayed Moline throughout the battle, but was held scoreless in the first two periods.

Early in the second half Raclin blocked Marlier's punt on the Moline 30 yard line and the ball bounded over the goal line, where Raclin fell on it. Dostal kicked the extra point. In the last period Fiems fumbled and was tackled behind the goal for a safety. Gallagher and Laing were the leading ground gainers for New Trier, while Brostrom's work in the line stood out in Moline's play.

DE PAUW STOPS WABASH RALLY; EARNS 0-0 TIE

Crawfordsville, Ind., Nov. 16.—[U.P.]—DePauw university repulsed two scoring threats in the last half to hold Wabash to a scoreless tie in the 43d renewal of their football rivalry today.

In the third quarter Wabash went to DePauw's 14 yard line on runs by Gruca and Snyder, but lost the ball on downs after four unsuccessful passes. Another attack ended on DePauw's five yard line in the last quarter when Mason intercepted Snyder's pass.

Red Hot Parrish Wins National Foxhound Title

He placed first in hunting, first in speed and driving, third in endurance, and fourth in trailing. The 1935 champion is a son of Lotta Trouble, sire, and Mary Ann R., dam.

Second in general averages went to White Man, the property of R. L. Taylor of Memphis, Tenn. Bob Smith, owned by W. K. Herrin of Clarksdale, Miss., won third, and Dixie Lee Herrin, also from the Herrin kennels, fourth.

Washington and Lee and Maryland Play Scoreless Tie

College Park, Md., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Hurling back several drives by desperate goal line stands, Washington and Lee today held Maryland to a scoreless tie before a rain soaked homecoming day crowd of 10,000.

Prep Benefit Game Sales Hit $41,000 Mark

The success of the all-Chicago prep title game to be played at Soldiers' field Saturday, Nov. 30, was assured yesterday with the report of Barnet Hodes, secretary of the Christmas benefit committee, that ticket sales have already soared to $41,000.

In his report to Mayor Kelly, chairman of Chicago's Own Christmas benefit, sponsor of the game, Mr. Hodes revealed that the advance sale is already $5,000 above the gross receipts of last year's game, which attracted 50,000 fans. Indications are that 75,000 will attend this year's game.

Winner to Get Trophy.

The game brings together the champions of the Public High School league and the titleholders in the Parochial School league. Lindblom, perennial champions from the central section, captured last year's game, beating Leo, Catholic champion, 6 to 0.

The winner of the all-Chicago game will be presented the Mayor Kelly trophy consisting of a football player in action on a life-size football mounted on an ebony stand. The losing team receives a shield symbolical of the supremacy of its league. Players from each team will receive watch charm gold footballs. Each squad is also given a complete outfit for thirty-three players.

Expect Fund to Reach $250,000.

The gross proceeds of the game will be turned over to the fund of the Christmas benefit, which reaches its climax at the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday night, Dec. 18, with the annual entertainment revue, the "Night of Stars." Proceeds from the benefit's activities are expected to total $250,000 this year. The money is used to buy warm clothing and shoes for needy Chicago children.

Catholic Triumphs, 20-6, Over Western Maryland

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Catholic university turned three scoring opportunities into touchdowns today to defeat Western Maryland, 20 to 6, before 6,000 in Griffith stadium. Maryland scored in the second period on a blocked kick.

WESTERN STATE UPSETS UNBEATEN BUTLER, 19 TO 7

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Vic Vandenberg, reserve half back, led a two touchdown drive in the second half today to enable Western State Teachers to upset the previously undefeated and untied Butler university team, 19 to 7.

Starting the second half tied at 7 all, Vandenberg passed Western State to one touchdown and in the fourth quarter provided the running attack that scored another.

In the first period Neuman returned a punt 17 yards to Western State's 41 yard line. Three first downs with Neuman, Pierce, and Muleski carrying the ball put it on the two yard line and Muleski hit through tackle to score. A short punt to the Western State 39 yard line enabled Butler to score in the second period. Blackaby got five yards, then broke away for 26 and in two more tries crossed the goal.

Vandenberg passed 19 yards to Neidlinger in the third period then, after two short gains, he passed to Brooks for 25 yards. Pierce hit the line three times to get one yard and the touchdown.

Leo Seeks to Clinch Title with De La Salle

Catholic League

DUCK HUNTING SEASON COMES TO END TUESDAY

Outlook for 1936 Seen as Brighter.

BY BOB BECKER.

If midwest waterfowl hunters hear the quacking of ducks and honking of geese today, they should glance at the calendar and then get ready to write "finis" in big letters on the 1935 hunting season for waterfowl. The time has come for the last roundup for the shotgun squads, because on Tuesday at exactly 4 o'clock in the afternoon the season closes and the passing show involving block decoys, duck callers, shotguns, and other paraphernalia needed in the duck and goose hunting season ends, according to federal law.

It's not going to be easy for thousands of duck and goose hunters to take the shells out of the old waterfowling guns and leave the marshes next Tuesday, as they will be checking out when Illinois doubtless will have its maximum concentration of birds.

New Flight Reaches Illinois.

Another flight of mallards came down from the north several days ago following a cold spell in the north country. This migration wave of plump mallards swung into the river bottoms at just the right time. They found rising water levels covering many acres of vegetation, thus providing new feeding and loafing areas. It was the sort of situation made to order for ducks. The result was near ideal water and food conditions for these birds. What the situation meant to hunters need not be outlined. In some areas where vacant blinds stood unused because of lack of water the boys had only to move in to get some excellent hunting.

Outlook Good Next Year.

Although midwest sportsmen may have bitter words on their tongues because they must stop hunting on Tuesday in the face of an excellent flight of birds from the north, there is the solace that the "grass ought to be greener" next year. Every checkup that we have been able to make through the middle and northwestern bird areas shows these facts to be evident. First, the duck crop this year represents a marked advance over last season. Secondly, the ten bird bag limit and short season is going to save millions of birds for seed stock. Third, by reducing the number of birds killed this year, and sending north to the nesting grounds next spring one of the largest flights in recent years, the American continent should be well on its way to restoring its waterfowl population.

"Any car I drive takes a lot of punishment"

"I have put 3,000 miles on the car since buying it. I am well satisfied with it."

J. A. LYMAN, 5566 W. Congress St., tells why he bought a late model car

"As assistant manager in the Chicago office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, my work takes me all around the city and as far outside as the Dells in Wisconsin. I am constantly following up the work which ten men are doing. Any car I drive takes a lot of punishment in the course of the 20,000 miles or more I drive a year.

DECIDES ON A NEWER CAR

"The car I was driving was over four years old. It had stood up well, but no car can be expected to last much longer than that at the pace I drive. It was wearing out and becoming less dependable. It was without many of the improvements which the late model cars have. I made up my mind to look around for a newer car.

"I looked through the Tribune want ad section, checking some of the offers and going to see the cars when it was convenient. Finally I came on a Tribune ad offering a '34 Plymouth 2-door sedan. It was advertised by S. J. Newman, Inc., 2652 W. Madison Street.

FINDS THE CAR HE WANTED

"I stopped at their showrooms one day during the week. Mr. Light, the used car manager, showed me the car. It had not been driven far and was in excellent condition mechanically as well as in appearance.

"I took the car out and drove it for a half hour. It was a great deal easier to drive than my old car. It rode nicely and the engine sounded fine. When I got back to their shop I asked them to appraise my old car.

"Mr. Newman and Mr. Light figured out an allowance on my old car which was satisfactory to me. We made a deal. I have put about 3,000 miles on the car since then, and I am well satisfied with it. It is a good car in every way and just what I was looking for."

"DELIGHTED WITH RESULTS FROM TRIBUNE WANT ADS"

"Our new car sales for the past nine months had been exceptionally good and we had built up quite a stock of used car trade-ins. It was becoming increasingly hard to dispose of them in the customary manner. So, about six weeks ago, we began advertising consistently in the Chicago Tribune used car columns.

"To say that we were delighted and pleased with the results is putting it mildly. The important thing to us was not the number of inquiries, but the type of persons replying. They practically all were of the substantial class who are able to buy on reasonable terms.

"We will certainly continue to use the Tribune as the basis of our used car advertising and merchandising plan."

Foreign

Asiatic Conflict.

Japan's long range plan to govern all of China suddenly came to life during the week. Japanese troops moved into northern and central China. [See map on next page.]

All last week frightened Chinese scurried out of the native quarters of Shanghai into the International Settlement. There they hoped to be safe under American, British, and French protection. They were afraid that the Japanese were ready to start warfare in Shanghai. Japan landed 500 more marines to add to the 2,000 landed last Sunday.

Mayor Wu Teh-chen of Shanghai kept assuring the Japanese everything would be done to capture the man who shot down a Japanese marine one week ago last night. Meanwhile bricks were thrown through the windows of Japanese shops and other anti-Japanese activities increased.

In North China the Japanese moved to create another puppet nation like Manchukuo. In recent months they have exerted pressure on China for the appointment of governors in the northern provinces who are favorable to Japan. Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, Chinese general, was mentioned as Japan's choice to head the prospective nation. He was assassinated Wednesday.

The next day the Japanese began demanding the immediate formation of an independent nation in the north. They want the provinces of Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi, Hopei, and Shantung to be released from the rest of China. The governors they have approved for the provinces notified Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, that the provinces under their control want to form a separate nation. The dictator answered by sending his troops northward.

The Japanese military command warned that Japanese troops will invade North China if the demands for independence are not met. Several troop trains filled with Japanese soldiers arrived at Shanhaikwan, at the seaward end of the Great Wall of China.

African Conflict.

Rodolfo Graziani is a hard-bitten general. For Mussolini he mopped up the rebellious tribes of Italian Cyrenaica in the Libyan desert three years ago. Last week he drove the southern Italian army 100 miles farther into Ethiopian territory. Italian reports said his troops captured Sasa Baneh last Sunday. The next day his outposts were reported in Daggah Bur. Ethiopians in Addis Ababa denied this.

Tuesday Ethiopia claimed a bloody victory at Anele, in Ogaden province. Thursday the Italians claimed a victory in the upper Fafan river valley. Friday Italian reports said they were continuing their march toward Jigjiga and Harrar. Graziani had put some 500 desert miles between his army and his base of supplies at Mogadishu, Italian Somaliland.

Gen. Emilio de Bono of Italy's northern army sprinkles perfume on his immaculate white beard. Last week he sprinkled Italian troops south of Makale. Scattered engagements with Ethiopians were reported. Friday there were reports of a desperate hand to hand battle between Ethiopians and savage Danakils who are serving Italy.

De Bono's scouts brought him word that a quarter of a million Ethiopians were massing at Amba Alaji. There they waited at an altitude of 11,000 feet for the invader. In the south the Ethiopians were reported to be preparing for the defense of either Jigjiga or Harrar.

De Bono, 69 years old, was recalled to Italy yesterday. His place in Africa will be taken by Gen. Pietro Badoglio, chief of the Italian general staf. It was said that De Bono completed his work when he captured Makale. [See main news section.]

Italy.

Italy chose Armistice day to send a protest to each of the 50 members of the league of nations who are expected to begin applying penalties to Italy tomorrow. The note, five pages long, warned each nation that it would be held individually responsible for any penalties it might apply to Italy.

Italy again claimed that it is right in invading Ethiopia. It thinks the league of nations was wrong in voting penalties. Italy holds that each nation applying penalties will be acting as an individual. It said it did not consider the actual application of penalties a league matter. It asked each nation to say what that nation intends to do.

Italy warned that the application of penalties will be considered as a "real act of hostility" by each nation.

Mussolini issued a decree under which 157 products may be imported into Italy only under government license. The ruling will go into effect tomorrow. [See neutrality, Washington.]

FINANCE-SPORTS

Reviews of the week in finance and general business and also of sports are to be found in the finance and sports sections.

Following a meeting last night of Italy's grand council a communique was issued by Premier Mussolini setting tomorrow [Nov. 18] as a "day of ignominy and iniquity." He called upon all Italy to defy the boycott of the 51 nations which will put various sanctions into effect. [See main news section.]

Great Britain.

Thirty million British voters went to the polls Thursday. The result was an emphatic approval of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and the policies of his national government. Out of 603 of the 615 seats in the house of commons the national government [made up of Conservative, National Labor, and National Liberal candidates] got 424. The opposition [Labor, Liberal, and Independent candidates] got 179. The government won with a majority of 245 with 12 constituencies still to be heard from.

The voters thus approved Baldwin's government in its action against Italy. [See Italy.] Great Britain has been loading the fight to stop the Italian-Ethiopian conflict. The voters also approved the government program for British rearmament and the budget balancing policy of Baldwin's cabinet.

Laborites were disappointed that their party did not make a better showing. They received satisfaction, though, in the defeat of Ramsay MacDonald, lord president of the council and former prime minister, and his son, Malcolm MacDonald, minister for colonies. They were the only members of the cabinet who ran for reelection to lose their seats.

The elder MacDonald was the head of the National government when it won the last election in 1931. He was once the leader of the Labor party. The miners in his constituency accused him of betraying the Labor party and voted against him. He was beaten by 20,000 votes.

As the voting was going on, news reached England of the trouble the reëlected government forces will have to face in Egypt. Wednesday was the 16th anniversary of the original Egyptian demand for independence. Members of the Wafd party in Egypt are strong for independence from Britain. They claim that 90 per cent of all Egyptians belong to their party. On the anniversary day they demonstrated and rioted against British control of Egypt.

Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha now rules Egypt. He has no parliament. He is responsible only to King Fuad and the British. The Wafdists say he is nothing but an agent of the British government. Demonstrations against Britain were started by students. New rioting flared after Mustapha Nahas Pasha, leader of the Wafdists, harangued an audience of 10,000.

Mobs attempted to attack the British consulate and the high commissioner's residence in Cairo. They demanded the resignation of Premier Tewfik and complete freedom from British rule. Police used birdshot to drive them away.

On Thursday the rioting continued. Students from Cairo university gathered near the pyramids. When they tried to march on Cairo they were met with gunfire from the police.

A "truce of God" was declared Friday, on the Moslem Sabbath. By that time there were four known dead and more than 300 persons injured.

Egyptian pride has been hurt in the last two months because the British have concentrated a big fleet off Alexandria without consulting the Egyptians. The Egyptians have seized upon Great Britain's troubles in the Italo-Ethiopian war as a means of forcing the British to grant their demands for freedom.

* * *

The rioting in Egypt did not help Great Britain in her attempt to force Benito Mussolini to withdraw his troops from the Italian colony of Libya, on the western border of Egypt. The day that the trouble started the Italian dictator was reported to have said that he would not take any more troops out of Libya even if Britain does remove her warships from the Mediterranean. Italy claims the presence of the British fleet in the Mediterranean is a warlike act.

Reports from Paris Friday said the morale among the men in the British Mediterranean fleet is bad. Months of inaction at sea has them about ready to mutiny, according to the report. Most of the men in the fleet are reservists who have now been on duty for three months. When they were called they expected to fight. They are said to be tired of doing nothing.

Germany.

Jews in Germany no longer have any political rights. According to a decree published in Berlin on Friday, Jews cannot be German citizens, cannot vote, and cannot occupy public office. Those who are working for the government will be pensioned Dec. 31, 1935. Jews who wish to leave Germany must pay the government a tax amounting to 25 per cent of their fortunes. The rest of their money must be left in Germany. It can be used only for the purchase of German articles, which must be sold abroad.

Steel.

Little Morehead City, in North Carolina, with a population of 3,483, received equal attention last week with New York City, population 6,930,446.

It came about with disclosures that German made steel had been purchased for use on the federal financed Tri-Borough bridge in New York and on a Public Works project in Morehead City. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, complained to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, PWA head. Edward J. Smith, a union leader in New York, complained to President Roosevelt.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia made the loudest complaint of all. Part Jewish on his mother's side and often the object of attack from Nazis, he declared: "The only commodity we can import from Hitlerland now is hatred, and we don't want any of it in our country."

On Thursday Secretary Ickes explained. He said PWA did not approve foreign materials for PWA projects. He added the German steel was bought by contractors or subcontractors. It amounted to only $275,000, a small item, he added, compared to the 150 millions spent for steel in America by PWA.

Then Ickes attacked. He said that the German steel companies had underbid the American companies by 52 per cent. In the Morehead City case, he declared, four American companies submitted identical bids. This, he charged, smacked of collusion; i.e., a secret agreement for a fraudulent purpose. He said the federal trade commission would investigate the bids. On Friday President Roosevelt approved Ickes' inquiry into the four companies. The companies named were the Bethlehem Steel company, the Carnegie Steel company, the Inland Steel company, and Jones & Laughlin Steel company. [Charges were made Friday that French cement was used on several New York school projects.]

President.

President Roosevelt's proudest accomplishment last week was completion of a mutual trade agreement between the United States and Canada. The agreement reduces the import duties on many products. Its details will be revealed today. [See business review, also tomorrow's Tribune.

The agreement was signed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Premier William Mackenzie-King. President Roosevelt presided. Mr. Roosevelt said the pact would do much to bring better conditions to Canada and the United States.

[On Thursday the Brazilian senate approved a trade agreement with the United States. It becomes effective on Dec. 14. The Brazilian treaty provides for tarif reductions on 28 American products, including automobiles. Among other things in return the United States will keep Brazilian coffee on its free list.]

During the week President Roosevelt delivered his Armistice day address; issued a Thanksgiving day proclamation; called upon banks to lower interest rates, thereby circulating money; talked about the shaky money situation in Europe with financial advisers, and worked on the federal budget.

AAA.

The Agricultural Adjustment administration made $71,612,285 in benefit payments to farmers during July and August, according to figures given out Sunday.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, real AAA boss, smarting under the criticism against his crop-stock curtailment program, said that industry, which "plowed millions of workers into the streets," was responsible for the billions in relief expenditures.

"The pig iron reduction control of the steel companies in 1933 was in principle 1,000 times as damnable as the pig reduction campaign in 1933," he said. [See business review.]

Some 5,000 kosher butcher shops in New York closed for one minute Friday in protest against high meat prices. Oscar Spitalnick, president of the kosher butchers, said: "We cannot exist any longer. Meat prices are too high." The AAA is blamed.

Neutrality.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull on Friday warned that the government did not approve of the exportation of American oil, copper, steel, scrap iron, trucks, and similar materials or products to Italy or Ethiopia. He said such exports violated the American neutrality policy. He described them as essential war materials. Italy has been buying those materials heavily in recent weeks to get ahead of the league economic penalties which begin tomorrow. [See Italy.]

The American neutrality policy is directed by President Roosevelt. It prohibits the sale of American arms or munitions to warring nations, warns that business dealings with them are at the dealers' own risk and advises against travel on ships of the warring nations. A critic of this policy is Representative George H. Tinkham, Republican, of Massachusetts. In Paris, a few days ago, he said it might get America into war. He feels a European war is coming. Mr. Tinkham had a look at the world war. In December, 1917, he visited the Italian front. He was a congressman. An Italian artillery officer invited him to fire a shot. He accepted and sent a huge shell against the Austrians.

Defense.

Ninety-five persons, voting in a referendum at Plymouth Congregational church, Des Moines, Ia., declared last Sunday that they would not "bear arms in any war which the United States might declare." Nearly 300 others said they would or would not bear arms, depending on circumstances. The referendum was conducted in Congregational churches throughout the country by the National Council of Congregational-Christian Churches.

Philippines.

Before a crowd of 200,000 Manuel Quezon on Friday took the oath of office as first president of the Philippine commonwealth government. The ceremonies were held at Manila. Among the official guests were Secretary of War Dern, representing President Roosevelt, and Vice President Garner and a large junket party of senators and congressmen. The junket is costing $200,000 and is being paid by the Philippines. The inauguration marked the return of self-government after 400 years. On the eve of the ceremony President Roosevelt signed a proclamation ending the old order and establishing the new. It was read by Secretary Dern.

Depression.

The government on Monday gave out figures to show that the depression has cost business 26 billion 631 million dollars. The commerce department said this sum had been taken out of savings to gap the difference between expenses and the value of goods and services.

On Wednesday the government disclosed that the present treasury deficit has passed the billion and a half mark. On Friday it was revealed that the cost of living for wage earners rose 0.5 per cent during October, or 3.7 per cent higher than last year. Government jobs reached a new high, with 794,467 persons being on federal pay rolls at a salary cost of 114 million dollars a month.

Courts.

For a change the New Deal last week received a bit of cheer from the courts on some of its legislation.

Federal Judge Elwood Hamilton, in Louisville, Ky., Thursday, held the Guffey coal act legal. He said congress had the power to regulate wages and prices of any industry bearing on interstate commerce.

The United States Supreme court on Monday refused to help the Carter Coal company of West Virginia in its fight against a 15 per cent penalty imposed under the Guffey act. The court also denied the Washburn-Crosby milling company an immediate review of a case involving AAA amendments. [See business review.]

These triumphs were lessened, however, by a New Deal loss in Chicago yesterday. The Circuit Court of Appeals held unconstitutional an amendment to the Frazier-Lemke act. [See Main News section.]

News-Names

Bankruptcy proceedings were started in London Tuesday against Peggy O'Neil, 37 years old, Irish born actress. She made her stage debut as a child dancer in Chicago in 1910. In 1914 and 1915 she played Peg in "Peg o' My Heart" for a long Chicago run.

Will Rogers Jr., 23 years old, son of the late actor-humorist, has purchased a part interest in the Beverly Hills [Cal.] Citizen. He studied journalism at Stanford university and worked on the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

In a hurry to get to work in his office in Houston, Tex., Winthrop Rockefeller, 23 years old, exceeded the speed limit. Policeman E. H. Meienike arrested him. "I'll appreciate it if you won't let this get into the newspapers," said Rockefeller. He is a grandson of John D. Rockefeller.

The next mayor of Newburyport, Mass., may be Andrew J. [Bossy] Gillis. He was nominated on Tuesday. Gillis was mayor of Newburyport some years ago. He was known then as the bad boy of politics. He says he will reduce taxes if he's elected. He is one of the city's largest taxpayers.

Clark Gable, male hero of the films, and his wife, the former Mrs. M. Franklin Langham, have separated. It was hinted a divorce would be sought. The Gables were married in 1931. He gave his age then as 31 years, hers as 41.

Illness has caused Dr. William Furtwaengler, director of the Berlin State opera, to cancel all engagements. He is also director of the philharmonic orchestra. Karl Boehm will take his place at the festival presentation of "Die Meistersinger."

Surrogate James A. Foley, New York, authorized Mrs. Clare Booth Brokaw to spend $16,800 for the support of her daughter, Anna, 11 years old, until Sept. 1, 1936. The money will come out of the girl's annual income of $31,125. Mrs. Brokaw, widow of George T. Brokaw, said she needed the money because her own income of $30,000 a year was just enough to maintain herself according to her position in life and social position.

The City

School Pay Crisis.

Chicago teachers face a payless December. But analysts last week saw that crisis as only the start of a general crackup in the wall of taxes which stands between Cook county governments and bankruptcy. After scraping up the last of the money banks will loan on unpaid taxes to pay November salaries, the board of education saw one recourse to raise Christmas money. This was legislative approval of the state's debt of $2,384,258 to the city for educating handicapped children. Both houses have demanded that Gov. Horner call a special concurrent session to save the situation. Three factors are blamed for the financial collapse which threatens the county government next year. First, of $350,000,000 in delinquent taxes, $151,000,000 is personalty tax bills averaging about $29 each, accumulated from 1928 to 1933. Much is uncollectable, but cannot be regarded as lost because collection has not been enforced. Second, 30,000 tax objections are not payable until decided in court. Third, County Treasurer Joseph L. Gill's tax records are involved in the mess left by Robert M. Sweitzer when he was ousted last May. [See Sweitzer.]

Sweitzer.

Through all his woes since he left office as Cook county clerk last winter, 61 year old Robert [Smiling Bob] Sweitzer chose to keep smiling. But a Criminal court jury, typified by a grocery clerk, a mechanic, and an unemployed street car conductor, gave him reason to be happy Tuesday when it acquitted him of withholding public funds from his successor, Michael J. Flynn. The state charged he kept $414,129. Sweitzer said it was $335,000. Jurors revealed their sentiment was not guilty because the prosecution had not proved that the hurried audit made last spring was correct and because Sweitzer testified he would be glad to pay any shortage shown by a just accounting. There was no question that he had withheld funds. Sweitzer did nothing decisive about squaring the account last week, but he took several steps toward restoring his political power. The first was to ask a new hearing of his unsuccessful suit to regain his five months' office of county treasurer. This was denied. The Circuit court judge said the jury's verdict didn't abolish Sweitzer's guilt as a defaulter. Sweitzer will appeal the suit. He said he would run for treasurer again next fall if litigation fails. Sweitzer's attorneys plan a new audit "which may show there is no shortage after all." The state started a new audit of Sweitzer's tax redemption funds "which may show an even greater shortage." This is preliminary to starting a recovery suit against the company that bonded Sweitzer for $600,000. The redemption funds belong to county municipalities. Meanwhile, fellow Democrats opined that Sweitzer would not get far in his comeback.

Bob and Joe.

Master in Chancery Samuel P. Epstein was assigned last week to hear the three-way suit for an accounting of the defunct law partnership of Crowe, Gorman & Savage. One of the few things Epstein could be sure of after listening to a week's name calling and dollar counting was that Robert E. Crowe and Joseph P. Savage were once good friends, but now are enemies. George E. Gorman, former assistant state's attorney, died last January, and Crowe and Savage — Crowe, former state's attorney, and Savage, former assistant state's attorney and board of education member —parted in March. Gorman's widow is a party to the suits. An audit showed $1,123,921 receipts during the six year partnership. The salaries drawn by the three were set as Crowe, $167,136; Gorman, $184,610, and Savage, $192,487. These figures are disputed. Political and nonpartnership dealings obscure the facts. The hearing will continue this week.

City Notes.

Mayor Kelly signed the new ordinance providing Chicago with year round eastern standard time and revoked the licenses of three restaurants, a tavern, and a cigar store for operating slot machines. Then he left for Washington to preside at the United States conference of mayors opening Monday.

The United States board of tax appeals in Washington ruled that the government has no right to tax the estate of the late Bernard A. Eckhart, pioneer Chicago manufacturer, for $1,237,480 on gifts to his wife and children totaling $5,400,611 from 1923 to his death in 1931. The question was whether Eckhart, who lived 83 years, anticipated death. His rugged health decided the case.

Purchase of new books at the Chicago public library was stopped in 1931. How much the public wanted new books was shown in October when 26,000, an all time month's record, applied for cards on the strength of preliminary restocking. Last week Chief Librarian Carl B. Roden placed an order for 63,000 new volumes, valued at $63,258. He expects to get 175,000 more within a few months.

The only action in the federal litigation keeping "Tobacco Road" under ban in Chicago for the fourth week was the producers' request that the city's $10,000 bond be increased. The increase was denied. The bond was posted to protect the producers against loss. If they win they can collect. Meanwhile, Chicago's fight on the show, described as indecent by Mayor Kelly, found divided support. Detroit closed the show there two weeks ago, but Cleveland approved it. Cleveland's new mayor, Harold H. Burton, said the people should be the censors.

Eames MacVeagh, once Chicago's most eligible bachelor, will not appeal the $2,500 breach of contract judgment won by Miss Louise Hagen, New York artist. She bore him a son in 1911 and he supported her until his marriage in 1929. MacVeagh said he could not pay the $2,500 settlement she claimed.

The complete count of the Kentucky election of Nov. 5 showed a majority of 110,000 for repeal of the state dry law. The mountain districts, where they distill their own whisky, voted for the dry law.

Chicago police picked up Alex Touhey in an alley in the West Madison street river district. They thought he was just another bum—until they found bankbooks showing more than $18,000 in deposits in his pockets.

Guy Hendrix of McAlester, Okla., asked Kansas City police to help him find Virginia Whitaker, his sweetheart. He carried two cartons of cigarets under his arm. He explained she had left him because he did not want her to smoke. The cigarets are for her if she'll come back, he says.

Mrs. Cary Allen of Gulfport, Miss., heard a noise outside her house one night. She suspected a prowler. She fired a gun in the direction of the noise. At dawn she found the prowler dead. It was the family cow.

William Minkkinen, a farmer of Sudsbury, Ont., wanted to die. He stood on the bank of the Vermilion river. In his right hand he held a makeshift dynamite bomb, in the other a knife. He slashed his throat and jumped into the river. The bomb exploded as he hit the water. He was drowned.

While at work in a CCC camp at Pocatello, Idaho, William Brown sneezed so hard that his shoulder blade snapped out of place. At the hospital later he sneezed again; the blade snapped back into place.

H. B. Gray appeared before Judge A. A. Hatch in Tulsa, Okla., on a charge of drunkenness. "I sentence you to buy your family a turkey for Thanksgiving," said the judge. "Fine," said Gray. "But how will I know you've bought a turkey?" Judge Hatch asked. "You're invited, judge," replied Gray.

SAGE.

Ed Howe, sage of Potato hill, arrived in Miami, Fla., for his winter stay. Although he is 82 years old and his health is failing, he is writing a book. It will be called "Final Conclusions." Howe, full name Edgar Watson Howe, has for more than 50 years preached success and respectability. His home is in Atchison, Kas., where, many years ago, he founded the Globe. He retired in 1914, but soon afterward founded a monthly—Ed Howe's Monthly, a journal of "indignation and education." Book writing is not new to him. When he was a young man he wrote "The Story of a Country Town," a best seller.

Politics

Into Chicago from the west Tuesday came two possible Republican presidential candidates, former President Herbert Hoover and Senator William E. Borah. Mr. Hoover was headed for New York, Mr. Borah for Washington.

Mr. Hoover refused to talk politics. He said he was going to New York on business. He arrived there on Wednesday. He attended an insurance company meeting. Last night he spoke before the Ohio Society of New York, a Republican organization. [See main news section.]

[In Paris Thursday Senator Henry Berenger, former French ambassador to the United States, said it was Mr. Hoover's fault that France had stopped paying her war debts to America. He said that France paid America as long as Germany paid France. France stopped paying, he went on, after Mr. Hoover, then President, persuaded the former allies to suspend the German debts.]

Senator Borah was more talkative in Chicago than Mr. Hoover, but didn't say much. He didn't know whether he would enter impending preferential primaries; he was sure President Roosevelt wasn't as strong as in 1933. Both in Chicago on Tuesday and in Washington on Thursday and again on Friday he was cagey about saying he was a candidate.

The strongest voice of the week was that of Alfred M. Landon, Republican governor of Kansas, another possible candidate. Interviewed at Topeka, he cited a few jobs confronting the Republican candidate. He said he must be a man able to clean up the New Deal mess; he must be sound on money questions; he must reshape the AAA on a sensible basis; he must be able to balance a lopsided budget. "And the way to balance a budget," Landon said, briefly, "is to spend less than you take in." He did that in Kansas. However, thousands of Kansans on relief complained Thursday that his budget balancing injured them.

Young Republicans, meeting in Des Moines, Ia., last Sunday, pledged coöperation with the G. O. P. national committee. They set forth a declaration of anti-New Deal principles. ●● New England's Young Republicans on Sunday visited the grave of Calvin Coolidge at Rutland, Vt.

The Democratic party was assured of Alabama's convention votes for President Roosevelt. The state executive committee elected four delegates to the 1936 convention and instructed them to vote for him. This bit of cheer, although expected, was offset by an editorial in the magazine Today, whose editor is Raymond Moley, Roosevelt friend. The editorial said the Nov. 5 elections showed that if the presidential election were to be held now the Democrats "would lose New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois."

Political Notes.

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, independent Republican and a Roosevelt supporter, was quoted Nov. 8 as saying he would not seek reëlection next year. On Tuesday it was hinted the President wanted him to run. Next day, in Los Angeles, Norris denied he had said he wouldn't run. On Friday Mr. Roosevelt said if he were a Nebraskan he wouldn't allow Norris to quit.

President George W. Young of the Chicago Association of Commerce, appointed a committee of 180 men to work to bring the two national conventions to Chicago. Both met here in 1932.

Crime

A close friendship existed for more than a year between Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, German scientist and importer, and Miss Vera Stretz, honey haired blonde, in New York. But he had a wife and two children near Karlsruhe, in Baden. Nevertheless Miss Stretz, a university graduate, evidently hoped to marry him. Recently he visited his family in Germany. He returned to New York on the liner Europa a week ago Friday. He seemed cool toward Miss Stretz. Then she saw him with another woman. Tuesday night Miss Stretz went to his room. Police believe he told her he could not marry her. Miss Stretz shot him four times and killed him. Later she admitted "I did it," but would talk no further.

Attorney General Homer Cummings announced in Washington Thursday that Al Capone doesn't wear silk underwear in Alcatraz prison. He said he's wearing the kind the other prisoners wear. His remarks were prompted by reports that Capone had been buying fancy shirts and underwear from London firms.

Twenty years ago Michael Sisto, then 35 years old, shot and killed James Delissio in New York City. A few weeks ago Sisto, living in Brooklyn, told his family he expected to be killed by Delissio's relatives. Early Monday he was shot to death. Police arrested Mat Delissio, 72 years old, and Anthony Delissio, father and brother of Sisto's victim.

James La Rue, 28 years old, was arrested in Chicago as a burglary suspect Sunday. A year ago his case attracted wide attention. He fled to Chicago after escaping from a Florida chain gang. Florida started extradition proceedings for his return. Illinois courts protected him.

A petition was filed with the United States Supreme court on Tuesday to set aside the death sentence of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted as the kidnaper-slayer of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. The petition charges Hauptmann's trial at Flemington, N. J., was a circus, that mob spirit prevailed, that Trial Judge Thomas W. Trenchard favored the prosecution, and that Col. Lindbergh's daily presence at the trial influenced the jury.

At his inauguration as mayor of Cleveland on Monday Harold H. Burton announced a new war on crime. That night he went out with a police squad. Armed with a revolver, he helped to capture a burglar.

Radio programs will be broadcast from the Illinois state prison at Joliet at 7:15 o'clock every Monday and Thursday night. The idea is to keep convicts out of mischief.

Science

The stratosphere is the upper layer of atmosphere or gas which blankets the earth. It begins at a variable height of about 7 miles and probably ends 30 miles from the earth. It differs from lower strata because there is little temperature change, no water and no clouds and little vertical movement of air currents. Scientists long to understand it—to know what the earth and sun look like from there, whether its ozone is what protects the earth from harmful, invisible sun rays, what electrical properties it has, whether it has wind and weather affecting safe airplane travel and what kind of microscopic animals may live there.

Visionaries have dreamed of trips to the moon [238,857 miles away] but until last week the farthest up men had gone was 72,000 feet. Three soviet balloonists did this Jan. 30, 1934, but they did not live to tell it, being killed when their gondola crashed. That left the 61,237 balloon altitude record of Commander T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester Fordney as the official one. Sponsored by the National Geographic society and the United States army, Capt. Albert W. Stevens, Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, and Maj. William E. Kepner went to Rapid City, S. D., and in July, 1934, climbed to 60,000 feet before their balloon ripped and crashed. They saved themselves with parachutes. Last July, Stevens and Anderson had a new Goodyear balloon, Explorer II., at Rapid City. It was the world's largest [as high as a 31 story building and holding 3,700,000 cubic feet of helium]. But it burst during inflation. The two aeronauts repaired it and at 8 a. m. Monday the gondola swung into the air. Eight hours and 13 minutes later the balloon settled like a poached egg in a pasture 240 miles away, near White City, S. D.

Midway in their day aloft, Stevens and Anderson had spent 35 minutes at the highest altitude achieved by man—74,000 feet [about 14 miles]. During their trip they talked by short wave radio with scientist advisers and their wives at Rapid City, New York, and Washington.

What impressions were made on the scientific instruments inside and outside of the 9 foot metal ball were matters for learned study. But the two captains had strange sights to report. The sun was a yellow ball in a blue-black sky. The earth was a vague white verging into the light blue of the horizon. The temperature outside was 68 degrees below zero and 19 above inside.

LINE'S END.

The old 8th avenue trolley system in New York died Tuesday. Quiet, swift motor buses took its place. New Yorkers welcomed them. Hundreds witnessed ceremonies at busy Columbus circle opening the new service.

Art

Sweetness; Light.

While the conservative patrons' loud decision, that what isn't art may be seen at the Chicago Art institute, continued to pack the crowds in last week, the jury of the annual exhibit of Americana made a formal statement in New York. The three, Henry Varnum Poor, Lloyd Goodrich, and Waldo Pierce, said: "The jury sincerely feels that it did not discriminate against either the 'conservatives' or the 'modernist' trends, but selected the best work . . . 'Sweetness and light' and 'pretty' subjects may be comparatively lacking in the exhibition, but this is due not to the individual taste of the jurors, but to the character of the overwhelming majority of the works submitted. There has been a deep shifting in the values in the artists' world. . . . We see . . . much to applaud in the freshness, courage and vitality of . . . an art no longer borrowed from Europe. As for the so-called 'indecent' pictures, the jury cannot remember a single painting calculated to disturb any but the professional vice crusader."

French Accent.

Meanwhile in New York the $1,000,000 collection of paintings by the mad Dutchman, Vincent Van Gogh, continued to draw up to 2,500 persons a day. Van Gogh profoundly influenced French art and American modernists reflect his vivid technique. Four galleries are accenting French trends.

Rockefeller Center offered a collection of "Napoleonana" from French public and private galleries. The exhibit includes all the famous portraits of Napoleon Bonaparte. The exhibit is called "the most important historical record of a lone man" ever held in America. It includes a baby's rattle.

Map showing the territory that has been taken from China. Hongkong is a British possession. Macao is a Portuguese possession. Kwangchowan is leased to France. Corea, Liaotung, Formosa, and the Pescadores Islands are Japanese possessions. Manchukuo is theoretically an independent nation, but it is completely controled by Japan. Japan is now trying to make an independent north China out of the five northern provinces of China. The new nation would then be completely under Japanese control.

Medicine

Nobel.

Mme. Irene Joliat-Curie of France has carried on the work of her mother, the late Mme. Marie Curie, co-discoverer of radium. But radium is costly as a healer. The daughter and her husband, Prof. Frederick Joliat, decided there must be cheaper rays. They produced radium substitutes by bombarding atoms of ordinary elements, as aluminum, with alpha rays. Last week the Swedish academy at Stockholm awarded the Nobel prize in chemistry to man and wife, both about 35 years old. They said they'd share the $40,000 with their underpaid assistants.

The Nobel prize in physics was awarded to Prof. James Chadwick of Cambridge university, England. He discovered the neutron division of the atom. The Nobel prize in literature was withheld. The donor of these $40,000 yearly awards was Alfred Nobel [1833-1896], who invented dynamite, made a fortune in its use and left his entire estate to the peaceful advancement of humanity.

Mercy.

The report of the Buffalo, N. Y., Times that a woman, painfully crippled in an automobile accident, wanted a doctor to kill her renewed discussion last week of incurables' right to die. The demand of Miss Anna Becker, 34 years old, for the Erie County Medical association to appoint a medical executioner was quoted. So was her doctor's belief that she could be cured at the Mayo-Johns Hopkins hospitals. The medical society's president said decision rested with Miss Becker's doctor; to the medical society, the act was legally impossible. The whole story was scouted when a reporter could not find a Miss Anna Becker.

The London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical association reported that many leading English churchmen saw nothing un-Christian in the euthanasia [painless death] advocated by English medical authorities for those incurables who desire it. The eminent Dean Inge headed the clerics indorsing the bill which the Voluntary Euthanasia Legalization society is preparing for parliament.

FRANZ WERFEL.

Among the arrivals in New York from Europe Tuesday was Franz Werfel, German-Jewish author. He will attend rehersals of his latest work, "The Road to Promise." Werfel is considered one of the leading writers today. His "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" earned him American recognition. This was the story of the heroic stand of a small band of Armenian Christians on the Mount of Moses [Musa Dagh] against the Turks in the summer of 1915.

Foreign Notes

Croats and Serbs are the main national groups within the kingdom of Jugo-Slavia. The Serbs hold the controling power. Dr. Vladimir Matchek, whom the Croats call the "father of Croatia," announced Tuesday that the Croats will never yield to domination by the Serbs. He said the Croats will never again sit in the Jugo-Slav parliament. His party demands that there be two separate national governments on the order of the old Austro-Hungarian alliance. One of the governments would be Croatian and the other Serbian. Each would have its own army, but there would be a common foreign office and a common collector of customs duties.

Cubans have found a new way of putting over an election fraud. When Cubans register for an election they are supposed to put the print of the right thumb on the registration sheet. Last Wednesday Dr. Israel Castellanos, identification expert in Havana, announced that some voters were cheating. They also registered with the imprint of the big toe. In this way they hope to be able to vote twice.

There are 24 German and 5 Lithuanian members in the recently elected legislature of Memel territory. Lithuania is trying hard to make Memel a part of Lithuania. Germany also wants the territory, which was taken away from her after the world war. When the governor of Memel asked one of the five Lithuanian legislators to form a cabinet there were protests from Germany. The German members of the legislature said they would not agree. Great Britain warned Lithuania that the agreement under which Britain, France, and Italy declared the partial independence of Memel must be observed. Under the agreement Lithuania promised to appoint a cabinet which would represent the majority of the legislature.

Bolivia and Paraguay are not fighting in the Chaco. Peace terms have not yet been settled, however. Until they are settled Paraguay refuses to let some 28,000 Bolivian prisoners go home. On Tuesday it was reported that 49 Bolivian officers had escaped and started for home.

President Rafael L. Trujillo of the Dominican republic has been planning a year's trip to the United States and Europe. He has never been out of his own country. Last Wednesday the Dominican assembly requested him not to make the trip. The vote of the assembly was unanimous.

Fishermen of the Caspian sea last Tuesday told how they had been stuck at the bottom of the sea for five days. They said the tide went out along 150 miles of the northern shore. Their boats were left stuck in the mud several miles from shore. Airplanes dropped food to them.

Peru and Ecuador have been arguing over their joint boundary for 100 years. Headlines in Ecuadorian newspapers announced last Monday that large forces of Peruvian troops were gathered along the border. Two days later the Peruvian foreign office said that no Peruvian troops had been sent to the border. The foreign office also said that Peru has warned Ecuador about large numbers of Ecuadorian troops being stationed at the frontier.

DOGS.

On Oct. 25, Sox, a Boston bull terrier, leaped out of the car of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. O'Hara near Pawtucket, R. I. He headed for the woods. Mrs. O'Hara became grief stricken. Her husband, wealthy director of the Narragansett race track, offered $1,000 reward. He said he might even spend $15,000 to find the dog. Seventeen days after Sox's disappearance, Walter L. Kelley, an unemployed Spanish war veteran, found him buried under a mass of leaves in a cranberry patch. Nearly dead, Sox was revived. Kelley collected $1,000.

Jack, a brindle bull, is a recorded inmate of the Franklin County [Ohio.] Children's home. For 11 years Jack has been the constant companion of Billy McGinnis, 15 years old. During the last two years Billy lost his mother, father, and grandmother. As Judge E. V. Mahaffey of Columbus signed the order committing him to the children's home Billy asked if Jack couldn't go, too. Judge Mahaffey signed another order—this was necessary—committing the dog with Billy.

Religion

George Chalmers Richmond, former Episcopal minister, filed a suit in New York asking $100,000 damages for libel from the Very Rev. James De Wolf Perry, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in America. Richmond contends that Bishop Perry made slanderous remarks which caused him to lose his job as rector of Christ church in Brooklyn.

An infant girl was being baptized in Kulga, Russia. She was dipped into a pot of boiling baptismal water. She was scalded to death. Last Monday authorities opened an investigation to determine whether members of the baptismal party were drunk.

There now are 21 vacancies in the Catholic College of Cardinals. Reports from Rome Monday said that Pope Pius is expected to call a Vatican consistory in December to fill at least 10 of the vacancies in the college of 70.

Flying

Capt. Donald Buckman, 34 years old, army pilot, won and lost a race with death Tuesday night. He was flying from Riverside, Cal., to Bakersfield, Cal. With him were three passengers. While over the Mojave desert, 100 miles from Kern field in Bakersfield, Capt. Buckman was seized with a heart attack. He knew he had to make Kern field. He gritted his teeth; he made it. Stepping from the plane, after landing, he collapsed. Twenty minutes later he died.

Miss Jean Batten, 25 years old, pretty New Zealand flyer, on Wednesday flew from Dakar, Senegal, to Pernambuco, Brazil. She became the first woman to fly alone across the south Atlantic. Her time was 13 hours 15 minutes, a record. The distance is 1,281 miles. Last spring she flew alone to Australia, the first woman to solo that flight.

Hope was abandoned for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, lost with Tom Pethybridge over the Bay of Bengal. All week long flyers out of Singapore searched for Sir Charles' ship.

Because of the Mexican government's demand that the Aerovias Centrales [Central Airways] employ Mexican pilots, the company on Tuesday ceased operations. The line touched all principal cities in northwestern Mexico. The company, associated with Pan-American, said not enough competent Mexican pilots are available.

Travel by air today is three times safer than ten years ago and four times faster than fourteen years ago. So reported the senate commerce subcommittee in Washington on Monday. Carl Dolan, chief investigator for the committee, said his men investigated 101 fatal airplane accidents since 1927, and that 35 of them involved a plane now out of manufacture. The 101 crashes killed 252 persons, 140 of them passengers.

The body of Naval Lieut. Mathias M. Marple, 36 years old, who crashed with his plane into Chesapeake bay on Oct. 30, was found under 24 feet of water three miles off Annapolis on Monday. ●● Three flyers were killed on Monday when their airmail plane crashed during a storm near Marseilles, France. ●● Dean Faulkner, 31 years old, and three of his passengers were killed on Sunday when his plane fell at Thaxton, Miss. Faulkner was a brother of the novelist, William Faulkner.

Establishing a new record, David Llewellyn and Mrs. Jill Wyndham arrived at Hanworth, England, from Capetown, Africa, on Monday. They made the trip in 6 days 12 hours 3 minutes. The previous record was 7 days 7 hours and 5 minutes, established in 1932 by Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison.

Roelofs, died of spinal meningitis at Sioux Center. ●● The Iowa Anti-Saloon league has asked all pastors in the state to assist in a fight to drive liquor out of Iowa. ●● A fire attacked the four story annex of the Mercy hospital at Iowa City. It drove 100 employés to the streets and frightened seventy patients in the main building near by. ●● Glen Yoke, 38 years old, of Davenport, started from home for his first day on a WPA job. He fell, fractured his skull, and died.

Legislature

By a vote of 134 to 6 the Illinois house of representatives on Thursday approved the new bill for old age pensions. Like the original bill, passed last summer, and which it replaces, it has a New Deal background.

The new bill provides a pension of $1 a day to qualified citizens over 65 years of age. So did the old one. The old act, however, permitted pensioners a total income of $550 annually, including the $360 yearly pension. This meant they would be allowed to earn or receive, if possible, $190 extra from other sources. The new act cuts off help from other sources. If passed the bill will become law next Jan. 1. It will cost the state about $12,000,000 annually.

A bill was introduced in the house on Thursday to license all automobile drivers in the state.

The senate on Wednesday adopted a resolution requesting Gov. Henry Horner to call another special session so that an appropriation of $2,328,256 can be made to the Chicago school board. The state owes the board that amount. [See City.]

CLOSED BANKS TO MAKE YEAR'S BIGGEST RETURN

Payments to Exceed 1½ Millions.

Depositors of closed state banks in Cook county will get more of their money back in the final three months of this year than in any previous quarter of 1935.

Total returns in excess of $1,500,000 seem assured this quarter, and there is a possibility the payments may aggregate nearly $2,500,000. If the latter figure should be approached, it would be more than in any three months during the last two years, with the exception of the third quarter of 1934, when $4,326,000 was paid out.

As many as 31 banks may yield returns during the current quarter, compared with 17 which repaid $912,000 in the third quarter. The largest repayment this year was in the first three months when $1,365,000 was returned.

Depends on Collections.

Several repayments are dependent on Reconstruction Finance corporation loans or collections on stockholders' liability. A majority of the payments will be made in December, although a few already are in the hands of depositors.

The list of payments expected from Sept. 30 to Dec. 31 follows:

	Per cent.	Amount.
*Armitage State	5	$ 21,500
*Auburn Park Trust & Sav.	6	31,500
*Brainerd State	3½	6,500
Brighton Park State	10	35,500
*Bryn Mawr State	5	25,000
Builders & Mer Bk & Tr.	5	145,000
*Chatham State	3	31,000
†Columbia State Savings	5	63,000
First State of Steger	10	9,700
Fullerton State	5	70,000
Industrial State	10	19,000
Lake View State	5	288,000
Lansing State	5	17,000
*Lincoln Trust and Savings.	5	141,000
†Marquette State	5	48,500
Marshall Square State	5	24,000
Millard State	5	36,500
Novak & Steiskal State	7	40,000
‡Reliance Bank & Trust Co.	5	116,000
*Ridge State	10	19,000
Roseland State Savings	5	81,000
Second Humboldt State	5	21,500
*Sherman State	7½	17,000
*South Side Sav Bk & Tr.	10	301,000
South-West Trust and Sav.	10	164,000
†State of Beverly Hills	5	29,000
*Stockmen's Trust and Sav.	10	61,000
*Stony Island State & Sav.	4	83,000
*West Lawn Trust and Sav.	7	16,000
‡West Town State	10	276,000
Total for 30 banks		$2,237,200

†Payments will be raised to 10 per cent if the expected RFC loans are received, for an aggregate of $140,500 more than stated total.

‡West Town return depends on receipt of funds from receiver for stockholders' liability suit. Reliance expects to make 10 per cent return if stockholders' liability receipts are turned over this quarter, but plans 5 per cent in any event.

Another Payment Possible.

In addition to the listed payments and possibility of increases in the returns of four banks, hope is held that the Noel State bank may yield 5 per cent, or $175,000, by the end of the year, although the probability is that the disbursal will not be made until early 1936.

Several of the large payments may not materialize until after the end of the year. Receipt of most of the RFC loans in the next month or six weeks is believed assured, but details of the big South Side Savings Bank and Trust company loan may prolong negotiations into 1936. Receipt of funds from stock liability receivers also must be classified as somewhat uncertain.

Six to Make First Return.

Six of the banks are making their first returns to depositors since closing. These are the Sherman State, which already has made its payment, and five Bain banks—Armitage State, Chatham State, Ridge State, Stony Island State and Savings, and West Lawn Trust and Savings. In all, eight of the old Bain chain will make payments as a result of RFC loans, leaving four which have repaid nothing.

After this quarter's return 24 of the 142 banks in receivership will be left in the group which has yet to yield a penny for depositors. The number was cut from 34 to 30 in the third quarter of this year. A majority of those remaining are not expected to pay more than 10 per cent to their depositors.

RESERVE BANK SELECTS TWO NEW DIRECTORS

Frank D. Williams, vice president and cashier of the First Capital National bank of Iowa City, Ia., was reëlected a class A director of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago yesterday.

Nicholas H. Noyes, secretary and treasurer of Eli Lilly & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., was elected a class B director. Both men were named for three year terms beginning Jan. 1, 1936.

BankersPutOn an Act—a Night in New Orleans

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Extra curricular activities of delegates to annual conventions of the American Bankers' association are usually as interesting as the speeches made. Here are some sidelights of the New Orleans sessions which ended Thursday:

New Orleans' famed "southern hospitality" reached a new peak at the grand ball on Wednesday night when the home folks got out their Mardi Gras costumes and staged a party that filled the entire Municipal auditorium, which covers half a city block. Half of the building was allocated to dancers and the other half was blocked off for tables, at which some two thousand guests, plus several hundred New Orleans hosts and hostesses, were refreshed with a complete supper, plus champagne and what will you have?

In every hotel occupied by the visiting bankers, except the Roosevelt, there were lodged New Dealers from Washington—employés of the treasury. These gentlemen were quietly notified by treasury secret service men to steer clear of the Roosevelt—not because the bronze plaque of "Teddy" Roosevelt hanging over the registration desk but because of possible wire tapping. The Roosevelt hotel is run by Seymour Weiss, former lieutenant of Senator Huey Long, and the treasury is investigating the income tax returns of the Long crowd.

Some of the top men of the A. B. A. were discomfited by the discovery that Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, had been given a place on the list of speakers. Angas, who writes books predicting booms, is unpopular with many bankers because of his New Dealish slant on "planned money." The major, originally slated to speak on Tuesday, was pushed along to the last place on Wednesday morning's program. After sitting on the platform for two days he finally made his speech on "Crucial Economic Problems."

W. H. Miller, vice president of the City National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, caused Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the FDIC some anxious moments when he buttonholed him in the lobby of the Roosevelt hotel, saying, "There's a fellow over here I want you to meet—'Hundred Per Cept' Nichols of the First National Bank of Englewood." Crowley was much relieved to discover that it was all in fun and that Nichols, bitter critic of the FDIC, was not present.

Vice President Harold Amberg of the First National Bank of Chicago was chagrined to discover that his extemporaneous remarks on recent banking legislation in a committee meeting had been taken down by a stenographer for distribution to newspapermen. In his talk about the banking act of 1935 Amberg had retold the story about the teacher who asked her pupils to compute her age by telling them that she traveled from New York to Chicago in the fourth section of the fifth Pullman on a train, making three stops, traveling 70½ miles per hour, and arriving in New York at 6:30 a. m., and the pupil who, when asked how he had arrived at the correct answer—38, replied by saying, "Teacher, my brother Bill is 19 and he is only half nuts."

SEVERAL BIG UTILITY BOND ISSUES WILL BE OFFERED THIS WEEK

Offering is expected Tuesday by a banking syndicate headed by Blythe & Co. of $40,000,000 Los Angeles Gas and Electric corporation first and general mortgage 4 per cent bonds due in 1970. The company is a subsidiary of the Pacific Lighting corporation.

The bonds, secured by a first lien on all the company's property, will be offered at 102 and accrued interest. They refund $4,800,000 of first and refunding 5 per cent bonds, due in 1939, $22,000,000 general and refunding mortgage 5½s and 6s, maturing in 1942, 1943, and 1947, and $10,000,000 of first and general mortgage 5s due in 1961.

Morgan Stanley & Co. will offer on the same day $43,963,500 Ohio Edison first and consolidated mortgage bonds due in 1965. W. C. Langley & Co. will offer $5,000,000 Iowa Southern Utilities company 5½s; First Boston corporation will bring out $30,000,000 Kansas Power and Light corporation 4½s, and Brown Harriman will offer $20,500,000 Southwestern Gas and Electric 4s, if the fight to block sale of the issue is settled before the end of the week.

COMMODITIES ARE IRREGULAR IN LAST WEEK

Commodity markets fluctuated in an irregular manner last week. While wheat sold at a new low since the middle of September, the close on Saturday showed a fractional gain compared with the finish of the previous week. Lard, cotton, and butter futures advanced sharply, with the latter selling at the best figures since 1931. Coffee dropped to a new low for the season, while cottonseed oil is only slightly under the best figures witnessed so far this year. Rubber and hides eased on profit taking.

	Close		Season's range
	Nov.16.	Nov. 9.	High.	Low.

WHICH STOCKS FOR INFLATION PROFITS?

Inflation is a moving force in the present market. The prices of many stocks will rise or fall according to the way Inflation affects them. Your ability to make profits in a market dominated by Inflation will depend upon how successfully you anticipate its effect on individual issues.

This TECHNIGRAPHICS has done with conspicuous success. Monetary Inflation benefited the mining group most. In 1932 and 1933 TECHNIGRAPHICS selected Homestake for its advance from 135 to 380; Alaska Juneau, 12 to 30; Dome Mines, 15 to 43; McIntyre Porcupine, 23 to 45.

In April, 1935, Credit Inflation began to take effect. TECHNIGRAPHICS urged liquidation of mining issues and purchase of industrial and aircraft issues, including Chrysler, Westinghouse, Boeing, Douglas and United Aircraft, etc., for large advances.

What stocks will Inflation now favor? What stocks will it injure?

Now more than ever you need tested, scientific advice. You want results, not long-winded discussions. The recommendations of TECHNIGRAPHICS are alert, timely, specific. No mistaking what is meant nor what action to take. Send One Dollar for a three weeks' trial—both stock and grain. No further obligation and no salesman will call. Write to

New NRA Plan Declared Blow to Job Upturn

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—About 52 per cent of the trained laborers of manufacturing plants who were unemployed in March, 1933, had regained their jobs by September, 1935, and the trend of reëmployment is still upward, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reported today in declaring that new NRA legislation "would impede the continuance of gains."

This stand was taken in the chamber's weekly Washington review at a time when the administration was taking steps looking to the restitution of NRA and had asked 3,000 industrialists to meet here Dec. 9 to discuss, among other things, the possibility of supporting new NRA legislation.

Declares Figures Impressive.

"The new employment and reëmployment provided by industry between March, 1933, when employment was at its low point, and September, 1935, result in impressive figures," the chamber declared. "In manufacturing the increase in number of persons employed was 42 per cent, on the railroads, 10 per cent, and in distribution, 18 per cent. Many found work in other directions, but 52 per cent, representing 2,500,000 persons, were reëmployed in manufacturing."

Explains Its Opposition.

The chamber explained its reason for wanting a greater degree of freedom than it holds has been possible under NRA.

"Legislation such as that under consideration would apply a statutory method to regulate hours and wages in private enterprise, thus preventing the attainment of the necessary degree of flexibility which must prevail if curtailment in production, employment, and purchasing power is to be avoided," its review declared.

"An obvious intent of the pending measure is to bring about decided reactions in working time and increases in wages, from the levels now prevailing in industries concerned with government business."

UTILITY CONTROL DRIVE REPORTED ROOSEVELT AIM

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Presidential approval of a securities commission drive to win holding company conformance with the new utility law was reported given today at a White House conference.

James M. Landis, commission chairman, was noncommittal about the parley, but the capital understanding was that Roosevelt approved the commission's generally aggressive attitude toward holding company registrations.

The commission announced that several small companies had applied for exemption from the act. Reports persisted that most big companies would not register, but a utility representative insisted no company had made a formal decision.

6 Outstanding Opportunities
—With Major Improvement Still Ahead

At present high prices, many securities are selling far out of line with their actual earnings possibilities. The biggest strides—the biggest gains from now on should be seen in securities representing companies which have seen some improvement—but with major improvements still ahead.

The Magazine of Wall Street Staff has just completed analyses of six companies in the best position to show large earnings gains in the weeks and months ahead—and offering the greatest possibilities from both an investment and profit standpoint.

The names of these six stocks, and analyses of their possibilities, will be sent by return mail to all new subscribers accepting this special trial offer.

GOVERNMENT MAY BE BIGGEST REALTY OWNER

$94,582,194 Property Held for Sale.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The federal government, as the biggest banker in the country, was disclosed today to be in a fair way toward becoming the nation's largest real estate owner and operator.

Through the 21 agencies that it wholly finances and the 10 others that it helps to finance it has written down on the treasury books $94,582,194 of "real estate and other property held for sale." Most of this came from loans that were not repaid. Farms head the list.

Has Modern Jail.

It has a modern, well equipped jail in Georgia that it is permitting the state to buy on terms like rent. It owns 6,571 bales of cotton. It has a wide assortment of "run of the mine" real estate and business property in Louisiana to rent or sell. There is a spotted and much used collection of stocks and bonds, not to mention numerous other things of virtually every type around which a mortgage can be wrapped.

The Georgia jail was built by PWA, but the state could not give the proper collateral for a loan, and the government kept title.

Owners "Forget" Cotton.

The 6,571 bales of cotton came to the Commodity Credit corporation in an odd way. It made loans on the cotton in 1933 and 1934. The amount loaned did not represent the full value of the cotton, but the persons to whom the loans were made "forgot" that they still had an equity in the cotton and moved away, leaving no forwarding address.

The federal land banks have 24,000 farms on their hands, booked at a value of $92,405,398. Land values are on the upgrade now and the farms have been moving fast during the last few months. But there hasn't been any large change in the number on hand, officials said. They didn't care to discuss this point too much.

Position of HOLC.

The Home Owners' Loan corporation was booked by the treasury for $2,034,509 worth of real estate held for sale. Officials of the corporation said it actually owned 361 homes which it would sell or rent. It has set up a property management division to handle rentals.

Officials said that in addition to these, foreclosure proceedings were under way against 2,105 other homes. In 1,096 of these cases they said the borrower refused to pay when able to do so; 728 others simply moved away and left the property; 211 of the borrowers died, and legal complications accounted for the remainder.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation had $3,298,825 of property for sale, but for the most part this was taken over in liquidating closed banks. It got a $2,100,000 block of real estate, notes, and mortgages when the Union Indemnity company of New Orleans was ordered auctioned. A large part turned out to be residential and business real estate.

The only other large item on the treasury books was one of $10,189,560 for PWA. Public works officials said they had no defaulted loans and no property for sale.

INDUSTRY INDEX RISES TO A NEW PEAK SINCE 1933

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Nov. 16.—With each component registering a gain over the previous week the Associated Press index of industrial activity climbed to the highest level since 1933. This was the sixth consecutive advance.

The index, with seasonally adjusted indices of its six component parts, calculated on latest weekly statistics and based on 1929-'30 as 100, follows:

	Latest wk.	Prev. wk.	Yr. ago.
Composite index	*82.5	81.4	62.5
Auto production	*92.8	87.6	36.1

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

"Bull" Days of 1929 Recalled by Stock Market Drive—Sales Reach 4 Million Shares in Day—Foreign Security Buying Is Factor—Bankers Rebel Against New Deal Policies.

Scenes reminiscent of the bull market days of 1929 were brought back to the nation's stock markets last week as prices rushed upward in the heaviest trading in years. More than 2 million shares were traded in each full session, and Thursday the volume closely approached the 4 million share mark. Highest price levels since 1931 were recorded during the week.

Reasons for the upsurge were manifold. Business results were regarded as highly encouraging, with a long list of dividend increases and extras augmenting many sharp gains in corporate earnings. On Wednesday the market had before it a reassuring statement by Secretary of Commerce Roper, who said the government had completed its "reform" program.

Buying Source.

Much of the buying came from the huge reservoir of idle funds in the United States as owners became concerned over their inability to employ excess reserves profitably. Europe added its quota as frightened capital sought refuge from uncertainties on the continent.

Indices also were helpful. Steel production rose 1½ points in the middle of the week, although this tapered off later. Power production established another new all-time high mark, auto output rose to 93,000 units in the week, and business handled by checks climbed sharply above last year. Building construction continued to gain, retail trade made a good showing, and the outlook for Christmas business was encouraging.

The foreign situation shaped up favorably for the stock market. Difficulties in France, where devaluation was again talked of, brought additional shipments of gold to this country. Victory for the conservatives in the British elections was bullishly construed. Added to this was the prospect for maintenance of high business levels during the fourth quarter.

Bankers.

For two years the commercial bankers of the United States have been keeping their criticisms of the New Deal financial policies much to themselves. Six thousand banks are partly owned by the government through purchase of their stock and notes by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and those not partly owned by the RFC are subject to various measures of control through the controler of the currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and the federal reserve board. Subject thus to possible "crackdowns" the bankers have figured that discretion is the better part of valor.

Last week this policy of silent acquiescence was suddenly shattered when 3,607 members of the American Bankers' association met in New Orleans for their sixty-first annual convention. Despite the political maneuvering of the A. B. A. management, led by the outgoing president, Rudolf S. Hecht, chairman of the Hibernia National Bank of New Orleans, which has received RFC funds, the delegates suddenly began a spirited attack on the New Deal's wasteful spending, soaring debt, and interference with private business.

Revolt.

So strong was the sudden outburst of pent up criticism that it moved the delegates to break A. B. A. tradition by rejecting E. G. Bennett, the management's candidate for key position in the annual election and choosing instead Orval W. Adams, executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank of Salt Lake City, who, two days previously, had started the rebellion with a speech lashing New Deal extravagance and urging that banks boycott new issues of government bonds until there is assurance that the administration is willing to get back to sound financial methods.

Bennett was opposed because of the fact that he is associated with Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles in the ownership of a chain of banks in Utah and was himself a former director of the New Deal Federal Deposit Insurance corporation. Adams' election as second vice president of the A. B. A., according to custom, would move him up to the presidency two years hence.

REX TUGWELL.

The two leading nonbankers who spoke at the convention also trained their guns on government extravagance and rising taxes. Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, quoted Chief Brain Truster Rexford Guy Tugwell's remark that "workers and farmers must unite against a common enemy and nurse an energizing wrath" and that "what we are witnessing now is the death struggle of industrial autocracy and the birth of democratic discipline." Then, said Sibley, "Frankly, it seems to me that all Mr. Tugwell omitted was, 'On to Moscow!'"

Railroads.

Railroads played a dominant rôle in the week's news. Chief interest centered in an order of the interstate commerce commission Thursday for a thorough investigation of the management and financing of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad as a prelude to renewed demands on congress for authority to regulate all rail expenditures. The action seemed to foreshadow an open breach between the I. C. C. and the Association of American Railroads when J. J. Pelley, head of the association and until little more than a year ago president of the New Haven, next day termed the inquiry "ridiculous and shocking."

He declared a probe of the road would serve no useful purpose and would reflect a radical departure from the conservative policy traditionally pursued by the federal agency. He was apprehensive of possible trafic losses in the New England territory, due to ill will the investigation might create. Pelley declared a public investigation would disclose nothing not readily available to the commission "and that the commission is aware of this."

Van Sweringen.

In St. Louis a special federal court counsel held that O. P. Van Sweringen acted without authority in purchasing $3,438,016 of stocks and bonds on the open market in 1930 and 1931 for a Missouri Pacific railroad subsidiary. The opinion held Van Sweringen was personally responsible for the losses, which amounted to about $2,000,000.

The day following Federal Judge Charles B. Faris of the Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis disapproved contracts by which Missouri Pacific agreed in 1930 to buy terminal properties in Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., from the Van Sweringens for $20,000,000. He advised trustees of the road to take steps to recover

STOCKS CLIMB; TRADING HEAVY FOR WEEK-END

Many Favorites Bid Up to New Highs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 16.—Extraordinary activity featured the week-end dealings on the New York Stock exchange today, the sales total running to 1,639,480 shares, the largest for a Saturday since Feb. 4, last year. In the last few minutes of trading the demand grew so heavy that the high speed ticker fell behind floor transactions more than three minutes.

Numerous trading favorites were bid up to new high prices for the year and a sizable group rose to the best levels since the speculative boom of 1929. Profit taking sales held the general advance in check, however, and in spite of sharp individual gains here and there the "averages" registered only slight improvement on the day.

Traders Still Optimistic.

In spite of a feeling which prevailed in some quarters that the market's tempo of the last two weeks had been a bit too brisk for its own good and that something in the way of technical correction was about in order, traders continued to express optimism.

They pointed to recurrent improvement in trade and industry as the best reason for higher securities prices, and stressed the bullish enthusiasm which has swept through boardrooms throughout the country in the best measure since the boom days of 1929.

Steel stocks were the outstanding performers of the day's activities, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel common seesawing in a neck and neck race most of the day. At one time Bethlehem forged a fraction ahead of its battle scarred rival, but the closing gong found them tied in a dead heat at 50½.

Bethlehem's Gains Largest.

Honors of the contest fell to Bethlehem, however, which bettered its previous rating by 2¾ points, while "Big Steel" was able to show only a point gain for its exertions. It was the first time since the 1917 "war boom" that Bethlehem had been able to top its rival and the first time in about four years that it had crossed 50.

Sugar stocks came in for a whirl on forecasts of good earnings for the year. Great Western set the pace with a gain of more than a point.

Individual performers to attract attention included Coca Cola, which

INFLATION AHEAD—PREPARE NOW

Most leading authorities now agree with THE FINANCIAL WORLD'S oft repeated predictions of inflation. We published more than a dozen feature articles on inflation in 1933 and a total of 25 articles in the years 1934 and 1935. Thousands of investors have greatly strengthened their investment position during the past three years by reading THE FINANCIAL WORLD'S articles on how to safeguard against inflation. It is not too late for you to study profitably each of our coming issues and to prepare to revamp your own holdings to meet developments.

"UTILITIES A BUY NOW?"

The November 20th FINANCIAL WORLD will answer that question. It will point out what the Baltimore Court decision means to the utility group and also weigh the favorable and unfavorable factors of the industry. Read in the same issue the following helpful features: "A Group of Management Stocks", "3 Attractive Convertible Securities", "Christmas Season Stocks", "Buy, Hold or Sell New Haven Guaranteed Issues?", "News and Opinions on 20 Listed Stocks" and 8 new "Stock Factographs." You will receive this issue and the three following issues if you return this "ad" and $1 today. You will also receive these extra aids to profitable investing:

Our November stock ratings and data book covering 1300 stocks, reprints of analyses appraising the value of 13 Public Utility Holding Companies, "15 Stocks for the Coming Prosperity," "An Important Market Signal," "35 Previous Recommendations Still Attractive," "Inflation Looms Nearer," "Rail Shares in Best Position," 64 "Stock Factographs" and "An Analytical Basis for Selecting Stocks."

WHAT INVESTMENT POLICY TODAY?

The conservative investor who is interested primarily in safety and yield is confronted with a difficult problem. In order to obtain the degree of safety he desires he must be satisfied with an income return that is very small compared with what he has been accustomed to. With leading authorities agreed that we have today the basis of a much greater credit inflation than in 1929, every investor can best improve his investment position by having a substantial part of his funds in carefully selected common stocks whose outlook is fairly well defined. Purchases should be considered from the long term standpoint only. The matter of wise selection is all-important. Selections should be made only after a careful study of the basic facts.

Our low price of $10 per year is a very small measure of the exceptional value of our Threefold Investment Service composed of all the following: (a) 52 issues of THE FINANCIAL WORLD, (b) 12 monthly issues of "Independent Appraisals of (1300) Listed Stocks", (c) Confidential Advice Privilege by letter in accordance with our rules. (The advice privilege is exclusively for yearly subscribers.) It will pay you to join the select circle who depend upon us for impartial advice and for basic investment facts. rose 5⅛ points; Cluett-Peabody, up 2½; Hershey Chocolate, up 2¾, and Peoples Drug, up more than 2 points.

The new no par common stock of the Coca Cola company, which split the old stock four to one, was admitted to the list today. The first sale was made at 72½. Meanwhile the old shares sold at 290, or exactly four times the price of the new.

Mercantile issues fared a lot better. R. H. Macy and May Department Stores each rose more than $2 a share, and both the big mail order issues, Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck, boomed to new highs on substantial gains.

Du Pont at New High.

Du Pont set a good example for the chemicals with a rise of more than a point to a new high. The building group was once more in favor after its temporary setback.

Some of the rails did better, but the net improvement of the group as a whole was slight.

Amusement issues subsided on profit taking and the utilities were rather sluggish. Liquors had to weather considerable selling, due in part to the formal signing of the Canadian trade treaty.

Week-end brokerage house comment stressed the statement that the volume of foreign buying reported in the market so far has shown no signs of contraction, but, on the contrary, is reported to be increasing and bolstering the persistent and widespread domestic buying demand.

CANADIAN TREATY CAUSES DECLINE IN BUTTER PRICES

The possibility of heavy imports of butter from Canada as the result of the signing of the reciprocal trade treaty with that country resulted in selling by nervous longs on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Futures closed ⅛ to ¾ cent lower with November and December quoted at 30½ cents per pound.

Canadian butter is reported as selling around 26 cents per pound, while the current import duty is 14 cents per pound. It is figured that if the duty were reduced 50 per cent there is a prospect of the Canadian product being brought in. New Zealand butter was said to be available at about 4 cents per pound above the current quotations at New York. Spot butter in Chicago declined ½ to 1 cent and New York, 1½ cents yesterday.

Egg futures were ¼ to ¾ cent higher with November closing at 22¼ cents per dozen. For the first time in some weeks the four markets took more eggs out of cold storage than for the corresponding period last year. Sales of butter aggregated 278 cars, eggs 63 cars, cheese 1 car and potatoes 1 car. Prices:

PRICES OF LARD FUTURES IMPROVE 20 TO 35 CENTS

Shorts were fairly active buyers of December and May lard yesterday and lifted prices around 25 cents. Strength in hogs and corn, and an advance of 1 shilling per 112 pounds in lard at Liverpool were said to have induced the buying. Trade interests sold on the upturn, but the close was at net gains of 20 to 35 cents.

Cash lard closed at $13.37 loose, and leaf at $13.25, and clear bellies [salt pork] at $18.02 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds:

CHARGE BANKER DOMINATION OF MILWAUKEE LINE

Bondholders Ask I. C. C. to Investigate Trustees.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Charging "banker domination" of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad through H. A. Scandrett, its president, an independent bondholders' protective committee today asked the interstate commerce commission not to confirm his appointment as trustee until it had investigated his qualifications in public hearings.

Also involved in the petition were Walter J. Cummings and George I. Haight as other proposed trustees, although the committee did not challenge the latter nominee. The petition explained the bondholders' group had been unable during hearings in the bankruptcy court "to delve into Mr. Scandrett's close association with the bankers, the banker domination of the road, and the part the bankers played in formulating the present reorganization."

Assail Banker Domination.

The committee contended that "precipitation of the road into bankruptcy within so short a time after the reorganization is unparalleled in railroad reorganization." It added that in the first readjustment many investors had been confronted with the alternative of supplying an additional $70,000,000 or loss of all their savings.

"Through the maneuvering of the banks, part of this money was diverted from the company and applied toward reorganization expenses," the petition continued. "The plan for the second reorganization is being presented by that board and by the same attorney who was counsel for the bankers in the last reorganization. This is a part of a continued effort by these bankers to perpetuate their control regardless of the interests of the investors.

Sees Investors Not Aided.

"If we judge the future by the past the conclusion must be reached that Mr. Scandrett as a trustee will do no more for the investors of the road than he did as president. He made no move to obtain restitution from those who had used the company for their personal profit.

Scandrett, a director and executive committee member of the Association of American Railroads, is president of the Western Railroad association and a director of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company of Chicago. Cummings is chairman of the board of the Continental Illinois National bank and is co-receiver of the Chicago Railways company. Haight is a practicing attorney in Chicago.

STOCK MARKET RECALLS 'BULL' DAYS OF 1929

Fares.

Western railroads made permanent the low passenger fares with which they have experimented for several months, terming the trial a success. Basic rates are 3 cents a mile in first class accommodations, 2 cents in coaches, 1½ cents in coaches for transcontinental trips, and 2 cents in tourist cars. Eastern roads planned to consider lower fares between New York and Chicago and other midwestern points. Sharp differences of opinion exist, Pennsylvania and New York Central holding out for present fares and several other lines advocating reductions.

Burlington.

The Burlington railroad observed the first birthday of its first lightweight streamlined Zephyr which carried more than 74,000 persons in its one year of operation. The company ordered 40,000 tons of steel for relaying tracks and building bridges and cars. Ralph Budd, president of the road, speaking one day in Kansas City, urged consolidation of the nation's 856 railroads into 20 systems, as a solution of the railroad problem.

New Deal.

New Deal policies were subjected to fresh onslaughts on a varied front. On Friday in Chicago C. F. Childs, head of the securities firm bearing his name, declared that at the present rate of governmental spending the federal budget cannot be balanced regardless of the tax rate. Continuance of the excesses may bring about a general capital levy, he declared. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings institution, declared the New Deal theory of restoring economic balance and gaining prosperity through restriction of production was "sheerest nonsense."

Cartels.

The Brookings institution reported results of a survey of European collective industrial monopolies, known as "cartels." The study concluded that price rigidity resulting from such experiments as NRA and AAA brought increased fluctuation in production and employment, rather than stabilization.

Pigs.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was charged with "going astray of the facts," by the American Iron and Steel institute. [See "Washington," review section.] Wallace on Tuesday declared "pig iron reduction control of big steel companies in 1933 was a thousand times as damnable as the pig reduction campaign." The institute answered that not only was there no pig iron reduction control during the year but output actually increased 50 per cent over 1932.

Rebuffs.

At the hands of the courts the administration gained one victory, but suffered several defeats. Its lone gain was made in Louisville, Ky., where the Guffey coal act was upheld. [See "Washington," review section.] In Harrisburg, Va., a federal court held the amended Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act unconstitutional. The Court of Claims in Washington ruled unconstitutional the tax levied by congress on profits from the sale of silver when silver bullion of the country was nationalized.

Advertising.

Newspaper advertising lineage increased 5.9 per cent during October, with automotive copy showing the largest gain—44 per cent.

Cigarets.

Cigaret output in October crossed the 2 billion mark and carried the total for the first 10 months of 1935 to a record level of 12 billion 700 million.

Parish.

Frank P. Parish, Chicago utility operator, was reported to have made peace with the Columbia Gas and Electric company, which he charged wrecked his $60,000,000 Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company. According to reports Missouri-Kansas plans to regain its interest in Panhandle-Eastern Pipe Line company, which Columbia bought from Parish.

FDIC.

Assessments by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation for insurance on bank deposits will be passed on to customers of the First National Bank of Englewood, J. M. [100 Per Cent] Nichols, president, decided. He asserted the protection is unnecessary at his and other sound banks.

Savings.

Compilations of Christmas savings disclosed that 312 millions will soon be distributed to 7,000,000 persons through 5,000 banks.

Cotton.

Cotton exports in October were the largest since January, amounting to 711,664 bales.

Sales.

Department store sales increased 6 per cent last month, although the gain was smaller than "normal."

PROFIT TAKING IN COTTON CAUSES PRICE RECESSION

Profit taking, induced by the recent sharp advance in prices, and a reduction of 10 to 15 points in Liverpool cables resulted in a decline of around 50 cents per bale in cotton yesterday. Some increase in hedging pressure was reported, but it was not heavy. Futures in the leading markets closed at net losses of 5 to 13 points.

Spot cotton closed 5 points lower with New Orleans, 12.25 cents and New York, 12.40 cents per pound. Prices in cents per pound:

New issues of common stock can now be sold, provided stockholders are given a square deal.

Many sound industrial companies with high-interest bonds maturing can profitably effect refunding into bonds of lower coupon or exchange for preferred and common stock. Similarly preferred issues with heavy accumulations can be replaced by new preferred and common stock, clearing up back dividends. We are in a position to assist sound companies in placing new issues of stock or in effecting a readjustment of capital structure on the lines suggested, on an attractive basis. We are not interested in real estate or promotional propositions.

CHICAGO STOCK TRADING NEARS TOTAL FOR 1934

Prices Resume Advance in Week-End Session.

Trading volume on the Chicago Stock exchange this year neared the total for all of 1934 yesterday. Prices moved up fractionally in a 52,000 share turnover during the two hour session.

With six weeks of this year remaining, total volume now stands at 10,143,071 shares, compared with 10,178,000 for all of 1934. Last week's turnover in the 4½ trading days was 372,000 shares, compared with 614,000 the preceding week and 105,000 in the corresponding period of last year. A total of 177 issues was traded last week, with price trends well mixed. Seventy-four issues advanced, 71 declined and 32 were unchanged.

Prices Resume Advance.

In yesterday's session, prices turned upward again as 46 issues moved ahead, 25 were unchanged, and only 22 declined. Wisconsin Bankshares and Northwest Bancorporation were the chief features, both advancing major fractions into new high ground for the year.

Libby extended its flurry of activity into the second day with a 5,000 share volume and another new high, but its advance was held to ⅛. Swift was up a quarter and Armour was steady in light trade.

Marshall Field and Butler Brothers firmed to near their best prices for the year. Zenith was the only radio stock to edge forward. Little interest was shown in the motors, Cord making the best showing.

General Household Eases.

Quaker Oats, Sangamo Electric, and Chicago Yellow Cab made 1935 highs on fractional advances, while Gardner Denver did likewise on a 2½ point jump. Lawbeck preferred soared 12¾ points to 46 in one of its infrequent appearances on the tape.

ASSERTS WEXLER ADMITS FAILURE TO REPORT DEALS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the Grain Futures administration, said today that Simon Wexler, Chicago grain trader, has admitted he failed to file complete returns on his market transactions as required by law.

Duvel asserted Wexler's admission was not a plea of guilty to all charges brought against him for alleged violation of the act. Wexler, he said, has waived hearing before the Grain Futures commission and the case would be disposed of without further investigation.

If the commission finds Wexler guilty it can bar him from trading on all contract markets in the country. Orders barring Arthur W. Cutten and Thomas M. Howell, Chicago speculators, from trading, have been stayed pending review by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

COMMODITY PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Associated Press wholesale price index of 20 basic commodities today declined to 75.73. Previous day, 75.87; week ago, 74.94; month ago, 75.75; year ago, 68.35.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 16.—Bonds absorbed the burden of week-end profit taking and individual adjustments in certain sections and pushed irregularly higher in the listed market today. Total turnover of $8,442,000, par value, was the heaviest for a short Saturday session since Feb. 23 last, when the Supreme court's gold decision brought out a total of $8,480,000.

Issues in the Van Sweringen group moved higher in rather broad trading. Reports that new moves might be made to integrate their eastern roads resulted in a considerable amount of realizing, but prices held well in face of the selling.

Active Rails Higher.

Closing prices of the most active rails included Nickel Plate 6s, up 1¾; Kansas City Southern 5s, up 1¼, and Baltimore and Ohio 4½s, unchanged. Missouri, Kansas and Texas bonds responded to good buying with substantial gains.

Stocks furnished the incentive for industrial and utility obligations. American Rolling Mills 4¼s were outstanding with a gain of 2½ points to 128½. International Paper 5s advanced a point to 88¼, while Republic Steel 4½s moved up an equal amount to 113½.

Federal Bonds Firmer.

United States government issues clung to the narrow rut in which they have moved recently, although the trend was somewhat higher at the close.

Foreign liens were featureless and without any definite trend. Italian bonds lost a little ground.

Income and Investments.

The investor today is feeling the pinch of rising living costs at a time when yields on bonds are falling.

A situation such as this has in the past been an expensive one for the small investor. He usually fails to realize that on the whole the prices of sound investments of comparable grade will run about the same. When the normal rate of interest is at record low points, as it is today, he feels that sound investments will not yield him the return to which he is entitled. He then attempts to solve his problem by investing in bonds of higher interest yield.

That, however, is not a solution of his problem. It is merely the creation of a new problem and establishes him in a new status—that of a speculator and not an investor. He does not stop to think that there is usually a reason for certain bonds selling below the going price of sound investments. The usual reason is that the risk is greater.

Investors' Guide does not necessarily mean to infer that the investor should tie up all his funds in bonds yielding 4 per cent or less. Under present conditions that would mean tying himself to a small rate of return for years to come.

Money rates can fluctuate. This is well illustrated by the fact that the yield from A1 bonds in December, 1928, was estimated at 4.94 per cent; in December, 1931, at 5.80 per cent, and in February, 1935, at 4.12 per cent. It is probably even lower today.

When it is realized that a gain of 1 per cent in yield usually means a loss of ten or fifteen points in market quotations it is apparent that high grade bonds are subject to long term fluctuations.

What Investors' Guide does advise, however, is that if the investor who can no longer "make ends meet" by investing in only the highest grades of bonds decides to invest in speculative bonds, preferred stocks or common stocks, he should consciously realize that he is entering a speculative field. He should know that he is exposing his capital to speculative risks and be prepared to exercise more caution and supervision than are necessary in caring for a portfolio of high grade bonds.

There are high grade stocks, shares of companies that have splendid earnings records, which are priced to yield a comparatively good rate of return with some prospects of appreciation. Before putting his funds into common stock, however, the investor should realize that in any stock there is always a considerable element of risk.

WHEAT MARKETS RESIST SELLING; RALLY FROM DIP

Spreading Trades Result in Irregularity.

North American wheat markets showed stubborn resistance to selling pressure yesterday. While there was an early decline in sympathy with relative weakness abroad, closing trades were generally above the lowest figures. Considerable irregularity occured in the markets as the result of spreading between the various futures.

December wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade was bought against sales of the May option. Part of this trading was attributed to changing over hedges against cash grain into the distant month. December wheat closed unchanged, the May delivery was fractionally lower, and the July option was ⅝ cent higher, compared with Friday. Winnipeg was up fractionally.

Report Eastern Short Covering.

Free buying of wheat futures in Chicago, which was attributed to further short covering for eastern accounts, had some effect on the market. There also was considerable uncertainty over week-end developments, including the expected announcement of the provisions of the United States-Canadian reciprocity trade treaty; the effective date of league of nations sanctions [penalties] going into effect against Italy, and an announcement that Argentina would probably abandon official control of foreign exchange.

An easier undertone developed in the corn and rye futures markets, the former being off fractionally at the close on selling induced by a decline of ½ to 3 cents per bushel in the cash grain relative to the December option.

Close on December Futures.

Closing prices of principal December futures, comparable quotations, were:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Week ago.
Wheat	$ .96⅜	$ .96⅜	$ .98¾
Corn	.60⅛	.60½	.58
Oats	.27⅛	.27¼	.26⅝
Rye	.49	.50⅛	.50½

Expectation of a marked increase in the movement of cash corn to terminal markets between now and the end of the month had the effect of decreasing the demand yesterday.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Raw sugar was unchanged today at 3.40c per lb for spots and 3.25c for overquota or 1936 stocks. No sales were reported, but it was believed that refiners were willing to pay these prices for sugars in suitable position. Futures were quiet with the trade apparently inclined to await fresh developments. Only one lot or 50 tons of December changed hands during the entire session, at 2.44c, an advance of 1 point. Later positions were net unchanged.

Raw sugar prices in cents per pound:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.
December	2.44	2.44	2.44	2.44	2.44

Refined was unchanged at 5.30c per lb for fine granulated, with second hands around at 5.15c to 5.20c, with only a small business reported.

Note—The above raw sugar prices exclude processing tax of ½c per lb. Refined sugar prices include the tax.

HAY MARKET

Hay prices showed little change yesterday. A few cars of good color, clean, marsh hay are wanted. Timothy hay shipments from the country have decreased. While supplies of rye straw are said to be liberal, prices are unchanged. Recepits yesterday were 9 cars of timothy and 2 trucks of rye straw. Prices per ton:

MINNEAPOLIS FLOUR.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Flour prices were 10c higher today. Carload lots of family patents were quoted at $8.30@8.50 a barrel in 98 pound cotton sacks. Shipments were 24,859 brls. Pure brand was quoted at $15.25@15.50, and standard middlings at $15.50 per ton.

HIDE FUTURES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Commission house selling disclosed a lack of aggressive support and hide futures closed 8 to 14 points lower. Sales were 45 lots, or 1,800,000 lbs. Closing bids in cents per pound: December, 11.27c; March, 11.60c; June, 11.97c; September, 12.29c.

RED CROSS LAUNCHES RECORD DRIVE

LUTHERAN MEN IN CHICAGO AREA TO RALLY TODAY

100,000 Laymen Will Be Represented.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

THE REV. A. R. KRETZMANN.

Representatives of 100,000 or more Lutheran laymen of the Missouri synod from northern Illinois will be rally guests of the Rev. Adelbert R. Kretzmann, as pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church, Belmont and Greenview avenues, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The rally, composed of leaders of various parochial and general men's clubs of the city and vicinity, will comprise the Lutheran Laymen's league.

Under the presidency of Martin Daib of St. Luke's congregation the business session will consider all activities and promotional work of the league. The most notable activity of the organization during the last three years has been the operation of a Christian free employment bureau. Reports of C. Sievert, chairman of this bureau, show that hundreds of men and women have been provided with work.

The league also will consider higher educational affairs in its charge. Among these are the support of Luther institute, 120 North Wood street, and Valparaiso [Ind.] university. The Lutheran radio hour each Sunday afternoon is also largely supported by the Lutheran Laymen's league.

Centering around the theme "Recovery and Advance," the missionary convention of the Disciples of Christ, to be hel don Wednesday at the Jackson Boulevard Christian church, will present to the 5,000 members within the Chicago area the total benevolent and educational work of this communion.

This convention is one of 225 being conducted throughout the North American continent and all, for the first time, are under the direction of C. O. Hawley, whose headquarters of the recently organized Unified Promotional agency is at Indianapolis, instead of being managed as heretofore by the United Missionary society.

Anglican bishops of the North and South American continents will meet in Chicago in 1936 for a pan-American conference, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Chicago Lambeth quadrilateral, on the invitation of the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in America, the Rt. Rev. J. de Wolf Perry. This announcement was made by the Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart on his return to Chicago from a meeting of the house of bishops concluded last week at Houston, Tex.

Dr. William Evans, who was persuaded by Dwight L. Moody to relinquish a position on the old New York World and come to Chicago to study at the Bible institute, will speak every day this week at the noonday services held in the Grand Opera house, under the auspices of the Christian business men's committee.

Dr. No Yong Park, born in Manchuria and a graduate of Harvard university, will speak on America's relations with the orient at the third forum lecture of the South Side Hebrew congregation, 74th street and Chappel avenue, next Wednesday evening.

Observing the 400th anniversary of the printing of the first English Bible, Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago will deliver five addresses this week, Monday to Friday, on the principal editions of the scriptures at the W-G-N midday service program.

Dr. Louis L. Mann, rabbi of Sinai congregations, will have for his topic tonight at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall, "American Ideals and Contemporary Idols."

A reunion of fifteen confirmation classes of North Austin English Evangelical Lutheran church, numbering more than 1,300, all of whom were confirmed by the present pastor, the Rev. F. W. Otterbein, will take place at the church tonight when the memorial window to Mrs. T. S. Peterson, for many years an ardent worker among Lutheran young people, will be dedicated at a special service. Music will be by the a cappella choir, the members of which are drawn from these confirmation classes.

West Suburban Christmas Seal Chairmen Named

West suburban chairmen who will aid in the sale of Christmas seals for the benefit of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute were announced last week. They are Mrs. Timothy Harrow of Berwyn, Mrs. Mary Holder of Cicero, Mrs. Joseph Schaefer of Forest Park, Mrs. Betty Radmar of Lyons, Mrs. Frank Hinman of Maywood, Mrs. Malcolm Little of Western Springs, and Mrs. A. A. Sherwood of Brookfield.

They'll Dispense 'Smokes' and Smiles at Forest Park Ball

Stepping right up to serve you with your favorite brand, these cigaret girls in jaunty bellhop costume will cry their wares Friday evening during the annual benefit ball to be held by Associated Charities of Forest Park in the Melody Mills ballroom, North Riverside. From left to right: Miss Virginia Padon, Miss Madge Goeppel, and Miss Dorothy Rogers. Louis E. Prehn is chairman of arrangements and a floor show is being contributed by William Bruns. Young women who will sell flowers during the evening include Miss Dorothy Utes, Miss Matilda Goldstein, and Miss Margaret Widener.

West Side Settlers to Recall Early Days in Crawfordsville

PETER B. RITZMA.

Early settlers of the west side will hold their sixth annual meeting under the auspices of the West Side Historical society at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the Legler branch library, 115 South Pulaski road.

Among the speakers will be Peter B. Ritzma, 3350 Gladys avenue, principal of Farragut High school. His topic will be "Early Boyhood In Crawfordsville," and will deal with recollections of the days when the area about 26th street and Crawford avenue [now Pulaski] was known by that name.

Herbert Merrill, 2314 North Oak Park avenue, retired principal of the Camron school, will talk on "The Development of the Cragin and Mont Clair Districts of the Northwest Side."

Beginning of West Side.

The residential section of 50 years ago bounded by Ashland avenue, Lake street, and Ogden avenue, will be discussed by Walter S. Holden, 534 North East avenue, Oak Park, under the subject, "The Beginnings of the West Side."

Before and after the meeting, groups will gather for reminiscence, and an exhibit of material chosen from the collection of the society will be on view in the north reading rooms. According to Joseph Mills, president, a pictorial history of the community is being woven together piece by piece under the direction of Miss Pearl I. Field, honorary life president, and head librarian of the branch.

Miss Field conceived the idea of such a civic project several years ago and set aside a room on the first floor of the library for a permanent display of west side historical material. A time table of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, dated May 25, 1873, reveals the fact that it took four hours to go from Chicago to Lake Geneva.

Expect 900 to Attend.

Both the time table and card were presented to the West Side Historical society by Miss Mabel Oberhart, 4033 Washington boulevard. They will be on display in the forthcoming exhibit, which will continue until Nov. 30.

According to Miss Martha Seewer, secretary-historian of the organization, who has arranged the exhibit, approximately 900 men and women are expected to attend the annual meeting.

PILSEN DISTRICT GROUP TO OPEN BAZAR ON NOV. 25

A Christmas benefit bazar will be held by the Professional Men's association of the Pilsen district the evenings of Nov. 25, 26, and 27, in the Bohemian-American hall, 1440 West 18th street. Proceeds will provide baskets for the needy of the community.

Joseph W. Nosek, bazar chairman, will be assisted by the entire association membership of 125 lawyers, doctors, dentists, and druggists engaged in business in the 21st ward.

Plans for a dinner-dance to be held Saturday evening, Dec. 7, are now being formulated by the organization. According to Dr. Joseph W. Baudette, member of the committee on arrangements, entertainment will be provided by radio stars. The party will be held in the Ceska Beseda club, 3659 Douglas boulevard.

TEMPLE WOMEN WILL HEAR TALKS ON JANE ADDAMS

"My Personal Recollections of Jane Addams" is the subject Miss Esther Meyer will speak upon before the Sisterhood of the Washington Boulevard temple on Wednesday afternoon in the temple, 23 North Karlov avenue.

A comparison of two biographies of Jane Addams will be made by Mrs. Alfred Hamburger during the morning session. A luncheon will be served at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Ray Cohen and Mrs. Bernard Baer will act as hostesses.

Mrs. Samuel Brody is president of the Sisterhood, and Mrs. A. A. Lieberman is a vice president and membership chairman. Mrs. Elmer Benesch, vice president, is in charge of programs.

25 YEAR LEADER OF SCOUTS FETED IN RIVER FOREST

B. W. Armstrong Guest at Civic Dinner.

B. W. Armstrong of troop 61 was honored for his 25 years of service in Scouting at the recent community banquet and court of honor held by River Forest Boy Scouts at the Roosevelt Memorial school. Congratulations were extended to troop 66 of Grace Lutheran church on its first anniversary.

The gathering of Scouts and their parents was one of the largest of its kind ever held in the suburb, and was the first of a series for the purpose of bringing parents into closer contact with Scout activities and the Scouts closer to the community.

Badges Are Awarded.

Dr. Knox Burno, chairman of the River Forest Safety commission, spoke on safe driving. A talk on "Why Scouting?" was given by the Rev. John Young, an Eagle Scout and for many years a Scout leader.

P. L. Emerson presided over the district court of honor. Civic leaders, scoutmasters, and district committeemen took part in awarding badges. Under the direction of John Crawford, an Indian pageant was presented with all Scouts in River Forest participating.

Village Leaders Attend.

The banquet was prepared under the supervision of Mrs. R. H. Quayle, a Scout mother and wife of the district chairman. Among the special guests were John L. Brink, president of the village; John Mathews, fire chief; Carl W. Soderlin, chief of police, and Ray E. Cheney, superintendent of schools.

G.O.P. Athletic League Will Give Trophies at Dance

The presentation of trophies to winning teams of the softball tournament held last summer will be a feature of the annual dance to be held by the Young Republican Athletic league Friday evening in the main ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Judge Edward B. Casey, general chairman of the dance, is expected to present the cups to teams of the 27th, 11th, 43d, and 17th wards. The league was organized June 1, and is composed of 54 teams from Cook county.

Phi Mu Meeting.

Phi Mu sorority, composed of west suburban university and college alumnae, will meet Wednesday evening in the home of Miss Marguerite Giezentanner, 8 Elizabeth court, Oak Park. Mrs. J. E. Sorensen of Riverside is chairman.

Forest Park to Have Annual Charity Ball Next Friday

MRS. MATHILDE PETERSOHN.

Several thousand west suburbanites are planning to attend one of the outstanding civic and social events of the season in this area Friday evening when the Associated Charities of Forest Park will hold the annual benefit ball at Melody Mill, Desplaines avenue and 26th street, North Riverside.

Mrs. Frank Petersohn, president of the group, which is composed of charitable and civic organizations of Forest Park, said last week that all arrangements for entertainment, music, and carnival booths have been completed.

"Almost all the expenses of the ball are being met by donations," said Mrs. Petersohn, "so that nearly all receipts will be used for the work of the Associated Charities." Facilities of the ballroom are being donated by Michael Brisch, 941 Clinton place, River Forest. Music by a well known radio orchestra and both amateur and professional acts in the floor show are being provided. The show, to be presented in three parts, is being directed by William Bruns. Gottlieb Schwab and George Vogel have charge of refreshments.

Those Who Will Benefit.

"Those who will benefit by the proceeds are unfortunates who are not receiving aid through any federal or state relief agency," Mrs. Petersohn pointed out. "Many of these needy are obtaining no relief assistance either because of the mistaken notion that to receive such aid will hurt their pride, or because they have some small income which, however, does not adequately meet their needs. The Associated Charities of Forest Park provides not only food and clothing for these deserving individuals, and families, but also medical care and shelter."

Mayor Charles R. Hussey of Forest Park was chosen honorary chairman of the ball and Louis E. Prehn was named general chairman. Mr. Prehn is being assisted by Ferdinand Schultz. Members of the committee on entertainment include George Weid, Henry Lebovitz, Marshall Quandt, Andrew Berg, and Henry J. Mohr.

The distribution of tickets is being handled by Mrs. Petersohn, Charles Hussey Jr. and Mr. Prehn. A speakers' committee, delegated to contact various fraternal and social groups is composed of Mayor Hussey, Ernest Witt, Joseph Audy, Mr. Lebovitz, Mr. Berg, H. J. Mohr, William Hafner, John Murray, Frank Walkowiac, Carl Mohr, Roy Mohr, Karl Maier, Charles Koerber, and Albert M. Thompson. Louis Pochert, Harold Hosler, Mr. Weid, Mr. Lebovitz, and Mr. Prehn have charge of concessions.

Groups Aiding Dance.

Forest Park organizations coöperating with the Associated Charities in this event include the following: Lions and Kiwanis clubs, American Legion, Infant Welfare society, North Side Boosters, Forest Park Garden club, American Legion auxiliary, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Harlem Maennerchor, St. Bernadine's church, St. Paul's Lutheran church, Order of Boy Builders, Knorkers club, Forest Park Republican club, Garfield Parent-Teachers association, Forest Park club, American Red Cross, Camp Fire Girls, auxiliary of the Forest Park Woman's club, Order of the Eastern Star, and the Grant-White Parent-Teacher association.

Other officers of the Associated Charities are: Corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. C. Van Dyke; financial secretary, Mrs. W. J. Harden, and treasurer, Mr. Schwab.

DU PAGE SCOUT COUNCIL BEGINS DRIVE FOR FUNDS

The Du Page Area council, Boy Scouts of America, has begun its annual campaign for funds under a general committee made up of Lee E. Daniels, Elmhurst; A. I. Stephens, Glen Ellyn; N. W. Wehrhan, Naperville; J. H. Earle, Elmhurst, and F. G. Cashman, Lombard. In addition to the general committee there will be a committee from each town in the area.

In conjunction with the campaign several of the communities are holding scouting demonstrations. Elmhurst Scouts have a model camp, under the supervision of W. S. Thompson, district commissioner.

Villa Park Scouts are conducting a safety campaign with the coöperation of the Chicago Motor club.

Demonstrations in the nature of community good turns are the project of Wheaton and Glen Ellyn Scouts.

The Lombard program is led by Glenn Westlake, Scoutmaster of Troop 51. Mr. Westlake is developing a Scout band under the direction of Ralph Boyden.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

ALTHOUGH he's been at Drake university for little more than two months, Ridell Kelsey, young son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Kelsey of West Chicago, has already begun to make a name for himself, athletically speaking. Ridell is a member of the freshman track squad and placed third in a two mile race between Drake and Tarkio college recently. He is in training now for further meets.

The Thousand Fivers, that energetic group of "good fellows," will hold their Thanksgiving party Saturday evening in the Midwestern Athletic club, 6 North Hamlin avenue. Harold Enright, John Bannon, and Dr. Louis Postillion are planning an evening of merrymaking.

MISS JANE SMEJKAL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smejkal, 1834 South Austin boulevard, Cicero, has been selected to play the leading male rôle in "Quality Street," sophomore class play to be presented Dec. 7 at Rockford college. This will be Miss Smejkal's first appearance on the college stage, although she has helped in the production of several other dramas.

A group of young friends gathered in the home of Miss Clara G. Getz at 5250 West Nevada street recently to aid her in celebrating her birthday. All came in costume, the most original garb being worn by that popular young man about town, Al Schwilk.

THE Suburban Oil men, champion team of the Triangle Softball league of Oak Park, will hold their annual dance the evening of Nov. 30 in the home of the Cornwall post of the American Legion, Forbes road and 31st street. Among those who will attend are James Jordan, Edward Jordan, Lawrence Myers, Jack Myers, Ralph Younge, Walter F. Thompson, and Harold Hitz.

Another west sider active on the campus is Charles R. Forrester of 3226 Warren boulevard, who recently was elected president of the sophomore class in the Loyola university school of medicine.

YOUNG women of Alpha Epsilon chapter, Psi Delta Sigma sorority, got together for a "Chinatown evening" last Sunday. The tour was made under the direction of Miss Lydia Scharf, 1845 South 58th avenue, Cicero. Miss Sylvia Mudra, 1846 South 61st court, Cicero, is president of the chapter.

A "laity day" program will be presented by the Aux Plaines branch women's auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon in the Oak Park club. Dr. Leo K. Campbell will speak on "The Benefits and Dangers in Dieting." The meeting will be preceded by a luncheon at which presidents of a number of women's clubs will be guests. The program has been arranged by Mrs. William Raim, first vice president. Mrs. H. J. Dooley, president, will preside.

PROPOSED LAND TRADE WOULD AID SCHOOL AND ZOO

A proposed exchange of land between the Riverside-Brookfield High school and the Cook county forest preserve is said to be nearing consummation following several years of negotiations.

Land east of the high school is owned by the forest preserve and is used as a public athletic field, but reserved for the ultimate use of the zoölogical gardens for parking space. The high school owns a tract used as an athletic field north of the school building and adjacent to a parking area reserved for zoo patrons.

President John D. Clancy of the high school board has held many meetings with the forest preserve and the zoo officials. His contention has been that the high school should be given more land than is contained in the school's athletic field in making the exchange.

Cook county commissioners at a recent meeting gave their sanction to the exchange. However, the county highway department last year proposed the rerouting of Forest avenue in front of the high school, and final negotiations in the land exchange depend on agreements with the highway department.

WOMEN FINISH CANVASSING FOR COMMUNITY FUND

Women who have been busy seeking pledges for the community fund of Chicago in outlying neighborhoods during the 1935 campaign, officially ended canvassing this week and will report their totals of cash gifts and subscriptions through their district chairmen when the latter meet for a final checkup Wednesday morning at 10:30 at women's division headquarters, 111 West Washington street.

Through the women's efforts in this year's drive a total of $40,164 has been subscribed to date and this represents the first money they have ever collected for the fund by direct solicitation of individuals, it was said by co-chairmen of the women's division, Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Mrs. James R. Bremner, and Mrs. Charles P. Schwartz.

Mrs. Bernard L. Waindle, 1255 North Mason avenue, and Mrs. David Kennedy, who have headed the west side fund organization, will make the reports for their districts.

NEIGHBORHOODS OF WEST SIDE HEED ROLL CALL

Special Appeal Made to Suburbs.

Through the many west side neighborhood and suburban committees, the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross is in the midst of the annual Roll Call, which started Armistice day and will continue to Thanksgiving, and which is said to be more intensive than at any time since world war days.

"At no time since the first anniversary of the Armistice has the response to the Red Cross been more general and generous," said James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter. With 150 communities within its borders, the chapter is the largest in the country.

In Chicago, the Red Cross because of its participation in the Community fund does not solicit from corporations and their employés at places of business, it is explained. Only about half of its needed revenues, however, are derived from the Community fund, and the balance must be raised through the Roll Call. Consequently, in all suburbs and most of the neighborhoods of Chicago the annual Roll Call is being conducted.

Leaders in Suburbs.

West suburban roll call chairman appointments include:

Mrs. L. J. Novotny, Berkeley; Mrs. Margaret McBride, Bellwood; Mrs. James J. Shepro, Berwyn; Mrs. Paul Maresh, Brookfield; Mrs. Edward J. Wareham, Broadview; Mrs. J. C. Gates, Downers Grove; Dr. Martin F. Heidgen, Elmhurst and Villa Park; Albert Kotlan, Cicero; A. E. Ehrhardt, Forest Park; Mrs. Edith Spears, Glen Ellyn; Mrs. C. L. Dever, Hollywood; Mrs. C. F. McDermott, Hillside; Mrs. Arthur Snelson, Lisle; Mrs. Clifron C. Brinkerhoff, Hinsdale, and Mrs. W. R. Kimball, Lombard.

Dr. Allen R. Morrison, Maywood; Mrs. Joseph Vertuno, Melrose Park; Mrs. Ralph Bentz, Naperville and Eola; Mrs. Margaret Connorton, Warrenville; Miss Hattie Glos, Wayne and Munger; A. L. Utterback, West Chicago; Mrs. E. P. Prouty, Wheaton, and Mrs. Aaron Kadetsky, Winfield.

Representatives of the Red Cross appointed to serve on the boards of west suburban community chest organizations include:

Mrs. F. D. Hoag, La Grange and La Grange Park; Lester B. McAllister, Oak Park; Mrs. Ralph Scarritt, River Forest; E. A. Krueger, Riverside, and J. R. Kneebone, Western Springs.

Aims Are Explained.

The reason for the response already shown by reports is attributed to better realization of the worth and work of the Red Cross.

"The American Red Cross," pointed out a committee chairman, "is an auxiliary arm of the government. Its duties are prescribed by congressional charter. Nothing that it does duplicates anything done by any government unit, emergency or otherwise. It receives no funds from tax or other governmental sources. If it is to function without regard to race, color, or creed and without personal, partisan, or political prejudice, it must be preserved through private contributions and individual support."

"The country, normally, has one disaster every four days in which Red Cross assistance is required," said James T. Nicholson, manager of the Chicago chapter. During the past year the number has been twice as great. It has been fortunate that none of these disasters has occurred in the Chicago area.

Veterans Are Aided.

"Red Cross work in the communities has included, however, relief and service to veterans and their families where the veteran disabled by service, is in need and has not yet obtained governmental benefits. Public health nursing, instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick, first aid and life saving are other activities.

"During the last several weeks intensive community campaigns in accident prevention have been conducted. There were 400,000 home inspections in the suburbs for determining accident hazards, the work being done by older school children as part of their education in Red Cross safety measures."

CICERO ROLL CALL

Under the direction of the Cicero Association of Commerce, Cicero is in the midst of its Red Cross campaign, directed by an executive committee of 200 members.

In a recent proclamation by Joseph G. Cerny, president of the Cicero board of trustees, all citizens who can were urged to join the Red Cross and aid the volunteer workers in making the contribution of Cicero representative of the community's loyalty to and support of the national cause.

"This year, more than ever," said President Cerny, "the Red Cross needs generous public support to enable it to meet record breaking demands for its necessary services in the fields of veteran aid, disaster relief, accident preventions, and health preservation."

Directors Are Named.

The association's division on social service, with Clem Kopstain as chairman, has charge of the drive for

DU PAGE RESERVE OFFICERS WILL HEAR TALK ON GAS

Chemical Expert to Tell About New Poisons.

Following its policy of devoting each meeting to some branch of the military service, the Du Page county chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States a its monthly meeting in Wheaton Wednesday night will hear Lieut. Col. B. A. Brackenbury of the chemical warfare service and Maj. W. T. Stevenson of Rock Island, president of the Illinois department.

MAJ. W. T. STEVENSON.

Col. Brackenbury will discuss recent developments in chemical warfare, including experiments with new gases since the war and the possibility of their use from bombing planes in concentration over areas of military importance. He also will discuss the new types of gas shells being used by the artillery and efforts made to limit the use of gas in future warfare.

Maj. Stevenson, who is making a tour of reserve chapters in the state, has recently returned from a series of regional meetings in southern Illinois.

During the war Maj. Stevenson received a certificate for meritorious service. His ability led the state department to place him in charge of 38 army officers sent to Russia.

On reaching Siberia, Maj. Stevenson was placed in charge of coal mines abandoned by native officials who feared an attack from the bolsheviki. On his way back to America he traveled into Manchuria and thence to Vladivostok.

6 STUDENTS WIN JUNIOR COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIPS

Council Names Leaders on Basis of Grades.

Scholarship awards on the basis of high grades and leadership in campus activities will be made to six young men and women of the People's Junior college, 3500 Douglas boulevard, by the student council, it was announced last week.

MISS BERNICE BRENNER.

They are Miss Bernice Brenner, 3450 Lexington street; Miss Ann Siegal, 1210 Independence boulevard; Leon Gershbein, 1623 South Hamlin avenue; Isadore Lichtman, 1648 South Hamlin avenue; Calvin Levey, 3726 Grenshaw street, and Miss Frances Green, 1039 North Western avenue.

Miss Siegal, three times a scholarship winner, is president of the Music Appreciation club, secretary of the Anti-War club, and assistant director of the play, "A Symphony of Sick Millions," to be presented by the newly organized student Siberian Theater guild.

Mr. Lichtman is feature editor of the College Observer, student publication; director of musical programs for the student body, president of the Literary society, and vice president of the Student council. Miss Brenner is the president of the Co-ed's club and president of the French club.

NEW POSTOFFICE IN MELROSE PARK TO OPEN NOV. 30

A three day fête celebrating the opening of the new $100,000 postoffice building in Melrose Park is being planned by the Melrose Park Chamber of Commerce. The festival will begin Thanksgiving day and will be climaxed with the giving away of 50 live turkeys.

Streets of the village will be decorated and entertainment features are being arranged by Thomas F. McBreen, president of the chamber, and Joseph Arowesty, chairman of committees. Assisting are William Kassin, Postmaster James Larry, Ernest Weissenborn, Louis L. Peters, Michael Laraia, and Sam Rubin.

Announcement is made that the new postoffice will open its doors to the public on Nov. 30.

St. Barnabas Church Will Open Bazar on Tuesday

St. Barnabas Episcopal church will hold its annual bazar Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in the parish hall, 4241 Washington boulevard. Suppers will be served each evening from 5 until 7 o'clock. The Rev. Walter S. Pond is rector.

CHICAGOAN WILL RECITE VOWS OF PRIEST IN INDIA

In far off India at St. Mary's college, a west side young man will come one step closer toward the realization of a childhood dream on Thursday, when he will be ordained a priest together with three of his American classmates.

M. D. MORAN.

He is Marshall D. Moran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Moran. Born in Chicago, May 29, 1906, he obtained his early education in Chicago Heights and was graduated from the St. Mel grammar school. His high school years were passed at St. Ignatius, 1076 Roosevelt road, in the same classrooms where his father studied.

In 1923, Mr. Moran was graduated from St. Ignatius, and after a year at Loyola university, he entered the Jesuit novitiate at Florissant, Mo. There he pronounced his vows on Sept. 8, 1926. In 1929, he volunteered and was accepted as a recruit to the Patna mission in India.

After completing a course in philosophy at the Jesuit home in the southern part of India, he was stationed for two years at the parish school in Bettiah, a post in the northern part of the Patna district. Here, during two years as an instructor, Mr. Moran did much pioneering in the village schools.

The mission of Patna is a territory in the north of India about twice the size of Illinois, with a population of about 27,000,000.

La Grange Woman's Club.

A dessert luncheon and annual card party will be held by the La Grange Woman's club at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Proceeds will go to charity.

DANCE TONIGHT TO RAISE RELIEF FUNDS

Tickets on the debit side . . . checks on the credit side . . . or, is it the other way around? Bookkeeping makes so little difference when the bank shows a big balance and that is the ultimate goal of this sextet, the feminine members of the ticket sales committee for the sixth annual dance to be given this evening and again on Tuesday evening in the Hotel Sherman for the Walgreen Employes' relief fund. In the front row, from left to right, are Miss Marie Whitley, Miss Marion Simmons, Miss Sylvia Carlson, and Miss Helen Crawford. Standing: Miss Margaret Marschall, Miss Hazel Shetney, and Miss Frances Kreuzer.

West Side Civic League to Hear Talk on Pensions

Michael L. Rosina, city prosecutor, will speak on the Old Age Pension law, recently passed at Springfield, Tuesday evening before the West Side Civic league in headquarters at 745 North Cicero avenue. The meeting will be open to the public.

POLICE BRANCH OF ST. JUDE'S TO GIVE CARNIVAL

Women Active in Aiding Coliseum Affair.

Members of the policemen's branch of St. Jude's league, numbering several thousand men, under the Rev. James Tort, spiritual director of the league, and Supervising Captain John P. Stege, president of the branch, have made the final arrangements for a carnival and bazar to be held in the Coliseum annex, 14th street and Wabash avenue. The carnival will open Wednesday and continue through Saturday.

The carnival committee, under its chairman, Sergt. William J. Smith, has arranged an event that will recall the crowded bazars and carnivals of the past.

The members of the women's committee, which will have charge of the evening suppers, are: Mrs. John P. Stege, Mrs. John J. McGinnis, Mrs. Bart J. Moran, Mrs. John P. McCann, Mrs. William A. Bolswick, Mrs. Patrick H. Bonner, Mrs. John A. Egan, Mrs. Thomas F. Lee, Mrs. James Flynn, Mrs. Albert Booth, Mrs. Edmund J. Swain, Mrs. Ray Forrest, Mrs. Cyril Donovan, Mrs. Margaret Myron, Miss Flore Bogiani, Mrs. Patrick Loughran, Mrs. W. A. Dalsurck.

Holmes, Miss Mary O'Kane, Miss June O'Kane, Miss Frances Bauch, Miss Katherine Hatch, Miss Irene Boylan, Mrs. W. J. Smith, Mrs. E. J. Monahan, Miss Dorothy Booth, Miss Helen Booth, and Mrs. Fannie Cavanaugh.

HEIRLOOM SHOW OF WEST END CLUB WILL BE FRIDAY

Women to Hear Lecture on Old Coverlets.

BY PHYLLIS HAMMOND.

Hand woven coverlets and other household textiles, precious in their antiquity, will relate tales of both the old world and the new to members and guests of the West End Woman's club at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

MRS. WILLIAM F. CONLON.

The speaker, Mrs. Frederick T. Avery of Robin hill, Palos Park, has selected as her topic "Grandmother's Coverlet." Mrs. Avery has long been historian of the Colonial Coverlet guild. She signed as secretary-treasurer the petition for the original charter in 1924.

Among the rare old treasures to be exhibited by members will be a coverlet belonging to Miss Augusta La Kamp, which was made by a member of the New England Wadsworth family. Mrs. Walter J. Scott, president, will display a linen sheet, spun and woven in the home of her grandfather, David Hume, about 1830, in Dunfermline, Scotland, the birthplace of Andrew Carnegie.

Incidentally, Mrs. Scott's great-uncle, Thomas Watson, foreman in a mill at Kilmarnock, Scotland, wove the damask linens for Edward, prince of Wales, later Edward VII., who was married in 1863. While the pattern was set up Mr. Watson had a half dozen towels made for each of his daughters and nieces. Mrs. Scott will exhibit one of these sets also.

Mrs. William F. Conlon, art, music, and education chairman of the West End club, will have two spinning wheels on display. The first, the Otis family wheel, was presented to Mrs. Conlon by Mrs. John E. Jenkins and was ordered by Mrs. Jenkins' mother, Mrs. Joseph E. Otis, from Vermont after the Chicago fire. The second is a Chippendale wheel of mahogany and pewter, dated about 1780, from Hastings hall, Dumfriesshire, Scotland.

The entire program has been arranged by Mrs. Conlon. Mrs. Herman D. Stotz, social chairman, will preside at a tea to follow.

Coeducational Club.

The study class of the West Side Coëducational club will meet at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Legler branch library to hear Miss Anna Grace Sawyer review a new work of fiction. Mrs. George J. Rehm will read Marc Connelly's play "Green Pastures," in which Mrs. R. J. Hamelin, Mrs. C. W. Briggs, Mrs. John W. Clark, and Miss Anna Daly will take the leading rôles. A board meeting will precede the entertainment.

Austin Woman's Club.

Mari Floto, stylist and fashion authority, will address the Austin Woman's club on "Personality and Dress" at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. A vocal solo will be given by James Burdette, baritone, winner of the contest sponsored last year by the Chicago Association of Commerce Glee club.

At 11 o'clock tomorrow morning Mrs. I. Leslie Winter, civil service chairman, will present Mrs. E. E. Byerrum, state civil service chairman, who speaks on "The Victims of the Spoils." Elsa Belle Goss, industrial secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will speak on "The Y. W. C. A.—What, Where, Who Is It?" She will be introduced by Mrs. Jesse C. Rich, club chairman of Y. W. C. A. work.

Tuesday Club.

The Tuesday club will hold its annual "bundle day" at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. John Van Wakeman, 135 North Waller avenue. Mrs. W. J. Scott has arranged a program. Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. R. W. Owen and Mrs. Wesley Kirk.

ST. MARY'S ALUMNAE WILL PLAN PARTY AT BREAKFAST TODAY

Graduates of St. Mary's high school will hold their annual homecoming breakfast this morning in the school at 1031 Cypress street. Following a business meeting plans will be made for a reunion and card party to be held Thursday evening in the Garfield park refectory.

MISS HELEN LAWLER.

Miss Helen Lawler of Austin is chairman of the party. Members of her committee are Miss Abigail Cashman, Miss Irene Lavin; Miss Katherine McMahon, Miss Marion Clifford, Miss Dorothy Bruder, Miss Marie McDermott, and Miss Dorothy Reynolds.

Proceeds of the alumnae party will be given to the Sisters of Charity, who conduct the west side school.

CRANE EVENING HIGH ALUMNI TO DANCE SATURDAY

The Alumni association of Crane Evening High school will hold its second annual dance at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening in the Midwestern Athletic club, Madison street and Hamlin avenue. The dance will be preceded by a reception.

W. R. Kane is chairman of the dance committee, which consists of Miss Helen Gronkiewicz, Miss Rose Hroch, and Irwin Levy. Miss Bernice Gronkiewicz is in charge of publicity.

PRESS MEETING FOR CLUB WOMEN OPENS THURSDAY

Every Chicago neighborhood and all of the city's suburbs will be represented in the audiences that will gather Thursday and Friday afternoons for the press conferences THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is sponsoring in the auditorium of the new W-G-N radio studio in Tribune square. Each meeting will begin promptly at 2 o'clock, so guests are asked to be in their seats not later than 1:50 o'clock.

Two weeks ago the first conference was announced for Friday afternoon. The response was so heavy and enthusiastic that THE TRIBUNE last week scheduled a second session for Thursday. At each meeting the program will give the mechanics behind news presentation, and outline simple rules for the guidance of publicity chairmen of women's organizations.

Kinsley to Be Speaker.

Philip Kinsley, veteran TRIBUNE reporter who has traveled the world over on big news assignments, will be the principal speaker each afternoon. Mr. Kinsley will discuss "The Education of a Reporter."

The programs will be introduced by a motion picture that will portray the making of a great metropolitan newspaper from the timberlands on the north shore of the gulf of St. Lawrence to the State and Madison street news stand. The picture will take the audience into THE TRIBUNE news room and show the news gathering staf at work.

As soon as it is finished, a number of these writers will come to the conference platform. These presentations will include Miss Irene Steyskal, Miss Phyllis Hammond, Miss Bernice Cranston, and Miss Mildred Wilds, Metropolitan staf reporters who cover women's activities.

Edith Mason on Publicity.

Another headline speaker on Thursday will be Edith Mason of operatic fame, who is coming to the conference to give an evaluation of newspaper publicity from the standpoint of one who has been in the news for many years. Miss Mason is in Chicago with the Chicago City Opera company during its six weeks' engagement in the Civic Opera house. The same topic will be discussed on Friday afternoon by John Charles Thomas, another celebrity of operatic fame who also is with the City Opera company.

In the entertainment program Jean Tennyson, opera star, will sing a group of numbers, and some of the most brilliant artists on the W-G-N staf will be presented.

To answer the many questions officials of women's organizations ask daily concerning publicity, a brochure is being prepared and will be distributed at the conferences.

With the scheduling of the second meeting, there are a few seats still available. Applications for these should be made by letter through the conference headquarters, room 1418, Tribune Tower or by telephone through Superior 0100, local 748.

What Do You Know About

There are diamonds and diamonds . . . some worth a great deal of money and some worth little. To know the difference between these rare gems . . . to be able to pick the good from the bad, is a study of a lifetime. Unless you know sizes, weights, and color and all the intricacies of the diamond business that make it easy to fool the unsuspecting, you must rely on the man who sells you one of these rare gems. The members of the West Side Jewelers Association are diamond experts—but more important to you, they are honest and reliable—men who are your neighbors, men whom you can trust. If you are planning to buy a diamond anywhere, ask for their counsel—you can depend on their advice, depend on their judgment—thus assuring you of a worthwhile investment.

Do your Christmas shopping at one of these local jewelers—you'll find their selection is wide, and their prices right.

Chicago High R.O.T.C. School News

NEW R.O.T.C. UNIT AT ST. MEL HIGH HAS 6 VETERANS

12 Companies Organized Among Students.

Organization of the reserve officers training corps unit of 600 cadets at St. Mel High school, which established military training this fall as a compulsory study for all students except seniors, is nearing completion under the leadership of Sergt. Edmund McCann, U. S. A. Distribution of uniforms is expected to be completed this week.

When the Christian Brothers of St. Mel introduced military training for their students this semester, they discovered that of the entire enrollment only six had had previous training. Sergt. McCann was transferred from the Chicago High school staf to organize this unit.

Seniors Aid Staf.

In a period of a month the school authorities have seen the corps formed into an organization composed of 12 companies or a regiment of three battalions. The first battalion includes companies A, B, C, D; the second, E, F, G, H; the third, I, K, L, M.

The military staf, aided by school instructors, is training the corps in basic military subjects and special classes are held every afternoon for picked cadets who have shown special ability and interest. This is being done to determine which cadets shall be commissioned officers to lead the regiment.

Adopt Regular Belt.

The war department has added three assistant instructors to the military staf, including Sergt. Stewart Hawkins, Staf Sergt. George L. Chamberlain, and Pvt. Richard T. Dunagan. Sergt. Chamberlain has charge of supplies and uniforms, while the other two sergeants aid in instruction.

The unit has adopted the regular army garrison lether belt to be worn by the cadets instead of the usual white web belt. An American flag has been added to the equipment of the unit displayed every day in the drill hall. As the companies arrive and take up the formation, a salute and a pledge of allegiance is given.

MARMION SCHOOL AT AURORA ADDS R. O. T. C. TRAINING

The blare of the bugle, the roll of drums and commands of "squads right" and "forward march" will pervade the school grounds of Marmion, Fox valley preparatory school for boys in Aurora, now that a unit of the R. O. T. C. has been established.

In an effort to create an atmosphere for discipline and the moulding of character, military training was added to the curriculum of the Catholic school. The course will serve as a background for instilling respect for authority, law, and order, according to Maj. Alfred Goldman, U. S. A., and Private Harold Horton, U. S. A., in command of the unit.

We Will Aid Junior Club Will Have Party Sunday

A membership card party will be held by the We Will Aid Juniors at 2:30 o'clock next Sunday afternoon in Henrici's restaurant, 71 West Randolph street. Newly elected officers of this west side group are president, Miss Jeanette Kravitz; secretary, Miss Norma Weitzman, and treasurer, Miss Lillian Bellus.

STAF AT ST. MEL'S

M'KINLEY HIGH MILITARY COLOR GUARD IS NAMED

Appointments to the color guard staf at McKinley High school, announced by Private S. V. Ojala, U. S. A., are Cadet First Lieutenant Harry Lambeth and Cadets Robert Robbins, Nunzio Sanfilippo, and Rudolph Smith.

Every morning this group of R. O. T. C. members raises the school flag. Every evening a ceremony is held during the lowering of the flag. The color guard also attends to raising and lowering assembly flags.

Members of the unit have distinguished themselves in other activities of the high school in the past. Cadet Smith won a loving cup awarded in the cleanup campaign last semester.

Offices held at present by members of the corps and the names of these officers are: Junior fire marshal of the McKinley fire squad and head cashier of the lunchroom, Capt. Alfred Morganti; deputy of the fire squad and treasurer of the student government association, First Lieutenant Lambeth. First Sergeant Evangelist Di Vito is lieutenant of the fire squad and corporal of the hall guards on duty during the fifth period.

MARSHALL HIGH CADETS COMPETE FOR RIFLE TEAM

Members of the Marshall High school R. O. T. C. have begun firing f positions on the rifle team to represent the school in competition this year. Firing hundreds of rounds of ammunition before the most accurate marksmen can be determined, all cadets have an equal chance for team places, according to Staf Sergeant G. L. Searle, U. S. A., instructor.

The six students with the highest scores will compose the first team. Other high scorers will be kept in reserve.

Officers of the unit have been honored in other school activities as well. Maj. Louis Shapero is president of the senior class; Lieut. Leonard Brodsky is editor in chief of the Marshall News and handles publicity for the cadet corps; Lieut. Walter Estes is chief junior fire marshal, and Capt. Abe Bercovitz is on the senior committee of the graduating class.

HARRISON TECH ADDS TO R. O. T. C. ROLL IN DRIVE

A recruiting campaign to build up the R. O. T. C. of the Harrison Technical High school into one of the largest units on the west side has raised the enrollment to 190, according to Sergt. G. H. Bastnagel, U. S. A., military instructor, serving his first year as head of the unit.

"For several years, the unit has always been one of the smallest in Chicago, but it has been developing in size as well as in efficiency since September," said Sergt. Bastnagel, "and now it is developing into one of the best parading and drilling units in the area."

Of the enrollment, 80 cadets are members of the band. Cadet Maj. Anton Sekyra commands the band while Cadet Maj. George Becwar has command of the Harrison cadet corps.

AUSTIN CADETS FIRE FOR PLACES ON RIFLE SQUAD

School Letters Are Asked for Best Marksmen.

Cadets of the Austin High school R. O. T. C. are firing hundreds of rounds of ammunition while competing for positions on the small bore rifle team to represent their corps. Six members of last year's squad have been selected to form the nucleus of the new team.

Prepare for Matches.

As soon as members of the first team have been chosen they will enter intensive training in which thousands of rounds of ammunition will be fired in preparation for the coming season. The squad will compete in the 1935 interscholastic match to be held after Dec. 9, and the Sixth corps area championship matches to follow soon after.

Sergt. Nance is handling the team for the first time this year. In trying to improve the standing of the Austin corps in rifle competition, Sergt. Nance said all appointments to the team would remain unless one of the substitutes began to show better form, in which case new selections would be made.

Seek New Equipment.

The instructor also has requisitioned new equipment, including new portable target carriers. The team is supplied by the government with five model 1922, 22 caliber rifles and smokeless ammunition for these guns.

A request for official recognition of members of the first team by the athletic board in awarding major letters to the team also has been made. Sergt. Nance believes that this would give the marksmen the recognition they deserve for the time they devote to training and the skill required.

SUBURBAN HIGH P.-T. A. TO HEAR COLLEGE LEADER

Minnesota Educator Will Speak on Tuesday.

Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean of the University of Minnesota will address members of the Oak Park and River Forest Township High School Parent-Teacher association on "Modern Trends in Education" Tuesday evening during an open meeting in the school auditorium.

DR. MALCOLM S. MacLEAN.

A graduate of Hamilton college, of the Sorbonne, and of the University of Michigan, Dr. Dean also has taken graduate work at the University of Minnesota and Northwestern university. At present he is director of the general college at Minnesota. For four years he taught English at Northwestern and Minnesota, and was assistant director of the University of Wisconsin's center at Milwaukee for two and one-half years.

The program Tuesday evening, to include selections by the high school orchestra under the direction of Anton Embs, has been arranged by the following committee: M. R. McDaniel, school superintendent; Percy W. Stephens, P. T.-A. president; F. W. Swett, vice president; Mrs. W. J. Major, program chairman; Mrs. Harold Holt, social chairman, and S. O. Houser, publicity chairman.

The new trend in motion pictures will be discussed by Mrs. Francis J. Waindle, second vice president of the Better Films Council of Chicagoland, during a meeting of the Siena Mothers' club and auxiliary to be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the school, 5600 Washington boulevard.

A benefit card party will be held by the Junior Student Mothers' group the evening of Dec. 6, it was announced last week.

The Mothers' auxiliary of St. Mel High school will hold a card party at 8 o'clock Friday evening in the school gymnasium, Kildare avenue and Madison street. During the evening there will be a style show.

Mrs. Edwin P. Snow, district chairman of education, will speak on her work before the Harrison Parent-Teacher association at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Members of the school orchestra will play and refreshments will be served.

The Mothers' club of Providence High school will hold an open meeting at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There will be a program of entertainment and refreshments.

The annual card party of the senior group of the St. Ignatius Mothers' club will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the school cafeteria, 1076 West Roosevelt road. Mrs. John Sheetz has planned the event. Mrs. M. A. Dwyer is president of the club.

Sorority Chairman

Miss Mary McKeon, 5409 Cortez street, is chairman of the card party to be held by Lambda chapter of Sigma Tau Gamma sorority at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Graemere hotel. Miss Cecile Butler, Miss Mary Francis Long, and Miss Mary Lyon are members of her committeee.

BOWES LEADING CANTOR 2 TO 1 AS RADIO FAVORITE

Leading Surveys Show Comedian Slipping.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

If you hear less talk about Eddie Cantor this season it may be because Maj. Bowes is on the air at the same hour. A little over a year ago Cantor's present sponsor lured him away from the Bowes coffee maker and spotted him on the competing network at the same hour that he had held for years on NBC. Last season the coffee maker presented a series of opera in English at 7 o'clock, giving Cantor little opposition. But this season things are different.

Eddie is bucking Maj. Bowes—and not so successfully. According to the leading listener surveys, Bowes is attracting about twice as many folks on Sunday evenings as Cantor. The comparative scores for one survey are, respectively, 29.7 and 16.4, and for the second, 31 and 14.5.

Naturally, these surveys are not infallible, but they are probably rather reliable barometers. One survey makes telephone calls while the program is in progress, the other on the morning following the broadcasts.

Cantor May Be Slipping.

The results bear testimony to the continued popularity of Maj. Bowes' youngsters. One report sets forth that the Bowes hour draws the attention of 62 per cent of the listeners who are tuned in at that particular hour.

Of course, it may be that Cantor is slipping a bit, anyway, and that he would not be so popular as he was two years ago if he had the field to himself. Radio changes, but not the Cantor formula for radio. It is his theory that an old joke is given new life if he uses it. There is a report that early next year Cantor is to be moved to a spot where the competition is not quite so hot. Then he may put his ideas concerning ancient wheezes to a further test.

Alexander Wollcott—He puts ammonia in the cereal.

Walter O'Keefe—A Notre Dame water boy.

Kassel's Tune Catches On.

Two days ago Art Kassel's newest tune "I'd Like to Bounce Around with You" was introduced by the Mills Brothers on the Campus Revue over NBC. Veloz and Yolanda, the dancers, heard it and called for a copy. It happened to be just what they were waiting for for revamping their dance, the "Veyo." The younger generation has been trying the "Veyo," but it is set to 5-4 time, which ballroom orchestras do not ordinarily play. Set to Kassel's dance time they expect "The Bounce" to click.

Two eastern orchestra leaders, and one west coast popular maestro, wired for copies. A Chicago orchestra leader says he will beat them all to the punch. He started making his own orchestrations after hearing the tune in rehersal. And the number isn't even published yet.

TWO PROGRAMS FOR AUDIENCES AT W-G-N TODAY

Radio Playhouse to Be Presented at 7:30 P. M.

Popular tunes, concert music, and dramatic sketches will be paraded on the seven programs to be presented for the public in Studio 1 and broadcast over W-G-N this week.

Two programs will be presented tonight — the Evensong broadcast offering the Enshe Emet Synagogue singers under the direction of Choirmaster Mudelman and with Rabbi Goldman, and at 7:30 p. m. Harold Stokes, the W-G-N Dance orchestra, and a cast of W-G-N's dramatic stars will offer the "Radio Playhouse." Anita Boyer, songstress, will sing.

"The Northerners" will be heard at 9:30 tomorrow evening, with Miss Beth Peaslee, contralto, as soloist. Miss Peaslee will be heard in "It Is Better to Laugh than Be Sighing" from "Lucrezia Borgia" by Donizetti, and "None But a Lonely Heart" by Tschaikowsky.

Tuesday evening at 8:30 Henry Weber and the W-G-N Concert orchestra will present a program with Franz Imhof, tenor, Hilda Ohlin, a soprano of the City Opera company, and Leon Sametini, concert meister of the W-G-N orchestra, as the instrumental soloist.

The W-G-N Mardi-Gras with Harold Stokes and the W-G-N Dance orchestra and a parade of popular vocal talent will be heard at 9:30 Wednesday. Included in the list of artists will be Berenice Taylor, soprano, Barbara Parks, torch singer; George Wald, the Doring Sisters, the Grenadiers quartet, and Esther Tarler, mimic.

William Martin, young American tenor who made his debut last Monday with the City Opera company after several years with Opera Comique of Paris, will be guest soloist with Ruth Miller, soprano, of the opera company, at 9:30 Thursday evening. While in Paris Mr. Martin sang leads with Grace Moore. Edward Vito, harpist, will be instrumental soloist.

"Behind the Camera Lines," the new dramatic-musical production starring Charles Hughes and June Meredith, will occupy Studio 1 on Friday evening, starting at 9:30 p. m. Another thrilling drama will be presented.

HOCKY AIRCASTS START TONIGHT OVER W-G-N, MBS

W-G-N will present the first of the season's hocky broadcasts tonight between 9:45 and 10:30 o'clock. The broadcast will also be carried by the Mutual Broadcasting System, and Bob Elson, veteran W-G-N sports commentator and announcer will give the play by play description.

During the season W-G-N will broadcast exclusively for the third year the final period of all the Sunday home games of the Chicago Blackhawks. Tonight's presentation will feature the play of the Blackhawks and the New York Rangers.

The complete Blackhawk schedule follows:

Nov. 17—New York Rangers.
Nov. 24—Montreal Maroons.
Dec. 1—Montreal Canadiens.
Dec. 8—Boston Bruins.
Dec. 22—New York Americans.
Dec. 29—New York Rangers.
Jan. 5—Montreal Maroons.
Jan. 12—Montreal Canadiens.
Jan. 19—Boston Bruins.
Jan. 26—New York Rangers.
Feb. 2—Toronto Maple Leafs.
Sun., Feb. 9—New York Americans.
Sunday, Feb. 16—Boston Bruins.
Sunday, Feb. 23—Toronto Maple Leafs.
Sunday, March 1—New York Rangers.
Sunday, March 8—Montreal Canadiens.

W-G-N may also broadcast the game between the Blackhawks and the Montreal Canadiens on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 1, New Year's day.

STARLETS

Anita Boyer, new songstress with Harold Stokes and the W-G-N Dance orchestra. She will be heard at 7:30 o'clock tonight in "Radio Playhouse."

Patricia Dunlap, who plays leads in W-G-N's "Bachelor's Children," CBS' "Og, Son of Fire," and the W-G-N-CBS "Story of Helen Trent."

Kay St. Germaine, who carols with Anson Weeks and his orchestra, who have just begun an engagement over W-G-N from the Aragon.

'PAGLIACCI' TO BE AIRED TODAY BY MUSIC HALL

A condensed version of Leoncavallo's opera, "Pagliacci," will be broadcast from Radio City music hall at noon today over WENR and an NBC network. Jan Peerce will sing the leading rôle of "Canio," and Robert Weede, baritone, and Viola Philo, soprano, will sing other prominent rôles.

SPALDING TO BE SOLOIST TODAY ON 'MAGIC KEY'

Melchior, Bampton Also on Air Today.

Albert Spalding, famous violinist; Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, and the Victor Light Opera company will head a cast of distinguished artists to be heard on the Magic Key program at 1:00 p. m. today over WENR-NBC.

Rose Bampton, young contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the guest soloist on the concert over WMAQ-NBC from 9:00 to 10:00 tonight. Erno Rapee will conduct the symphony orchestra.

Miss Bampton will be heard in arias from Gluck's "Orpheus and Euridice" and Thomas' "Mignon" during the first part of the program. Walter Kramer's "The Last Hour," "Homing," by Del Riego, and Molloy's "Kerry Dance" comprise a group to be sung during the second half.

Felix Weingartner's orchestral arrangement of Von Weber's familiar "Invitation to the Dance" heads the list of selections to be played by the symphony orchestra.

Cyrena Van Gordon, contralto, will be the soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour over WBBM-CBS at 8 o'clock tonight. Victor Kolar will conduct the orchestra. Miss Gordon will sing "Cavatina," from "The Queen of Sheba," "Murmuring Breezes," "Sweet Song of Long Ago," "Ma Li'l Bateau," "Love Was With Me Yesterday," and "Sweetest Story Ever Told."

ARTHUR S. HENNING TO RESUME HIS SUNDAY AIR SERIES TONIGHT

Arthur Sears Henning, chief of THE TRIBUNE'S Washington bureau, will resume his Sunday evening discussions of the political situation at 9:30 tonight over W-G-N. These talks have been a weekly feature of W-G-N during the fall and winter months for several years from Washington.

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Mr. Henning will speak on "Political Feeling and the New Deal" tonight, describing reactions of the people he interviewed during his recent swing "around the circle." During his trip Mr. Henning passed through Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Idaho, Wyoming, the Pacific coast states, Kansas, and Missouri.

Mr. Henning's talk tonight will be broadcast from No. 10 studio in W-G-N's new building, a studio built especially for the use of outstanding speakers. Mr. Henning will be the first person to broadcast from this studio.

Solem on Sports Review.

Ossie Solem, Iowa football coach, will be interviewed by Bob Elson on his sports review on W-G-N at 6 p. m. next Friday.

BOB BECKER TO DISCUSS WINTER COAT FOR DOG

Does a dog need an "overcoat" when winter comes? Bob Becker will discuss this problem in his broadcast over W-G-N at 6:30 today. Another problem to be discussed is that concerning the feeding of a dog during winter.

Youths Born at Start of World War Enter German Military Service—Normandie Awarded Speed Trophy

[Acme Photo.]

TRAIN'S BATHTUB—Device of revolving brushes and jets of water installed by the Reading railroad to wash sides of trains. The pillar arrangement through which the train passes has brushes on either side of track.

WAR BABIES NOW SOLDIERS—Born in 1914 at the outbreak of the world war, these German youths are now 21 years old and members of the first class of conscripts called to the colors for one year of compulsory service under the new reich military law decreed this year by Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

BUTTERFLY HUNTER AT 75—Walter Dannatt, 73 years old, of London, with a few of 18,000 specimens of his butterfly collection. Dannatt recently returned from an expedition along the banks of the Amazon river, where he captured 500 additional butterflies to add to his collection.

[Acme Photo.]

INCHES FROM DISASTER—Scene of accident in which bridge across a road near Dresden, Germany, collapsed as a train was passing over. The locomotive hung suspended over the road, but none was killed.

NORMANDIE WINS ATLANTIC CROSSING TROPHY—The Blue Riband trophy presented by H. K. Hales, British member of parliament, to the liner holding the record for the best time across the Atlantic. It is shown on exhibit in the French line London office.

DOUBLE—H. J. Elcombe, British foreign office worker, who resembles Premier Laval of France.

IN COURT—Helene Costello, actress, in Los Angeles when she sought to recover art of late husband, Lowell Sherman.

WITH OXYGEN
END OILY SKIN

AT LAST A FRESH CLEAN SKIN!
Even the very first application of Dioxogen Cream makes the skin clearer and fairer...pores less open. Continued use helps to keep the complexion free from Blackheads / Enlarged pores
Whiteheads / Sallowness
Discolorations / Rough skin
Dioxogen Cream helps to NORMALIZE
Too-oily skin or Too-dry skin

OXYGEN is one of the most wonderful cleansing and purifying agents in the world.

When oxygen is applied to the skin, it seeks out the places where dirt and grease accumulate. It enters the pore openings and helps to get rid of the oily glandular secretions that settle there.

You have no idea what a lot of dust, face powder, and other matter is collected in the pores by these greasy deposits. They are the beginning of blackheads, coarse skin and a dull, lifeless complexion. Dioxogen Cream quickly helps to rid the pores of all these trouble-making substances.

Millions of jars of Dioxogen Cream have already been purchased. Users rave about it. Good Housekeeping's Seal of Approval on every jar shows that Dioxogen Cream is safe and beneficial to every type of skin.

Apply Dioxogen Cream tonight at bedtime, and again tomorrow morning. All during the night, and beneath your make-up throughout the day, this remarkable cream is beautifying your skin with OXYGEN. It is the same live oxygen that brings color to the rose . . . the same oxygen that purifies your blood. Don't wait. Get a jar at any dep't store or druggist.

DIOXOGEN CREAM

SPECIAL OFFER: Generous trial jar sent for 10c in coin or stamps. Address "Dept. 102, Dioxogen Cream, 59 Fourth Ave., New York, N.Y." Patented

MEN'S FAVORITE *CAKE

*"Harvest Moon Spice Cake"
This delicious, three-layer spice cake is easy to make. It has rich, orange frosting on top and between each layer. And the melted chocolate that's poured over all makes it a rare autumn treat.

This Delicious Spread-for-bread Used as Shortening Insures Perfect Results Every Time

Hundreds of housewives have asked us, "Why does GOOD LUCK used as a shortening, make better cakes?"

Here are facts that show how GOOD LUCK, used with fresh, first-quality eggs, flour, etc., doubles your chances to have a perfect cake every time you bake.

WHAT "DATED-FOR-FRESHNESS" DOES
You know, of course, fresh shortening will always cream properly. But with age, shortening becomes stale and rancid if not properly stored. And ordinary shortenings may be stale when you buy them. But you know Vegetable GOOD LUCK always comes to you fresh—actually dated for freshness—so that none of its rich flavor and superior creaming qualities is lost.

ACCEPT THIS OFFER
Here's a rare opportunity to get these lovely, individual blue and white salt and pepper shakers . . . The iridescent pearl finish is brand new . . . Distinctive . . . And they go with any table service.

To get them, just write your name and address on the coupon below and send it to us, along with the dated-for-freshness end of a GOOD LUCK carton and 10c to cover handling costs. If you are not delighted with these shakers, return them to us and the 10c handling charge will be refunded.

THE GUMPS
"THE WORLD'S GREATEST ADVENTURE"— THAT WAS WHAT UNCLE BIM CALLED CHESTER'S POLE TO POLE FLIGHT AROUND THE GLOBE, WHEN THE LITTLE PARTY FIRST SET OUT— LITTLE DID HE REALIZE HOWEVER, WHAT STRANGE AND TERRIBLE EVENTS AWAITED CHESTER IN HIS QUEST FOR THE $50,000 PRIZE AND THE GLORY THAT GOES WITH IT—
ALLAY OOP!
SIDNEY SMITH
NOW ALONG THE BLEAK, FROZEN SHORES OF KANE BASIN THE ADVENTURERS BRAVELY CARRY ON, IN SPITE OF FIERCE COLD, A BARE DIET OF SEAL-MEAT, THE ARCTIC MADNESS OF THE NAVIGATOR, AND THE DESERTION OF THE MECHANIC, RUSTY—
HOW ARE YOU FEELING LIEUTENANT? ANY BETTER NOW?
STILL A LITTLE WEAK, CAPTAIN— BUT I'LL BE ALL RIGHT— MY MIND IS CLEAR AGAIN—
GEE, JESS— I WONDER WHAT MY MOTHER AND DADDY WOULD SAY IF THEY COULD SEE ME NOW— EATING ONLY ONE MEAL A DAY— SLEEPING ON THE COLD GROUND WITH ONLY A CANVAS COVER— AND NO BATH FOR WEEKS—
AH— DON'T MIND ABOUT DE BATHS AND DE SLEEPIN'— BUT IF AH DON'T GET SOME VITTLES PRETTY SOON AH'S GONNA COLLAPIDATE!
I'LL BET A LOT OF KIDS THINK THIS IS GREAT BEING A FLYER AND AN EXPLORER— BUT I'LL BET NOT VERY MANY OF 'EM WOULD GIVE UP NICE SOFT BEDS AND MEAT AND VEGETABLES TO TRADE PLACES WITH ME.—
SHUX— MISSED AGAIN—
BOY— WHAT AH WOULDN'T GIVE JES' TO BE LYIN' IN DE SUNNY COTTON FIELDS WITH A OLE BANJO UNDER MY ARM— AND A CHICKEN STEWIN' ON DE STOVE—
IF RUSTY GETS AWAY WITH OUR PLANE— I'LL BET WE'LL NEVER GET BACK—
COME ON, MEN! THE LIEUTENANT IS STRONG ENOUGH TO MOVE AGAIN— WE'LL LET HIM RIDE THE SLEDGE— WE'VE GOT TO PUSH ON AFTER RUSTY BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE—CHESTER! JESS! HURRY UP! WE'RE BREAKING CAMP!
WE'VE GOT TO GET THE SLEDGE PACKED AS FAST AS WE CAN, BOYS— IT LOOKS LIKE THERE'S DIRTY WEATHER COMING UP, SO WE'VE GOT TO TRAVEL FAST—CAN'T WE EVEN EAT OUR SEAL-MEAT FIRST?
NO TIME FOR THAT NOW— REMEMBER TO LOAD THAT SLEDGE ALL UP AT ONE END, SO THERE'LL BE ROOM FOR THE LIEUTENANT—BOY— IT SURE IS BEGINNING TO BLOW—LOOK, WHAT'S COMING!
A BLIZZARD, MEN, AND A BAD ONE— IT'S NO USE— WE CAN'T GO ON IN THIS—
DAT WIND MUST BE BLOWIN' 90 MILES AN HOUR—
WE'RE IN FOR IT NOW— PILE EVERYTHING AROUND THE TENT— AND DIG IN— THIS MAY LAST FOR DAYS—
I CAN'T SEE ANY THING— WHERE ARE YOU, CAPTAIN DUKETTE?
MEANWHILE— DOWN THE COAST, WHERE THE STORM HAS NOT YET BROKEN, RUSTY GLOATINGLY SURVEYS THE WORK DONE ON THE BATTERED PLANE—
THE WING'S NOT PERFECT— BUT SHE'LL HOLD— AND ANOTHER DAY'S WORK ON THAT HULL OUGHT TO PUT HER IN SHAPE FOR A TAKE-OFF— AND HOW I'LL BE ABLE TO USE THAT $50,000. PRIZE—

MOON MULLINS
by Frank Willard
I AND EMMY'S UNCLE AMBROSE ARE GETTIN' UP A POKER GAME TO NIGHT
AND WE WONDERED IF YOU'D JOIN US, LORD PLUSHBOTTOM.
NO. I CAN'T PLAY POKER.
OH- I WAS UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT YOU COULD.
SO WAS I, UNTIL I MARRIED YOUR NIECE.
GOOD GOSH! MOON, IS HE A MAN OR A MOUSE AROUND THIS HOUSE?
A MOUSE!
OH!
SAY. THEM'S MY STILTS!
OUTTA MY WAY!
WHY MY DEAR EMMA!
MOONSHINE SAID THERE WAS A MOUSE IN THE HOUSE!
AND YOU, LORD PLUSHBOTTOM, LET A TIMID LITTLE WOMAN LIKE THAT BROWBEAT YOU! BAH! WHY I'D TURN HER OVER MY KNEE AND SHOW HER WHO'S WHO AROUND HERE RIGHT QUICK IF I WAS IN YOUR BOOTS, MY BOY!
BY JOVE, SIR! IT IS TIME I WAS ASSERTING MYSELF.
MOON, TELL THE BOYS LORD PLUSHBOTTOM WILL PLAY POKER TO NIGHT.
EMMA! COME IN HERE!!
YOU'RE SURE THERE AIN'T A MOUSE IN THE HOUSE?
ABSOLUTELY NOT! GO UP TO YOUR ROOM AND GIVE ME THOSE STILTS!
POW! BAM! ZOK!
I DIDN'T MEAN FOR HIM TO GET SO ROUGH WITH HER.
MOONSHINE, DO ME A FAVOR AND TELL KAYO TO HIDE THOSE —!!! STILTS OF HIS WHERE LADY PLUSHBOTTOM WILL NEVER FIND THEM AGAIN, PLEASE.

DICK TRACY
By CHESTER GOULD
ALL RIGHT, BOYS—NOW THAT WE'RE ALL HERE, I WANT TO TELL YOU THAT EVERYTHING IS GOING GREAT.
THIS GUY TRACY'S WATCHING US, BUT HE'S GOT NOTHING ON US AND HE WON'T GET ANYTHING ON US. AND BESIDES THAT WE'VE GOT A SCHEME WORKED OUT TO RUN HIM OUT OF TOWN!
LOOK AT THIS NEWSPAPER STORY!
DAILY PAPER
CITY COUNCIL REFUSES APPROPRIATION FOR FIELD HOUSE
POLICE CHIEF TRACY SAYS HE WILL ERECT PLAYGROUND FOR KIDS OUT OF OWN POCKET.
PROPOSED PLAYGROUND
TRACY'S FED THE POPULACE SOME ROT TO THE EFFECT THAT THE ONLY WAY TO PREVENT CRIME IS TO HAVE A PLAYGROUND FOR THE KIDS. WELL, THE CITY COUNCIL CAN'T SEE IT AND WON'T GIVE HIM MONEY FOR THE PLAYGROUND.
AND THE REASON THE COUNCIL WON'T GIVE HIM THE MONEY IS THAT HE'S ARRESTED A NUMBER OF THE ALDERMEN AND BIG SHOTS FOR SPEEDING—AND THEM BOYS DON'T LIKE HIM.
BUT "CUT", IF THE DICK DIGS DOWN IN HIS OWN POCKET AND BUILDS A PLAYGROUND.. THAT'LL MAKE HIM A BIGGER HERO THAN EVER, WON'T IT?
AH . . . BUT WAIT—YOU HAVEN'T HEARD ALL THE DETAILS. LOOK AT THIS PARAGRAPH FURTHER DOWN IN THE ARTICLE!
YOU SEE? THE DICK'S GOT TO BORROW THE DOUGH!
the detective says he will seek a private loan to construct the playground and field house
SO WHAT? EXPLAIN YOURSELF, "CUT"!
GENTLEMEN.. A VERY DEAR FRIEND OF MINE, A RESPECTED CITIZEN OF THIS TOWN, WHO IS IN THE REAL ESTATE LOAN BUSINESS, IS GOING TO MR. TRACY AND LOAN HIM THAT MONEY.
YOU MEAN THIS BIRD WILL TRICK THE FLATFOOT INTO SIGNING NOTES.. NOTES THAT WILL BE MADE OUT TO YOU FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE DOUGH?
EXACTLY!
IT WON'T WORK, "CUT".
SH-SH.. MY LOAN SHARK FRIEND IS DUE HERE ANY MINUTE.. SH— I BELIEVE I HEAR HIM NOW . . .
MEANWHILE . . .
TRACY, I'M JUST AS SORRY THE COUNCIL TURNED YOU DOWN ON YOUR PLAYGROUND PROJECT AS YOU ARE . . . . BUT I TOLD YOU THEY WOULD. YOU WENT AT THINGS TOO STRONG IN THIS TOWN. YOU GOT ALL THE BIG SHOTS MAD AT YOU.
MR. MAYOR, YOU MADE ME HEAD OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT—AND AS SUCH I'M PLAYING NO FAVORITES. THE CITY COUNCIL CAN TAKE A LONG RUN FOR THEMSELVES AS FAR AS I'M CONCERNED. THAT PLAYGROUND IS GOING TO BE BUILT!

Little Orphan Annie
I FEEL SORTA AS IF I'D BEEN KICKED IN TH' STUMMICK-
WHAT A WEEK! EVER'THING WAS ALL SET- MR. KOLOSSAL SAID I WAS TO BE A REAL STAR- I'D LEARNED MY PART AND TH' SCENES WERE BUILT- THEY WERE JUST READY TO START SHOOTIN- THEN BLOOIE!
I KNOW, ANNIE- BUT YOU'LL GET USED TO THAT, IF YOU STAY AROUND HERE LONG-I'LL NEVER GET USED TO IT, IN A THOUSAND YEARS- IS MR. KOLOSSAL CRAZY, OR WHAT?
HE'S CRAZY ENOUGH TO BE MAKING MILLIONS- MAYBE THAT'S BECAUSE IT'S SORT OF A CRAZY BUSINESS, IN SOME WAYS-
THAT GUY, MR. TRANCE- HE CAME BUSTIN' IN WITH A BIG IDEA AND SPOILED EVER'THING- THEY JUST SEEMED TO FORGET ALL 'BOUT ME AND MY PICTURE-WHO DIDJA SAY MR. TRANCE IS?
HE'S A SCENARIO WRITER- THEY CALL HIM THE "LITTLE SEIZURE" OF THE MOVIE LOTS- HE'S FOREVER HAVING A BRAIN STORM- KOLOSSAL THINKS HE'S WONDERFUL-
WELL, HE SURE WRECKED MY BIG CHANCE-
WELL I WISH I HAD A DOLLAR FOR EVERY TIME I'VE BEEN SURE I WAS ON MY WAY TO FAME AND FORTUNE, ONLY TO HAVE IT ALL BLOW UP IN MY FACE-
I WISH I HAD A DOLLAR- WE'RE DOG-GONED NEAR BROKE, JANEY- OUR RENT'S DUE AND WE'VE GOT TO EAT-
OH, WELL- SOMETHING WILL TURN UP- IT ALWAYS DOES- AND IF IT DOESN'T, WORRYING ABOUT IT CAN'T HELP-
I DUNNO ABOUT THAT, JANEY- WHEN I'M UP AGAINST IT, I WORRY- SOME TIMES WORRYIN' HARD ENOUGH GIVES YUH AN IDEA-
HM-M-M---- LOOK HERE- HERE'S YOUR PAL'S NAME IN THE PAPER- IT SAYS TOOTSIE SNOOTS HAS BROKEN HER CONTRACT WITH KOLOSSAL-
SHE'S NO PAL O' MINE- DOES IT SAY WHAT SHE'S GOIN' TO DO?
IT SAYS IT'S REPORTED SHE'S SIGNED UP WITH "GAMBLE FEATURES" TO STAR IN A GIANT JUNGLE THRILLER- THERE'S QUITE A STORY ABOUT IT-
HM-M---- A GIANT JUNGLE THRILLER--- THAT MEANS THERE'LL BE WILD ANIMALS IN IT- THERE'LL HAVE TO BE WILD ANIMALS-
HUH! IMAGINE TOOTSIE PLAYING A PART LIKE THAT- WHY, SHE'S SCARED TO DEATH OF A MOUSE-
ANIMALS! GEE- I'M NOT SCARED O' ANIMALS- I'VE HAD LOTS O' S'PERIENCE IN TH' CIRCUS--- SAY! THERE'S A CHANCE FOR ME-
YEAH- A FAT CHANCE- TOOTSIE'S JUST CRAZY ABOUT YOU- SO ARE HER FOLKS- THEY'D NEVER LET YOU ON THE SAME LOT-
I DON'T CARE- IT'S WORTH TRYIN- I DO KNOW 'BOUT ANIMALS- I COULD DOUBLE FOR HER SWELL IN A PICTURE LIKE THAT-DOUBLE AGAIN FOR THAT SNIP? MAKE HER PICTURE FOR HER, SO SHE CAN COLLECT A FORTUNE AND SNEER AT YOU FOR A SAP?
SAP, NOTHIN'- AS FOR WHAT SHE THINKS O' ME- SHE SHOULD KNOW WHAT I THINK O' HER- I CAN USE TH' S'PERIENCE, AND WE NEED TH' DOUGH, TO EAT-

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES CRAMP YOUR STYLE

DURING adolescence, from thirteen to about twenty-five years of age, important glands develop. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Harmful waste products get into your blood stream.

These poisons in your blood irritate the sensitive skin and make pimples break through.

Physicians prescribe Fleischmann's Yeast for adolescent pimples. It clears skin irritants out of the blood. Once your blood stream is clear, your skin is smooth again—not a pimple to cause embarrassment.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals, until your skin is entirely clear. Many cases of pimples clear up within a week or two. Bad cases sometimes take a month or more.

Chicago's First Fall Auto Show Opens

Auto Edition to Tell News of Cars, Taxes and Roads

Accident Prevention; Winter Tours Also Discussed.

THIS annual automobile show edition—as in The Tribune's year around coverage of motoring news—includes reports on street and highway construction, safety campaigns, touring, trafic regulation, taxation, and legislation as well as pictures and descriptions of the 1936 models.

Today's special section, in keeping with The Tribune's distinctive year around attentiveness to news for car owners, has assembled stories by public officials and by staf writers telling of the development of pavement facilities this year, detailing accident reduction movements, reporting tax threats and promises, and describing attractive winter tours for vacations and for week-end holidays.

Winter Tours Increasing.

Correspondents in Miami and in Chattanooga predict a banner year for highway travel from the north. There's a new section of pavement on U. S. 41 that avoids mountain grades in the drive to Florida. Another dispatch, from Los Angeles, predicts that California is going to draw motorists in record numbers this winter. The entire south has grounds for this optimism. The recent summer surpassed all others in long distance touring volumes.

Wisconsin and Michigan, better known as summer recreation areas, are bidding this year for winter holiday patronage. Other stories from these Chicagoland states tell of the millions of dollars received by the resorts of these wood and lake regions during the season just ended and of the millions spent in improving Wisconsin and Michigan roads.

Driver's License Urged.

Ernst Lieberman, Illinois highway engineer, reports on the miles of pavement that have been added to this state to enhance the pleasure and utility of car ownership. Charles De Leuw, his chief assistant, writes of plans for developing farm service roads. Robert Kingery, director of Illinois public works, tells of highway landscaping.

In the field of safety, Gov. Horner has an article appealing for enactment of a drivers' license bill pending before the special session of legislature at Springfield.

Also contributing to the section, each writing about automobiles and trafic as they concern his particular journalistic specialty, include Frank Ridgway, agricultural editor; Arch Ward, sports editor; Ruth De Young, woman's editor; Howard Wood, financial editor, and Bob Becker, outdoor editor.

Auto Show Facts

EVENT—36th Chicago Automobile Show.

PLACE—International Amphitheater, Halsted and 43rd streets.

DATES—Daily through next Saturday, including today.

HOURS—11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

ADMISSION—55 cents, including tax.

SPONSOR—Chicago Automobile Trade association.

SHOW COMMITTEE—H. T. Hollingshead, chairman; K. K. Kenderdine, president Chicago Automobile Trade association; A. C. Faeh, Show Manager.

EXHIBITS—Approximately 300 models of 29 makes of passenger cars; motor trucks; home and truck trailers, motor coaches; accessories.

VALUE OF SHOW—$3,000,000, including exhibits and decorations and a fur style show. Staged with cooperation of Associated Fur Industries of Chicago.

SIZE OF EXHIBIT SPACE—255,000 square feet.

PARKING SPACE—Free, with protection; accommodations for 5,000 cars.

HOW TO GET THERE—By motor from north or south side, Michigan avenue and west on 43rd street; from west side, Western or Ashland avenue, east on either 47th street or Garfield Boulevard, then north on Halsted to Amphitheater. By surface lines any south or north bound car running on Halsted street or any cross town line connecting with Halsted street routes; by elevated, Jackson Park, Englewood or Kenwood trains; transfer for Amphitheatre at Indiana avenue and 40th street.

New Location, New Features, New Cars and a New Date

International Amphitheater to House Exhibits.

By HAL FOUST.

CHICAGO'S 36th annual automobile show was opened yesterday afternoon in the International Amphitheater, South Halsted and West 43d streets. The exposition will continue daily, including today, until next Saturday night. The hours are from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

The yearly event is at a new location, at a new season, and displays new exhibits with new showmanship. The sponsor, the Chicago Automobile Trade association, anticipates a new attendance record of a half million for the eight days.

By moving from the Coliseum, where all previous motor shows were held since 1900, to the $2,000,000 amphitheater completed last year available floor space was multiplied four times, giving Chicago the largest automobile show in the world.

Exhibitors are not cramped in arranging their booths. There was no congestion such as in other years as opening day crowds viewed 1936 models and listened to lecturers point out mechanical advancements in cutaway engines, chassis, and parts.

The new date is ten weeks earlier than precedent. The advance was made to stimulate early winter buying so as to stabilize employment in motor car production. Automobile manufacturing and its allied industries engage 5,000,000 workmen, twelve per cent of the nation's gainfully employed.

Next Year's Cars on Display.

The exhibits, consisting mainly of 1936 motor cars, are really new, not merely predated. They incorporate advancements in style and engineering that maintain the industry's reputation for continual advancements. They represent creations of the world's leading technical experts supported by millions of dollars for research. They represent production by aggressive and competitive capital.

The new showmanship is inspired by the optimism in the industry. With sales continuing to grow from the depression low of 1932, more money and enthusiasm is being spent for promotion. The 1934 production, double that of 1932, will be surpassed in 1935 by 40 per cent.

The new showmanship has room for expression with 255,000 square feet of floor space, as compared with 58,000 square feet at the Coliseum. In addition to 300 models of twenty-nine makes with moving mechanical exhibits demonstrated by attendants, there are displays of trucks, of touring trailers, of motor coaches, and of accessories.

And then, a style drama has been added to the motor show with performances each afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and each evening at 9:30 o'clock. Manikins wearing $1,000,000 worth of furs ride into the arena in twenty-one 1936 automobiles to music by Cavello's orchestra.

Some Prices Up, Some Down.

The main attraction, however, is still the cars themselves. It is the only opportunity to inspect all 1936 models under one roof for convenient comparisons.

A composite of the 1936 models bears a price tag about the same as its 1935 predecessor. On the individual cars, a few prices have been raised slightly and a few have been lowered slightly. A majority remain unchanged. An increased production volume permits the manufacturers to add to values with no material addition to costs per unit.

The trend in style is toward further streamlining for practical aerodynamic reasons as well as for refinements in appearance. Radiator grilles and louvres are fancy this year.

Hydraulic brakes are more widely used. Horse power, acceleration, and top speeds have been stepped up, in most instances by increasing engine compression. A majority of the manufacturers now have transmissions with a quiet first and reverse as well as second and third. A number have some type of fourth forward speed of extra high gear ratio.

Wives' Aversion to Mud Brought Left Hand Drive on Autos

By RUTH DeYOUNG

THERE'S an entertaining story told about woman's influence on this business of style and convenience in the evolution of the motor car.

About 1900 the steering wheel of the automobile was located on the right side like the whip socket on the dashboard of the old family buggy. Now, as every one knows, the steering wheel on American autos is on the left side. Apparently a simple change, but little short of a revolution back in the beginning of this century.

When engineers proposed the move there was a loud cry to the effect that motor buggies driven from the left would mean roads strewn with wreckage. Most of the men of the country cast their allegiance on one side or the other, but nothing was decided. Learned articles were written and widely circulated, but still nothing was done about it.

Finally an appeal was made to the women. And it didn't take them long to point out the inconvenience of the steering wheel on the right side. They explained that they had to alight on the left in the roadway with its dust or mud or climb over or under the levers, perhaps even over the driver.

Feminine influence upon car design scored its first point in bringing about the change to left hand drive. The woman's viewpoint has since dictated refinements in style and in mechanical improvements for ease of control.

AUTO INDUSTRY FOUND TO HELP BUSINESS RISE

Demands for Steel to Advance Gains.

BY HOWARD WOOD.
[Financial Editor.]

Credit for much of the improvement in general business during 1935 must be given to the automobile industry. Its demands for steel have enable that industry, leader of the heavy goods group, to operate on a profit basis most of the year. Revival in steel is vital before any sustained position along recovery road can be maintained.

Appraising prospects a year ago with an eye to subsequent prosperity which followed the depression of 1921, automotive production and new residential construction were looked upon to determine how far the United States would push forward during the year. Both industries made strides, but the automotive group ran far ahead.

See Effect on Steel.

Again this year awards of car makers will have an appreciable effect on the steel industry but probably to a lesser extent. The business revival which set in last June has stimulated demands from other sources to a point where steel leaders believe little or no recession will be felt in production even if automobile orders fail to approach expectations.

A widening outlet for heavy rolled products in construction work and navy vessels, supplemented by a fair volume of rail orders, is responsible. If auto demand is as great as anticipated, the operating rate will be swelled correspondingly.

Look for 20 Pct. Gain.

That this will occur is confidently expected by the auto trade. Even the more conservative look for a 20 per cent gain over this year's production.

Automobile manufacturers who are making substantial commitments for 1936 models are paying about the same prices for materials prevailing a year ago, but wages are about 50 per cent above last year, although rates of pay are about the same. With these factors constant, profit margins likely will depend on the volume of cars produced.

AUTO MAKERS STRIVE TO MEET DEMANDS OF THE MOTORING PUBLIC

BY ROY D. CHAPIN.
[President, Hudson Motor Car Co.]

ROY D. CHAPIN.

The automobile industry has answered the demands of the public for style, performance, size, safety, and ruggedness. The models presented at the motor show fulfill these requirements.

The soundness of the cars from an engineering standpoint has been thoroughly checked by thousands of miles of road tests. These tests covered new mechanical devices designed to ease the driver's duties and to enhance the comfort of the ride.

Style is distinctly a matter of taste. It can't be measured. But the public that viewed the models in New York this month substantiated the taste of the industry's artists.

LONDON TO EQUIP ITS BUSES WITH DIESEL ENGINES

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—One of the biggest victories yet gained by the Diesel engine is revealed in an announcement by London Transport that it will equip all of its 6,000 buses and coaches with the oil burning type as fast as replacements become necessary.

The change-over is expected to be complete in about 10 years, when the last of the company's gasoline engines will have disappeared. The company at present uses about 45,000,000 gallons of gasoline a year. It estimates its fuel bill will be cut about in half.

3.8 CARS PER ROAD MILE.

At the present time there are 9,251,000 miles of highways in the world, with an average of 3.8 automobiles to each mile of road.

INDUSTRY SPENT LARGE SUM TO CHANGE CARS

BY A. VAN DER ZEE.
[General Sales Manager, Dodge.]

A. VAN DER ZEE.

All the changes that distinguish the cars that we see here from their 1935 forerunners—cost the industry millions spent on the re-tooling of plants for a new product. These expenses, the great sums that are being spent in purchasing raw materials, and additional millions that will be distributed for sales promotion and advertising purposes are bound to spur business and advance prosperity.

More people are at work, more money is in circulation than in years. More new cars and trucks are needed to replace worn out ones than were required in any year since the advent of the automobile industry.

I think that the show has a number of aspects not so readily perceived by the average onlooker which prove that the automobile industry is making the most important contributions to the return of American prosperity.

The visitor looking beyond the glistening new bodies at the auto show sees in the splendid cars all and more than the most thrifty buyer could possibly ask for his money. He sees armies of mechanics and assembly workers employed in the factories. He sees a far-flung line of feeder industries furnishing to many more persons working raw materials into parts and supplies.

ROCK ISLAND'S CAMPAIGN CUTS ACCIDENT RATE

Rock Island, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Safety measures inaugurated in this city last spring have decreased the automobile accident rate almost 40 per cent, according to Mayor John A. Bengston.

In May, soon after he took office, Mayor Bengston named seven members of the city council—one from each ward—to a safety committee, which affiliated itself with the National Safety council. Business and social organizations throughout the city met with the committee, which under the guidance of the mayor, the city attorney, and police officials, drafted an ordinance to replace the obsolete trafic law.

Emphasis on pedestrian safety is reflected in the schools, where safety patrol boys have been appointed and given red flags with which to direct trafic. A motorcycle policeman daily makes the rounds of school intersections when children are crossing. In addition, six more men have been appointed to the police force for duty where trafic is heaviest.

Cost of Trafic Accidents Put at 1½ Billions Yearly

The annual cost of trafic accidents is about $1,500,000,000. This loss, representing an average cost of one cent per mile to motorists, consists of wage losses, medical expenses, insurance costs, and property damage.

BUICK FOR 1936

Buick this year has stepped up performance—top speeds, acceleration and braking—and has reduced prices. This applies to all four of the veteran company's 1936 lines.

In exterior appearance, changes have been moderate. Most noticeable is the new radiator, high and wedge shaped with die cast chromium grille. The windshield is split and sharply slanted.

Horsepower has been increased to give these heavier cars the pickup that has made small automobiles popular in the last few years. Anolite pistons of light weight contribute to the rejuvenation.

Hydraulic brakes have been adopted to control the higher speeds. These speeds, incidentally, are as high as 95 miles an hour in one model. The wheel bases and horsepowers of the four lines are as follows: 118 inches 93 h. p.; 122 inches, 120 h. p.; 131 inches, 120 h. p.; and 138 inches, 120 h. p.

MAYOR ADVISES 50 MILE LIMIT ON AUTO SPEED

BY EDWARD J. KELLY.
[Mayor of Chicago.]

Chicago citizens have again shown what the wonderful "I Will" spirit can accomplish. Backed by the determination of Chicago's people, automobile accidents have been reduced on our streets.

A little more than a year ago I called upon one hundred of Chicago's business and social leaders to meet and formulate plans for a continual campaign against traffic accidents. This group became known as the Keep Chicago Safe committee—from its inception this committee has been met with a 100 per cent coöperation from our people.

Law enforcement officials entered the campaign and have accomplished tremendous results. The "fixing of tickets" was made impossible—politics favoring trafic law violators have no place in Chicago's fight for safety.

So that I may obtain the thoughts of Chicago citizens on the mechanical regulation of speed, I am presenting a suggestion to limit automobiles to fifty miles per hour.

Speed—the blind desire to "get there fast" at the saving of only a few minutes at most—causes a great many accidents. The place for high speed is the automobile race track and not public thoroughfares. I believe that it would be well to install governors on automobiles to limit the speed to fifty miles per hour, excepting, of course, those cars specially designed for racing or police work.

LIGHT CONTROLED DEATH CORNER

This is the most dangerous signal controled intersection in rural Cook county. It's at Crawford avenue and Dempster street, Niles Center, Ill., where five persons have been killed and twenty-three injured since Jan. 1, 1934. "Running the amber" accounted for most of the casualties.

NEED FOR DRIVER LICENSE LAW IS CITED BY HORNER

Governor Points Out Accident Increase.

BY HENRY HORNER.
[Governor of Illinois.]

The increasing seriousness, in recent years, of the trafic accident situation in Illinois warants the earnest consideration of all citizens. An average of eight persons daily lose their lives on our streets and highways, while approximately 150 others suffer serious injuries. In addition, property damage losses run into millions of dollars annually.

In Illinois, motor vehicle fatalities increased 20 per cent in 1934 over 1933. The trend this year promises but a slight reduction from the peak figures of 1934.

This state of affairs plainly indicates the necessity for judicious control over the drivers. I favor the so-called "drivers' license law" and its companion, the "safety responsibility law." I am informed that such legislation is in effect in thirty or more states at the present time and that others are now giving consideration to the enactment of similar laws.

At the present time we have no legal means of depriving the reckless, irresponsible, or incompetent person of the right to operate an automobile on the public highways. Bills introduced in previous sessions of the general assembly have been defeated. It is indeed difficult to understand the viewpoint of those who have been antagonistic to such legislation, for it has been shown that a substantial reduction in trafic deaths has followed the enactment of a drivers' license law in other states.

I have felt it was the duty of the state to lend its support and aid to safety work and so have directed the state highway department, through its engineering forces and the state police, to carry on a state-wide safety program and to better acquaint the public with the true condition. As part of our program, we have entered the national trafic safety contest. To date 101 of the 117 eligible cities in Illinois have enrolled.

CADILLAC days are here again!

One of the grandest signs of America's return to a happier state of existence is the great nation-wide tide of interest in the Royal Family of Motordom—the new La Salles, the new Cadillacs, and the new Cadillac-Fleetwoods.

Less than thirty days have elapsed since these distinguished cars were presented to the public—yet orders already received exceed those for the whole of 1934—and are greater than the total number received in the first nine months of 1935!

Of course, the basic reason for this unprecedented swing to the Royal Family of Motordom is found in the cars themselves.

The New La Salle is a gorgeously beautiful automobile—the great original streamline design that has served as the inspiration for so many cars in every price class. Dynamic in action, delightful to drive, and remarkably economical to operate—it also carries the lowest price for a car by Cadillac since the single-cylinder days—only $1175 list at the Cadillac factory.

The New Cadillac is a revelation—with performance that knows no counterpart—beauty that beggars description—and comfort and safety that step years ahead of the parade. It, too, is sensationally priced—starting at only $1645 list at the factory.

The New Cadillac-Fleetwoods are in a world apart—the most elegant, the most distinguished and the most superbly comfortable cars in Cadillac's history. And they, too, are priced amazingly low for such superlative creations—ranging from $2445 at the factory.

Yes, the cars themselves—matchless as they are, in every way—are the first and most compelling reason for this tremendous swing to the Royal Family of Motordom. But there is also another reason—and one that should prove extremely heartening to all America.

It is found in the fact that a great and growing group of buyers have tired of compromise in all its forms—and are turning again to that which they know to be undeniably best.

We feel sincerely that this is a good and a grand thing—not only for Cadillac—but for all business everywhere.

If you have not yet seen the great new cars that comprise the Royal Family of Motordom—we cordially invite you to do so today. They are on display at the Motor Show, International Amphitheater, Halsted at 43rd Street; at the Cadillac Motor Car Company Branch, 2301 South Michigan Avenue; and in the showrooms of all Cadillac-La Salle dealers.

TRUCKS GROWING IN POPULARITY AMONG FARMERS

Rush Produce and Milk to Chicago Terminal.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.
[Agricultural Editor.]

Motor wise men of the farm continue to use the highway truck more and more in hauling products to and from Chicago, the world's largest terminal agricultural market. A swift moving fleet of thousands of vans, massive tanks, and "crates" are kept going night and day, moving live stock, milk, and home grown fruits and vegetables into the city from farms over an area stretching back into the country for a hundred miles or more. Fruits and vegetables are brought in by truck from gardens, orchards, and vineyards as much as a thousand miles away.

Motor trucks, some equipped with thermos bottle tanks and others with refrigerator bodies, are used to haul 3½ million pounds of Chicago's daily supply of 4 million pounds of fluid milk, according to estimates made by the Pure Milk association from figures compiled in selling milk for 18,000 members. Refrigerator motor trucks in which cans of milk are hauled direct from the production areas have recently encouraged the use of this kind of transportation, association officials explained.

Trucks Carry More Live Stock.

The Union Stock Yards and Transit company reports an increase in the use of the truck in houling live stock to Chicago. The figures show that during the first half of this year nearly 43 per cent, as compared with about 31 per cent in 1934, of the cattle coming to the Chicago market were transported in motor trucks. Approximately 35 per cent of the calves, 34 per cent of the hogs and 12 per cent of the sheep received came in trucks.

Recent estimates made by local federal market reporters show that the equivalent of 10,500 carloads of fruits and vegetables were trucked to Chicago last year. Trucking of fruits and vegetables has been increased this year over last. Up to the first of September the equivalent of 6,613 carloads of fruits and vegetables had been hauled to Chicago in trucks, an increase of 1,750 cars over the same period last year.

Gardeners Use Trucks.

These figures on the trucking of fruits and vegetables do not include the home grown products hauled into the Randolph street market and to other places in the city by growers living within a radius of a few miles of the city. It is estimated that more than 2,500 truck gardeners around the rim of Chicago use trucks in hauling their fruits and vegetables to market; most of them use their own trucks.

Official figures indicate that farmers as a group are the largest users of motor trucks in the country. The latest federal census figures show 900,385 motor trucks on farms in the United States. This is 26.4 per cent of the total of 3,410,000.

WATCH DRIVERS WITH 'LOW EARS,' SAYS THEORIST

A person whose ears are set low on his head is a potentially dangerous driver, according to a novel safety theory recently advanced. The hypothesis is that drivers afflicted with "LE"—or low ears—are inclined to be reckless and heedless of traffic rules and regulations, while persons with high ears are apt to be cautious.

The "LE" type of driver is said to be characterized by an over development of a certain portion of the brain which forces his ears downward and which gives him a predilection toward taking long chances, rather than observing trafic laws or the rules of common sense. In addition to dangerous drivers, the "LE" group is supposed to comprise pioneers, rebels of society, adventurers, sport champions, and visionaries.

Safety workers, although interested in the theory, view it with apparent suspicion.

Failure to Stop After Crash Means Penalties

If a driver involved in an accident fails to stop, the penalty fixed by trafic code provisions is imprisonment for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or a fine of $100 to $1,000, or both fine and imprisonment. The license of any chauffeur or truck driver convicted of failing to stop at the scene of such accidents will be revoked.

Trafic Violations Observed

At 12:05 p. m. last Sunday a Pierce-Arrow bearing Illinois license 700-564 was driven north on Michigan boulevard, going through a red trafic signal at 14th street. The license was issued to Aaron Epstein, 1614 West Garfield boulevard.

At 12:15 p. m. last Sunday a car bearing license 514-765, issued to Aaron H. Levy, 5630 Winthrop avenue, and parked at the west curb of Lake Shore drive in the 3400 block, was started, swerving to the east curb without hand signals. It narrowly missed two other southbound machines.

At 11:10 a. m. on Nov. 9 a machine bearing license 1-114-603, issued to Bernice R. Tylman, 123 South Elizabeth street, Lombard, went through a red light at Madison street as it was driven south on Ashland avenue.

A car with license 173-063 last Sunday morning went through a red light in Dearborn street at Randolph street. This number was issued to Carl Fisher, 146 Ardmore road, Des Plaines, Ill.

On Tuesday a sedan without license plates was driven in Michigan avenue from Oak street to Monroe street without being stopped by policemen on duty at almost every intersection.

Shortly afternoon last Sunday an automobile southbound in Hazel avenue swung east into Wilson avenue without so much as slowing down for the stop sign on the corner. The license number, 386-425, was issued to the Seaman Bag company, 2045 Fulton street.

AUTUMN GIVES HUNTING DOG HIS DAY IN MOTORING

And He Enjoys Trips Like Any Modern.

BY BOB BECKER.
[Outdoor Editor.]

Autumn develops a new "business" for automobiles in the middle west. Thousands of hunting dogs that were given only occasional rides in cars during the summer become important passengers on trips just as soon as the hunting seasons get under way.

Some of them curl up on the back seat and enjoy the full benefit of cushions and the easy riding qualities of the modern gas buggy. Others are tucked into specially built dog crates placed on the running board or at the rear of the car, and there they ride until it's time to go to work in the quail fields or other hunting areas.

There is nothing old-fashioned about the dog and his attitude toward automobiles. On the contrary, he is quite modern in that he likes automobiles and thoroughly enjoys riding in them. There is a lure about a motor ride that the dog cannot resist—providing he is not in that small group of pets that become car sick.

Some Practical Suggestions.

Here are a few practical tips on dogs and automobiles which may solve some of the problems that our canines present when it is time to take them on either short or long trips into the country.

One of the most annoying things to the dog owner is the tendency of some of the pets to become car sick. There is no magic, quick remedy for this trouble. One point to remember is that the pup is less apt to become ill if you do not drive too fast at first. Another thing, do not cut corners too sharply when you take the pup on his first ride.

One important suggestion to remember is: Don't take your pup riding right after you have fed him. Allow three to five hours after feeding. If the dog seems to be nervous you should put him in the seat next to you, try to calm him, and speak reassuringly to him.

Other Problems Presented.

No dog should be permitted to ride unprotected on the running board of a car, because the animal can easily be thrown off and injured. A sudden stop may cause the pup to lose his balance. Dogs that are allowed to ride with their heads hanging out of windows present another problem. We know of excitable, nervous dogs that have leaped out the window when the car was in motion. The result was a near accident for the driver, broken bones for the dog, plus a good sized bill to be paid for medical treatment for the canine.

No automobile driver who is carrying a dog with him in the car should let his pet hold his head out of a window or ride in the open at high speed. Dogs, just like humans, may develop serious eye trouble if they face wind and dust for any length of time.

SANE AND STEADY HAND IS BUSINESS NEED, SAYS NASH

BY C. W. NASH.
[Chairman, Nash Motors Co.]

C. W. NASH.

If American business men will operate their various enterprises along sane, economical lines and will continue to build to the high standards of value that have always been characteristic of American merchandise, and if labor will continue to recognize its vital responsibility in keeping business on an even keel, then we are bound to enjoy increasing success in the year to come.

To consolidate the gains already made in our return to better times, steady hands are needed on the reins of industry, finance and labor. However, in my opinion, there is nothing in today's general economic conditions nor in the outlook for tomorrow that should slow down the inspiring industrial march that has marked the last eight months.

It is natural, perhaps, for most of us engaged in the automobile industry to take pride in the part we have played toward restoring some degree of prosperity to the land and courage to other industries. We cannot overlook, however, the fact that an ever-increasing potential market for automobiles, built up during the depression years, has received a tremendous stimulus from the general betterment of agricultural and business conditions, a stimulus which will make itself felt to an even greater degree in 1936.

SAFETY EFFORTS ARE FORCING OLD CARS OFF ROADS

BY H. J. KLINGLER.
[President, Pontiac Motor Company.]

H. J. KLINGLER.

Safety campaigns are tending to remove old automobiles from the highways. The replacement of these worn vehicles with modern cars is reducing the risks of motor travel.

The new automobiles are safer to drive because they are easier to control. Pedestrians benefit from this development as well as drivers and other riders.

Registration figures are evidence that the old and unsafe automobiles are going into the junk piles. Next year, the extent of the scrapping process should be greater still. There is only one reason any one continues to drive a worn out car and that is that he can't afford a new one.

Accidents have increased alarmingly in the last few years, due in part to the inability of many to buy a new automobile. Some legislators have proposed that the speed of motors should be controled mechanically, but this would be of little benefit. Widespread campaigns of newspaper education and appeals to the common sense of the motorist will make for safer driving of automobiles. Our accident rate should go down steadily.

DON'T DO THIS FOOLISH THING

The driver of the black sedan isn't able to see trafic as he backs from the curb, illustrating the inherent hazard of diagonal parking. It's more than a "foolish thing." It's a violation of statute on all state highways, including city routes, and a violation of ordinance everywhere in Chicago.

CHEVROLET HEAD CITES EXPANSION AS KEY TO TIMES

BY M. E. COYLE.
[President, Chevrolet Motor Company.]

M. E. COYLE.

Chevrolet has just completed a $25,000,000 expansion and modernization program to increase production capacity by 25 per cent. This answers any question about this company's view of the country's economic outlook.

The general picture of America today is good. A base exists for enormous expansion of bank credit. Reappearance of security offerings betokens a willingness to embark on long term projects. Seventy-one per cent of American cities report a move upward of rents for single family homes and 66 per cent report an increase in apartment rents.

Department store sales outside the New York area have increased 20 per cent over a year ago since Labor day, and New York retail volume is said to be up nearly 10 per cent. It is no wonder that business again feels free to display its old enterprising spirit.

PLYMOUTH 4 DOOR

Plymouth, in the promotion of its longer, lower, and wider 1936 models, is emphasizing the rigidity and strength of its body and chassis and the mechanical innovations designed to enchance comfort. The safety factor is boosted by these same improvements.

The girder steel frame is said to be twice as rigid as in previous models. A steering shock eliminator has been added. A sway stabilizer has been refined.

Engine and seats have been moved foreward to give a better balance to the vehicle. Front springs have been redesigned so the operation coincides with that of the rear springs.

Rubber has been utilized more than ever before to reduce road noises and body rumble. Thick pads separate bodies and frames. Rubber bumpers separate the axles from the frame. And the engines are mounted in rubber.

FIRST OF THE GENERAL MOTORS CARS!

WHEN you buy one of the phenomenal new 1936 Buicks, you buy one of the newest cars in the world.

On every count of smart sparkling style, spacious comfort, spectacular performance, progressive engineering, that statement is obviously true.

But in another and equally important sense that statement is not true, for Buick is also one of the world's oldest cars.

It was the first member of the now greatly grown and world-known General Motors family, the very cornerstone on which this leader of all automotive organizations was built.

Buick had been making automobiles—and for those days mighty good ones—for six years before General Motors was formed in 1908.

Buick was creating sound engineering and construction principles then that are valid and fruitful even now, a third of a century later.

Buick was living the creed of winning and holding friends by merit and service of product, which inspires and informs all the policies of its great parent today.

Buick's own gifts of originality and competence, in turn, have steadily been fortified and enriched by the scientific and technical resources of General Motors—and never more than in the cars it offers now.

So it is a proud designation for Buick—fine to bear, still finer to deserve: FIRST of the General Motors cars!

BOONDOGGLING EATS ROAD FUND IN WORKS BILL

Program Almost Forgotten by Roosevelt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Under the 4 billion dollar works relief program the New Deal held out to the motorist the prospect of the greatest road building program in the history of the country. As the program is about to get under way motorists face almost complete diversion of funds set aside for them into boondoggling and leaf raking activities favored by the administration.

When President Roosevelt signed the works relief act aboard a presidential special speeding toward the White House after his fishing cruise in Florida last March the act provided for expenditure of $400,000,000 on roads and $400,000,000 for grade crossing elimination. The fund was earmarked in congress for the improvements under a schedule which fixed an appropriation for each state.

Allocations Made.

Shortly after his return to the White House the President initiated this phase of the works relief program by allocating $200,000,000 for roads and a like amount for grade crossings. It was announced that like allocations would be made within a few weeks so that the administration could put 3,500,000 employables on relief to work by July 1.

At the same time the administration promised to devote a sizable portion of the balance of the fund to the development of farm to market roads. This development was to have no relation to the 800 million dollar earmarked fund.

Deadline Extended.

The program was slow in getting under way. July 1 passed and only a few men were at work. The administration then announced the deadline had been extended to Nov. 1 and that the fund would be expended as much as possible on projects which would give the greatest employment at the smallest material expense.

To further the made work theory the President announced that there would be no additional appropriation for roads and grade crossing elimination. The original appropriation of 400 millions was to stand.

The President took advantage of a provision in the works relief act to sidetrack the congressional earmarking. The provision gave him the power to reduce any earmarked appropriation by 20 per cent of the 4 billion dollar appropriation.

Curtail Secondary Phase.

The decision did not halt the secondary road phase of the program although it was seriously curtailed. At present $213,399,618 has been allocated for the building of farm to market roads, to which states will add $25,239,199 to bring the total to $238,638,817.

In the last few weeks reports have been frequent that the road and grade crossing elimination program is to be cut still further if not wiped out entirely. The President could kill the program under the previously employed provision of the act.

Meanwhile, the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture which is in charge of the 400 million dollar fund is making plans to spend the money. Road officials, well aware of the rumors, say the program may be killed, but they will continue to go along as though they were sure of the fund in case the reports are groundless.

May Change Policy.

Even though the reports are true, the officials said, the administration may change its mind. It has done so frequently during the development of the works relief program and in the general conduct of government.

Thus, the motorist who was promised more than 1 billion dollars of new roads by the end of 1936 now can hope for only more than 600 millions and may get only 213 millions in federal money.

And the motorists will have to pay as much taxes as they would have paid had the original plan been carried out because the motorists will dig into their pockets for the boondoggling. There is to be no letup on motor taxes.

No Letup in Taxes.

During the year the administration continued the nuisance taxes which bit heavily into the motorists' income. Observers say there is little hope for the reduction of these taxes against the mounting of the deficit and believe that the nuisance taxes will be continued by the next session of congress for at least another year.

Although the President is known to be anxious to avoid the levying of new taxes, motorists cannot be sure that circumstances will not bring a general upping of the taxes levied directly and indirectly against them.

The motorists can take some small consolation from the fact that the works relief program had not been set at 8 billion dollars. Such proposals were advanced at the last session of congress and may be offered to continue boondoggling when the present fund is exhausted.

Each Motorist Pays $14.

In automobile, federal gasoline, oil, tire and tube, accessory, and truck taxes motorists paid $300,000,000 into the treasury in the fiscal year which ended last June 30. On the basis of 25 million motor vehicles in the country each motorist paid about $14 to the government during the year. This payment is exclusive of state and municipal taxes on which motorists are estimated to have paid about $1,250,000,000 to bring the yearly average for each motorist to $48.

Red Arrows Put at Bad Bend on 25 Near Elgin

Red reflex arrows have been placed by the state highway department at a sudden bend in Illinois route 25 near Elgin. The turn, immediately south of the St. Charles Country club, comes just after an interurban railway crossing and has been a cause of confusion to motorists.

CONTENDS AUTO FEE CUTS WON'T REDUCE REVENUE

Small Cars' Power Is Increased.

BY SI. MAYER.

[President, Automobile Club of Illinois.]

Reduction in the state motor license fees effective Jan. 1 will not cause a decrease from the previous high in revenue derived from that source. This not only applies to 1936 but to future years as well.

This fact was stressed in the aggressive campaign which resulted in the reduction of motor vehicle license fees by the last general assembly.

Our contention during the automobile tax reduction campaign was that motor vehicle owners are being discriminated against in the matter of taxation; that there is no longer need of such exorbitant imposts; that diversions of the automobile funds are unjust and impose an unfair burden on car owners. We still contend that further reductions are in order.

Scale Reductions.

The reductions in motor vehicle license fees effective Jan. 1 will scale as follows: $25 license cut to $22; $20 license to $17; $12 license to $10.50, and $8 license to $6.50.

In computing revenue from automobile taxes for 1936, consideration must be given to the fact that because of increased horse power in the smaller car field there will be substantial increases in income from that source. Incidentally with business conditions improving and car sales on the increase there will be marked gains from the gasoline tax, estimated conservatively at a million dollars more that year than ever before.

For the year 1935 the state will receive from motor vehicle license fees approximately $17,750,000 and from the gasoline tax a total of $32,000,000 with refunds and allowances yielding a net of more than $30,000,000.

Federal Aid Boosts Total.

Added to these incomes are $5,150,000 in federal aid and from the federal government works program $13,200,000 for new roads and $10,000,000 for grade crossing separations. The combined total for all items in 1935, therefore, will aggregate to $76,400,000.

Note the numerous diversions from the gasoline tax fund which have occurred during the administration of Gov. Horner. These diversions in the last three years show the staggering total of $76,654,256.46 dispersed as follows:

$20,000,000 for relief in 1932.
$30,000,000 for relief in 1934.
$6,654,256.46 for the state school funds in 1935.

Every dollar itemized in these diversions was contributed by car owners for the building of our road system.

Safety Pledge Proposed in Indiana to Cut Accidents

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—An attack on the trafic casualty list has been launched in Indiana by Floyd McMurray, state superintendent of public instruction. Appealing to two million parents and more than 23,000 teachers to help cut the number of automobile accidents, responsible for eleven of every twelve violent deaths in Indiana, Superintendent McMurray mailed to all schools a proposed safety pledge for car operators and a set of safety rules for drivers and pedestrians. More than 700,000 pupils disseminated these.

CHEVROLET SPORT SEDAN

Chevrolet is entering the 1936 market with two lines, the Master and the Standard, both with hydraulic brakes and both with engines of increased horsepower.

Style changes in the Master are moderate; the radiator grille is higher and narrower and there is a new treatment of hood louvres. The Standard, the lower priced line, has been redesigned fairly completely, more closely resembling the companion models than in previous years. Spoke type pressed steel wheels are used.

Horsepower has been stepped up by increasing the compression ratio. With changes in the combustion chamber, fuel economy is said to have been improved.

The Standard has a new chassis, described as a box girder, a type that has been used on costly European automobiles. The wheelbase is two inches longer and the overall length is 12 to 13 inches longer.

In changing to hydraulic brakes, Chevrolet has adopted this principle of actuation to its own design of mechanism within the drums. A master hydraulic cylinder furnishes equalized forces to the four wheels. The hand brake actuates both service shoes in both rear wheels by means of a cable connection.

BRIGHTER COLOR FEATURES AUTO SALON IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A trend to brighter color was noticeable in the annual French Automobile Salon, according to Philip H. Chase, color specialist of the Duco color advisory service. The French Automobile Salon is the first of the large showings by manufacturers this fall.

Mr. Chase reports that black, which was in favor through the depression, accounted for about 20 per cent of the cars in the salon. The other 80 per cent are in lighter colors, with blue being the most popular. Gray is next, and this is followed by yellowish shades, maroon, green, beige, red, and brown.

There has been an increase in gun metal effects, and about fifteen cars are finished in aluminum or bronze effects.

TIRE CHAIN ADJUSTMENT.

Loose tire chains beat themselves to pieces on the pavement. Chains too tight cause excessive tire wear.

CHRYSLER CALLS AMERICA A LAND OF PERFORMANCE

BY WALTER P. CHRYSLER.

[Chairman, Chrysler Corporation.]

WALTER P. CHRYSLER.

People used to call America the land of promise. I like to think of it also as the land of performance. Men who do things always find opportunity here, men of courage and vision, men who refuse to worry about the future but take it into their own hands.

I have found faith in the common sense, the ability, the industry and the initiative of the American people. I believe these qualities in addition to our material resources will enable us to make wholesome as well as more lasting progress.

The natural trade forces that make this country truly great appear to be reasserting themselves. Business has come back a long way since 1932. And the momentum built up during the last few years seems to be pushing us on toward more nearly normal activity.

People Regaining Faith.

What is more important perhaps is that people have begun to realize that this country has great recuperative powers and to act accordingly. The automobile industry this year has given tangible evidence of a trend toward more active buying than we have had at any other time in the recent past. For several years the industry has been putting itself in a position to supply the needs of better times.

The motor car industry during the last four or five years has made extensive improvements in its manufacturing facilities; its research activities have not only been continued but expanded, and the result in public appreciation of the quality and price of its products has been very gratifying.

I believe the public's response to the new automobiles for 1936 will fully justify the industry's belief that the market for cars and trucks next year will be better than in recent years.

"New Year" Two Months Early.

The next year for automobiles, of course, begins this time two months earlier than heretofore. This in itself is a significant development, because it is part of the industry's effort to bring about steadier employment throughout most of the year.

The public I believe is interested in the success of this movement, but entirely apart from that matter, the new automobiles themselves will certainly justify the public's immediate interest in them regardless of the season of the year.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

FOR ELEVATED HIGHWAYS.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—As a man who doesn't own an automobile, I have never taken any personal interest in The Tribune's long advocacy for elevated highways. It has seemed to me like a big community expense that would benefit motorists only, and I'll never drive a car because I was crippled in the war.

Yesterday, however, I was hit by an automobile in Madison street. It was in the morning rush hour and the driver was hurrying to work and I was hurrying to catch a street car. Fortunately, no bones were broken. I was merely bruised.

These bruises taught me that elevated highways are as important to nonowners as to car owners. With facilities for fast driving, isolated from pedestrians, the surface streets can be reserved for local trafic safe to mingle with persons afoot.

SPEED COP.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Our motorcycle policemen don't know everything there is to know about their business. Or they are plain vicious.

I was driving pretty fast, maybe too fast, in Western avenue the other day and saw a cop sitting on his wheel about a block ahead. I slowed up to pass him and held the speedometer at 35 miles an hour. He started his machine and overtook me in two blocks.

He testified in court that I was doing 42 miles an hour. Of course he had to do 42 to overtake me, but I was really only doing 35 while he was after me. There was no use to argue with a policeman nor with a judge. I paid a fine.

SEE TRIB TOUR BUREAU.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—My husband and I are leaving in a couple of weeks to drive to Florida. In other years he has taken the shortest route and driven like mad to see how quickly he could make the trip. Last winter you wrote some stories about interesting places to see en route. Would you mind telling me about those places so we can enjoy them?

NOISES.

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 12.—I don't feel as sorry as you seem to about the disturbed sleep of farmers and millionaires with country estates. The Tribune roadster has gone to a lot of trouble to attack the trucks that ply the highways of the metropolitan area at night with inadequate engine exhausts and grinding gears. Why don't you do the same job for us city dwellers?

I live in Ridge avenue, a thoroughfare, near a stop and go light that merely flickers a warning between midnight and dawn. There's a breed of passenger car driver who thinks these caution signals call for a long blast of the horn rather than for reduced speed. Can't you get them arrested? At least take their license numbers and expose them.

N. O. P.

CAR WATCHERS.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—I've followed with interest and appreciation your successful campaigns to reduce the state license fee, to repeal of the 45 miles an hour speed limit, to disruption of speed traps, and to bring about many incidental refinements in trafic regulations, but I wasn't ready to stand up and cheer until you opened your guns against these young hoodlums and incipient hoodlums who ask for 25 cents to watch your car while you attend some sporting event.

RAYMOND D. GUSDORF.

WINTER BUYING.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—There are two sides to this question of whether to buy a new car in the fall or in the spring. You'll publish the arguments in favor of winter buying because that is the desire of your advertisers at the moment. I'll be surprised if the arguments against winter buying get into print.

The cold months take the heaviest toll in depreciation of a car's paint and of its engine. The slush of snow is hard on the body finish. Starting, with imperfect lubrication due to low temperatures, hurts the engine.

The other side of the picture is that in winter a good mechanical condition is indispensable for satisfactory performance. Old cars are difficult to start. Cracked insulation stalls motors in snowstorms. A blowout of a worn tiire is a disaster in zero weather.

So the question of whether to buy in the fall or in the spring evolves into an answer that the fall is the better if you can afford winter's depreciation.

JOHN S. TALMOND.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Do you really believe that licensing the drivers will reduce accidents? It seems to me that the dangerous car operators are men and women skilled and intelligent enough to pass any examination. They know the laws and the rules of the road. They just lack ordinary courtesy.

When it becomes a social stigma to be arrested for a trafic offense, when men and women become as polite behind the wheels of their automobiles as they are in their offices or in their homes, then there will be a reduction in accidents. You can't license courtesy.

MARY RUSH MERLE.

Here's a Safety Tip on How to Pass Up a Slow Driver

The safe driver stays a comfortable distance behind a large, slow moving vehicle which he intends to overtake and pass when the way is clear. This enables him to gain speed in this space and reduce the time and distance necessary to complete the passing and get back into the right hand trafic lane.

CURRENT MODELS A MILESTONE IN PROGRESS: SLOAN

BY ALFRED P. SLOAN JR.

[President, General Motors Corp.]

ALFRED P. SLOAN JR.

The 1936 models represent another milestone in American mechanical progress. We do not claim they are the best that can ever be produced; improvements will continue from year to year. But the 1936 automobiles are presented with the sincere conviction that these cars are better than any that have gone before them, safer, more comfortable, more reliable, more attractive and more economical to operate and to maintain.

As an important interested group the industry recognizes its responsibility on the safety question as a whole and is anxious to coöperate and assist on the other two vital phases of the problem—the education of the driver and the correction of faults in the roads themselves.

Struggle to Keep Place.

The development of the automobile has been so amazingly rapid that it has been difficult to keep pace with the many problems that have arisen. Some can remember that period of twenty to thirty years ago when the whole problem was the construction of a car that would run at all.

Soon the automobile was developed to the extent that it was reasonably reliable, but by that time the public was beginning to demand more than mere reliability. Buyers wanted a car that would go faster, that could climb hills without difficulty, and that would accelerate smoothly.

That trend has continued. The public demands rapid transportation by automobile just as it demands rapid transportation by railroad and by airplane. And it wants safety.

"Best looking car on the street, sir! And they all say it's as good as it looks."

Already, the whole town is saying . . .

"This year it's HUDSON"

EARLY crowds at the Auto Show are passing along the word: "This Year, It's Hudson."

Call it style, call it beauty, call it class . . . the words don't matter. The news is out that Hudson delivers, for 1936, the biggest package of automobile surprises that Automobile Show crowds have ever seen . . . put up in the smartest wrapping of fresh, new style. The biggest cars ever priced so low!

First-day show visitors discovered to their delight that these bigger, longer 120 or 127-inch wheelbase Hudsons have more room—20% more room—than any other popular cars. They reveled in new-found elbow room, leg room, head room.

Already, it is "Our new Hudson" to thousands of 1936 car buyers who have seen, have compared, have become proud owners.

Heads have turned . . . and first glances have recognized that here is the real leader of the style parade. And crowds gathered as they learned about 5 things you never saw before—in Hudsons that are completely new for 1936!

Radial Safety Control, a wholly new easy-riding principle that makes driving safer, steering safer and stopping safer. Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes . . . double-safe stopping with a separate safety braking system, always in reserve, that takes hold automatically in emergencies. The Rhythmic Ride that has built smooth roads right into the chassis. Tru-Line Steering. And the Automatic Draft Eliminator.

Come to the automobile show—and join the crowds around the new Hudson. Compare the value. Then—drive a Hudson.

ELEVATED TYPE OF HIGHWAY FOR CHICAGO URGED

Greater Volume of Trafic Soon Predicted.

BY ALD. JOHN A. MASSEN,
[Chairman Committee on Trafic and Public Safety.]

Aggressive efforts have been made for several years now to accomplish the construction of limited ways of the elevated type for the accomodation of some of the major trafic flows in the Chicago region, but, thus far, not a single one has been built. As a result there are, perhaps, many who have come to feel that the construction of improvements of this type is no longer to be expected.

The volume of trafic which moves on the streets and other public ways of Chicago is very great. It is probably greater than the volume of vehicular trafic in all of the remainder of Illinois.

Even in these days of depression this trafic develops intense congestion and hazards resulting in a shocking total of trafic fatalities and accidents. The rising tide of trafic that will come with the return to normalcy is certain to produce far more congestion and much greater hazards.

Millions of dollars were spent in the widening of Ashland avenue, Western avenue, Cicero avenue, South Park avenue, La Salle street, and other thoroughfares. These streets can, of course, accomodate larger volumes of trafic as a result of these widenings, but, unfortunately, the widenings have produced hazards which are reflected in decided increases in trafic fatalities and injuries.

We must, therefore, count limited ways among those improvements which are essential to the continued growth and progress of Chicago. Lack of funds for their construction may temporarily defer them, but they are, fortunately, among the things which are inevitable.

D. S. EDDINS CITES HUGE EXPANSION IN AUTO INDUSTRY

BY D. S. EDDINS.
[President, Plymouth Motor Corp.]

D. S. EDDINS.

Many expenditures of the automobile industry are convincing evidence of its confidence in 1936. Millions were spent in plant expansions and improvements to build the models on display at the motor show and more millions will be spent in production this fall and winter.

Allied industries, benefiting from this receipt of motor money, likewise are building. Rubber and textile industries are modernizing their plants.

A recent survey in Detroit shows the extent of this expansion in the motor city. While there were 83 vacant factory buildings on Detroit railroad sidings last year, there are only 24 at present. There were 300 unoccupied plants at one time during the depression. Forty-two new factories were built during the first eight months of this year.

EGG IS COOKED ON BOWL OF ICE IN DE SOTO SHOW

In the De Soto exhibit at the automobile show this week, a lecturer breaks an egg into a skillet. The pan is resting on a bowl of cracked ice inside a circle of wires. The egg is fried, without melting the ice, by means of induction electricity. The stunt dramatizes a manufacturing method employed to bake paint on sheet metal parts.

De Soto engineers, in their "House of Wonder" at the International amphitheater, also operate a stroboscope. It's a mercury arc lamp that makes moving objects appear to stand still. In automobile plants, it is used to study crankshafts, pistons, valves, and other parts while the engine is in operation.

MANUFACTURERS PUSH CAMPAIGN TO SLASH AUTO ACCIDENT TOLL

BY C. L. MCCUEN.
[President, Oldsmobile.]

C. L. McCUEN.

Motoring safety probably never has been as much in the public mind as it is today. Manufacturer, dealer, civic authorities, the motorist himself — all have constantly in mind the reduction of accidents.

Motoring never can be completely safeguarded so long as there is the human equation. But by taking every possible safety precaution the manufacturer can lessen the seriousness of accidents and reduce their number. The manufacturer is doing his part. No one is more anxious than he to bring about safe and sane driving. Let's take a glance at what he is doing as his contribution to safety.

First, knowing the high speeds at which modern cars are driven, manufacturers are equipping their products with more powerful and dependable braking systems, to insure quick, positive stops. Second, they are building strong bodies and tops. Safety glass is receiving recognition as an essential safety factor. And, third, they are making the modern car more easy to control in an emergency.

RAPID EVOLUTION OF AUTOS MAKES INDUSTRY UNIQUE

One of the truly remarkable manifestations of American business is the ceaseless endeavor with which the automobile industry improves the cars it puts before the public at succeeding automobile shows.

K. T. KELLER.

No other major industry expends so much time and effort in research, makes such large investments in production means and is so ready to improve its handiwork.

Conditions would not be as they are had automobile men ever been satisfied with their achievements. During the whole evolution of the car from the horseless carriage to the air glide marvels we now see at the automobile show, improvement has been expressed in terms of beauty, speed, comfort, dependability, safety and economy—at a rate and with a persistence for which history has no parallel.

Safety Patrol Boys Aid Schoolmates on Roadside

Besides their work on intersections in cities, towns, and villages, school safety patrol boys travel with school buses. It is their duty to leap out when the buses stop on the highways to pick up or let out children, and, standing by the door, to direct their schoolmates to and from the roadside.

Two Million Cars in U. S. More Than 10 Years Old

More than 8,200,000 automobiles in use in the United States are seven years old, or older, and 2,300,000 of them have passed their tenth birthday.

ELEVATED ROADS URGED TO REDUCE AUTO DEATH TOLL

Cross Trafic Cause of Many Crashes.

BY CHARLES M. HAYES.
[President, Chicago Motor Club.]

Day by day the hands of the Massacre clock published in THE TRIBUNE record the march of injury and death, impressing upon the minds of readers the futility of half-way measures in dealing with the most serious personal security problem faced by a people since the days when the "black death" stalked across the face of Europe.

The caption under the clock tells us that more than 98 per cent of these accidents are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway. This statement is substantiated by a breakdown of the record of 16,875 Chicago trafic accidents last year in which 986 persons were killed and 19,724 persons were injured.

Many Pedestrians Hurt.

Pedestrians among these victims totaled 8,936. There are no pedestrians on elevated highways. There were 5,591 victims of collisions—head-on smash-ups, cross trafic crashes, and wrecks happening as a car was entering or leaving a curb space.

Head-on collisions betwen automobiles can't happen where opposing streams are physically separated; with no cross-trafic there can't be any cross-trafic crashes; wit no parking on an elevated highway this common type of accident is eliminated.

Automobiles cracked up with street cars for 469 casualties during the twelve months. Bicycles were tangled with motor cars to tally 316 victims. Railroads sent 33 persons to hospitals or morgues. Motor cars collided with horse-drawn vehicles to add 77 names to the toll.

Several Causes Removed.

Of course there would be no street cars, bicycles, railroad trains, or horses on an elevated highway. It is thus with all of the common causes of trafic deaths and injuries.

The construction of one elevated highway wouldn't eliminate 98 per cent of the city's trafic toll. But it would eliminate virtually all accidents in that portion of the city's trafic accommodated by the facility.

With a comprehensive system of elevated highways, it is calculated from engineering studies that 70 per cent of the city's car-miles of travel would be removed from the surface streets. This would eliminate 68.6 per cent of the city's trafic toll.

CHICAGO IS URGED TO BUILD 'LIMITED WAY' HIGHWAYS

BY DR. MILLER McCLINTOCK.
[Harvard University Trafic Research Bureau.]

If THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE should announce some morning that, due to a startling new invention, the city of Chicago would be permanently relieved of trafic congestion and accidents upon all of its major streets, there would be general rejoicing.

This rejoicing would not be without cause, because accidents resulted in the death of 986 residents of Chicago last year and the injury of 19,724 persons. Congestion costs many millions of dollars in economic losses.

Unfortunately, there is no magic by which the trafic problem can be solved. On the other hand, engineering skill has afforded a simple, positive, permanent and economical answer. This is through the application of the limited way principle of major highway construction as developed by the trafic and safety committee of the Chicago city council.

A limited way is simply a well designed bridge over trafic congestion and hazards. The accident cannot take place for the reason that the conflicting elements cannot come together.

Chicago has already some very good partial examples of limited way type of construction. Every viaduct, such as the Roosevelt road viaduct, is a type of limited way. The outer drives are good examples in many elements.

How could Chicago's daily trafic north and south move without these outer drives? They have brought all lake shore districts much closer to the loop and have brought them there much more safely.

But what about other parts of the city—the northwest, the west, and the southwest sides. Every portion of the city should have similar efficient and safe facilities. These can be supplied and at a per mile cost of only a fraction of that required for outer drives, or even of street widenings, if the city-wide limited way plan is developed.

By this means the [illegible] of trafic accidents will be automatically and permanently eliminated and congestion on major routes will vanish. Drivers will be able to go from any part of Chicago to any other part of it at speeds equal to those on the open highway and under far safer conditions.

Passing on Curve Adds to Dangers by 21-Fold

A trafic accident study shows that if a driver passes another car on a curve, his chances of having an accident are multiplied by twenty-one.

FORD V-8 COUPE

The 1936 Fords incorporate refinements in appearance and in mechanical design but no radical changes from the 1935 models. The company this week is exhibiting an extensive line of passenger cars, trucks, and commercial cars at the automobile show in addition to engineering displays.

The 85 horse power V8 engine, of which more than 2,000,000 are in operation, is unaltered except for reduced tolerances in its production. The steering effort has been lessened 25 per cent by the use of needle bearings and a higher gear ratio.

The spoke wheels have been replaced by one-piece electrically welded discs that reduce the unsprung weight of the car 20 pounds. In the transmission, helical gears now furnish quiet operation in first and in reverse as well as in second and third speeds. The shift lever now has a shorter movement.

In appearance, the main change is in the front end treatment. The hood is longer, curving down over the radiator to meet the new grille with its vertical slots and a more accentuated "V." Horns are recessed in fender aprons.

The passenger cars are available in thirteen body types, ten with de luxe equipment.

GREATEST ENGINEERING ADVANCE IN 10 YEARS The sensational, new motor in the Nash "400" is based on a new discovery in engineering. All manifolds sealed inside the block! So simplified that it has 509 fewer parts! Uses less gas and oil than the smallest cars!

WHY YOU CAN STOP IT QUICKER THAN ANY CAR EVER BUILT! The New Nash "400" has great big super-hydraulic brakes—larger in relation to car weight than in any other car at any price! They give you quicker stops without swerving . . . cut down relining bills.

WHY IT'S THE HARDEST CAR IN THE WORLD TO TIP OVER! The Nash "400" is lower . . . with a wider rear tread in relation to height and length than other cars. Remember, 126% more auto fatalities happen on curves than from all other causes combined!

WORLD'S FIRST COMPLETE SEAMLESS ALL-STEEL BODY The Nash "400" has a seamless, one-piece, all-steel top, steel floor and steel body with girder-steel frame. It's a big, six-passenger car . . . with more headroom and wider seats than in expensive cars!

A big, luxurious SUPER-SAFETY car built for today's high-speed traffic!

For the first time in years, the BIG NEWS of the Auto Show is a motor . . . the amazing new kind of motor in the new Nash "400"! A motor based on a new engineering discovery! A motor so simplified that it has 509 fewer parts! A motor so powerful, so smooth, so effortless that we're offering $10,000 in Cash Prizes just to find words that will even describe it!

But that's only part of the story. This new engine has been built into a car that will give thousands of car owners an entirely new conception of a low-priced automobile!

The new Nash "400" is a big, luxurious, SUPER-SAFETY car—built for today's mile-a-minute traffic. It's much lower—and has a wider rear tread in relation to height and length than other cars—because 126% more auto fatalities happen on curves than from all other causes combined!

It has the world's first seamless, all-steel body with girder-steel frame, steel roof, steel floor! And BIG SUPER-HYDRAULIC BRAKES—larger in relation to car weight than in any other car at any price!

Yet it costs little more to own and even less to run than the smallest cars!

See the new Nash "400" at the Auto Show or at any Nash-LaFayette showroom. Ride in it. Then tell us what words you think would describe its marvelous new motor! It's easy to do. Anyone can win one of the prizes! The Nash Motors Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

OKLAHOMA CITY PARKING METERS PROVE SUCCESS

Survey Shows Public Now Favors System.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Slot machine parking has worked in Oklahoma City.

There was much derision and no few howls of protest when the parking meter made its debut here last July. These meters probably would never have been installed in the first place had it not been for the political influence and argumentative ability of Carl C. Magee, inventor and former fiery newspaper editor, and the convincing arguments of City Manager Orval Mosier, who was "sold" on their effectiveness from the start.

Attorneys threatened to file suits. Two of the three newspapers clamored editorially against them. The public laughed some and complained some.

One Suit Filed, but Fails.

But all of that was last summer. The suits have never gained any headway. One was filed and failed. There has been no further test.

The complaining newspapers have changed their editorial stand with an admission that the machines are a distinct benefit.

And the public? The derision and complaints are mostly gone and a recent survey, made by a city employé, showed a vast majority of merchants and parkers alike favorable to the meters.

In operation the machines are simple. One merely drops in a nickel, turns a switch, and a flag shows containing a dial announcing the 60-minute or 30-minute parking limit. When that flag is showing, the policeman on the beat knows the car is parked legally. When it is down he knows it is not parked legally. The law makes either failing to deposit the nickel or parking overtime a violation.

Advantages Are Listed.

Its principal advantages are larger parking spaces and the near certainty that on short trips to stores or banks there will be parking space available.

Merchants find the machines profitable because they cut down "loafing" parkers and reduce overparking to a minimum, insuring a constant turnover of patrons. Even parking lot owners find the machines a benefit because on long shopping trips or jaunts to the theater no one can run the risk of overparking and the meter zones are of too short duration.

The city has found them profitable. A check since they have been put in shows an income of $5,476.69, or an average of about 48 cents per meter per day. They are not in use on Sunday or at nights. The reason for the odd cent income, explains the city auditor, is that some try in vain to cheat by putting in pennies. That only increases city revenue.

Proof that the council likes them may be seen in the fact that the city put in 174 at the outset last summer and has recently authorized the installation of 300 more.

BUYERS SEEKING BETTER CLASS OF CAR, SAYS FOY

BY BYRON C. FOY.

[President, De Soto Motor Corp.]

BYRON C. FOY.

The sales of automobiles that offer additional luxury, performance and safety have been increasing in the last twelve months. Indications are that the swing to the better vehicles will continue.

In 1934 the market for new cars, frozen for nearly three years, began to thaw. The lowest priced automobiles were the first to feel this buying. Transportation at the lowest possible cost was the demand.

With a return of confidence in business conditions, the average man and woman are looking for something better than bare necessities. The better cars are now in demand.

7,000,000 AUTOS TO PASS OLD AGE LIMIT NEXT YEAR

BY H. G. MOOCK.

[Vice President, Plymouth Motor Corp.]

HARRY G. MOOCK.

Almost a third of the passenger cars in America are passing the old age limit for safe and economic transportation. A recent survey shows there are 7,000,000 automobiles in this country that are seven years old or older. The average life of a motor car is estimated at eight years.

This means there is a potential replacement market for 1936 of at least 7,000,000 units. Not all of these superannuated machines will be replaced, but there is reason to believe that the sales next year will exceed the highly satisfactory total of approximately 3,500,000 for 1935.

The 1936 models, with their improvements in style and performance, have plenty of features to encourage sales.

CROSSING AGAINST RED LIGHT.

Both motorists and pedestrians contribute to street intersection hazards. A recent trafic study showed that 30 per cent of the pedestrians crossed against the red light.

PARKING, 5 CENTS AN HOUR

For 5 cents in the slot machine the young woman can park here for one hour. At the end of sixty minutes the machine will raise a metal flag to signal a policeman. That's the Oklahoma City system.

PACKARD CHIEF TELLS AIMS OF FALL AUTO SHOW

Hope of "Leveling" Jobs Inspires Change.

BY ALVAN MACAULEY.

[President, Packard Motor Car Co.]

ALVAN MACAULEY.

The automobile industry is announcing new models in the fall this year in an experimental effort to level employment in the nation's largest manufacturing activity. For more than a third of a century the motor shows were held shortly after the first of the year in anticipation of heavy spring buying.

Whether November, instead of January, is the better time for the national shows remains to be seen. In any event, the industry is solidly behind the experiment. If it is successful, hundreds of thousands of American workmen will benefit through steadier employment.

The automobile industry and its associated industries are sometimes estimated to furnish all or partial sustenance to a tenth of America's gainfully employed. If the introduction of new models in the fall increases sales through the winter it should result in economic benefits for the country as a whole.

The question of leveling employment is one which has been given much study by the industry and no little thought by the federal government. At the request of President Roosevelt a comprehensive survey was made of the entire situation. This, with the intensive study by the industry, led up to the new plan, instituted by the industry itself with whole-hearted presidential approval.

AUTOMOBILE NOW A NECESSITY IN FIELD OF SPORTS

Handling Game Trafic a Special Art.

BY ARCH WARD.

[Sports Editor.]

The automobile fits into the sports picture as naturally as a top hat and white tie go on Fred Astaire. A big football game, a world's series, a Kentucky Derby, a jaunt to a golf club, or a long fishing trip usually means more work for the old family bus.

The widespread use of the automobile in reaching sport events has made necessary the development of a special technique in handling crowds. The problems involved in directing ordinary Sunday motorists are simple compared to the task of managing the trafic at a world's series, for instance.

There's a Difference.

Sunday motorists have many different objectives in view, and just before a jam becomes critical some may turn off to the north and others to the south. But in the case of the recent world series thousands of motorists converged on Wrigley field. And to make matters worse these baseball minded drivers left the park at just about the time the evening rush was moving northward from the loop.

But 450 policemen had been detailed to handle the crowds, and the regulations regarding Lake Shore drive trafic had been revised to fit the occasion. So 46,000 people, many of whom depended on automobiles for their transportation, entered and left the vicinity of Wrigley field with a minimum of inconvenience.

During the Football Season.

The automobile gets a particularly heavy workout during the football season. Such college towns as Champaign, Lafayette, South Bend, Madison, and Bloomington are within an easy Saturday morning's drive from Chicago.

When a major contest is staged at a place such as Soldiers' field, in Chicago, the stream of cars bound for the stadium merges with the normal trafic. Then is when the police, the sports public, and the general motoring public are called upon for real coöperation to keep things moving smoothly.

The drivers who gather at important sports events usually show better manners than the typical Sunday motorists. They come expecting trafic jams and consequently seem more tolerant of delays. This is particularly true of the Kentucky Derby crowd on the way back to the center of Louisville after the race.

Essential to the Golfers.

The automobile is practically a necessity to the enthusiastic golfers of the Chicago district. Most of the park courses are overcrowded on Sundays and holidays. So the outlying courses get a big play from those who have the means of reaching them. Comparatively few of these links are convenient to good transportation by bus or train, but all are easily reached by automobile.

Fishermen and hunters were among the first sportsmen to take advantage of the motor car. It opened up a region of fields and woods and streams that otherwise would have remained inaccessible to many of them.

POLICE MAKE TOURISTS PARK.

At times during the height of the tourist season police of Hallstatt, a village in the Austrian Alps dating from Roman days, stop all motorists at the community's limits and have them park their cars there. Tourists desirous of exploring the narrow streets must go on foot.

DODGE 2 DOOR

Advancements without radical changes mark the 1936 Dodge in styling and in engineering. The line includes seven body types—four door sedan, four door touring sedan, two door sedan, two door touring sedan, coupe, coupe with rumble seat, and convertible coupe.

Spring suspension has been modified for more riding comfort. The front leaves are shackled at the forward ends rather than at the rear. A new steering assembly has been perfected to remove road shocks from the control wheel.

The 87 horse power engine now has a water jacket extending around the full length of the cylinders. In combination with spray cooling of exhaust valves, this insures increased efficiency in sustained high speed driving or in excessively hot weather.

Brakes are hydraulic. The headlights have a "passing beam," an adjustment that permits illumination of the right shoulder of the road at the same time shades the lights from the eyes of an approaching driver.

Children Riding in Cars Subject to Certain Rules

Drivers should not allow small children to stand up against the windshield, sit upon their laps, or move about in a moving car. Under such conditions, attention of the driver is too likely to be distracted. The driver's vision may be obstructed. If a sudden stop is necessary, the child is almost certain to be thrown against the windshield or the back of the front seat, as the case may be.

Pedestrian Collides with Auto; Pays $7.50 Damages

A Florida pedestrian was forced to pay $7.50 for damage to an automobile in one of the most unusual trafic cases on record. The case had its beginning when a pedestrian carelessly started across the street without looking and bumped into the side of a passing sedan. The pedestrian sued the motorist for $500 damages. The driver filed a counter claim for $7.50, on account of a fender that was bent. The motorist was awarded judgment.

INDUSTRY POISED TO DRIVE AHEAD, SAYS CURTICE

BY HARLOW H. CURTICE.

[President, Buick Motor Co.]

HARLOW H. CURTICE.

American industry as a whole is today in a better position to go forward than at any time in the past decade. In the last year, it has poured literally hundreds of millions of dollars into changing and improving its production facilities and its products.

Business and industry are consolidating gains made since the bottom of the depression in 1932. Plants have been reëquipped, products have been improved, and methods of distribution have been bettered. Fences have been mended and the ground work laid for further advance.

American business has every reason to be optimistic concerning the outlook for the coming year, having reached such satisfactory levels during 1935. From all quarters comes undeniable evidence that a good measure of recovery has been attained during the past year. It is reasonable to expect that the forward strides already accomplished are only the beginning of a climb to greater heights.

More people are engaged in private enterprise, pay rolls are bigger, and pay rates are higher than they were a year ago, individual incomes are larger and there seem to be more confidence and optimism at this time than at any period since recovery set in.

There is little question that we began our real upward climb three years ago. Since then the record has been one of steady, if somewhat slow progress.

The change in sentiment to one of confidence and optimism is particularly evident today.

TOP VALUE FOR 1936

TERRAPLANE

the ONE low priced car that's REALLY NEW

THERE'S a new headliner at the Automobile Show. It's Terraplane—the one completely new car for 1936 in the low price field.

Every buyer can step UP now into fine car size, beauty and performance—yet stay thrifty as ever in first cost and upkeep cost.

Terraplane doesn't stop with completely new styling. It's completely new in roominess and luxury, too! With new features even the most expensive cars can't give you.

A revolutionary new principle, Radial Safety Control makes possible the world's first safety engineered chassis. When you're riding you're safer. When you're steering you're safer. When you're stopping you're safer. Safest cars on today's highways.

Safety rides with you, too, in America's first bodies all of steel with their roofs of seamless steel . . . the strongest, safest bodies ever built.

Along with extra power to go—there's double-safe stopping with Terraplane's new-type Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes. Big, powerful hydraulics with a separate safety braking system that takes hold automatically in emergencies. And, for easier shifting and safer stopping, that great advancement, the Electric Hand, is again available at slight extra cost.

You needn't skimp on size—not with Terraplane one-fifth bigger inside than cars at double its price. Extra leg room, elbow room, shoulder room. And a longer wheelbase . . . full 115 inches.

In performance, Terraplane ranks with the finest. And has the official records to prove it! Full 88 or 100 horsepower—with the fine-car smoothness and flexibility found only in Hudson-built motors.

See the new Terraplane at the show—side by side with cars costing hundreds of dollars more. That is the way to judge style, size, luxury. Then drive it—and compare performance, safety, all-around value.

894 MILES ADDED IN '35 TO STATE'S SURFACED ROADS

Crossings, Bridges and Grading Augmented.

BY ERNST LIEBERMAN.
[Chief Engineer, Illinois Highway Dept.]

As nearly as can be determined, the 1935 construction program will add 894 miles of surfaced roads to the Illinois highway system. Of this total 458 miles represents construction directly by the state, while 436 miles will have been constructed by the counties and municipalities under the supervision of the state.

In addition to the surfaced roads, the state division of highways will have completed a total of 144 miles of heavy grading, 68 large bridges, and 37 railroad grade separations during 1935. The counties and cities will have completed 98 miles of grading and 65 bridges.

Early 1936 Program.

Thus far there has been programmed for 1936 construction by the state 134 miles of pavement, 37 miles of bituminous surfacing, 134 miles of gravel, or crushed stone surfacing, 577 miles of heavy grading work, 128 large bridges, and 95 railroad grade separations. Practically all of this work is to be financed in whole or in part by federal funds allotted to the state.

The work programmed for construction by the state in the Chicago area during 1936 includes 61 miles of pavement, 7 miles of bituminous surfacing, 11 miles of heavy grading, 4 bridges and 24 railroad grade separations. Some of the more important projects are:

Cermak road—From Crawford avenue in Chicago west through Cicero, Berwyn, and North Riverside—4.23 miles pavement.

Stony Island avenue extension—95th street to 130th street in Chicago, including subways at the C. W. I. and N. Y. C. and St. L. railroads—4.81 miles pavement.

Cicero avenue—From 112th street to 159th street, including bridge over Calumet Sag channel—4.57 miles pavement widening.

Lincoln highway—From Cicero avenue east to Indiana state line—9.15 miles pavement widening.

Rand road—From Euclid avenue to Lake county line—6.70 miles four lane pavement.

Viaduct across C. B. & Q. railroad on Ogden avenue near Cicero avenue in Chicago.

Augusta boulevard—Subway under C. M. St. P. and P. railroad near Grand avenue in Chicago.

147th street—Viaduct across C. and E. I. railroad at Dolton.

Expect Bigger Programs.

There is at the present time no definite information concerning the programs of the counties and cities for construction under state jurisdiction in 1936. However, it is expected that the county and city programs should be about 25 per cent larger than in 1935.

VISITORS LURED TO NEW TRUCKS BY ADDED BEAUTY

BY J. D. BURKE.
[Director of Truck Sales, Dodge.]

J. D. BURKE.

More automobile show visitors this year than ever before are saying, "Let's go and see the trucks, too!" And those who miss the displays of commercial cars and trucks will be passing up one of the most interesting, perhaps the most impressive, feature of these annual exhibits of the automotive industry.

There was a time—and not so many years ago, either—when the motor show exhibits were planned almost exclusively for the comparatively few who at that time had a direct concern with commercial transportation. The products themselves and their displays held appeal only for the technically minded—whose concerns were horse power, pay loads, and operating costs. And, naturally, they were virtually the only visitors to these exhibits.

But what a difference today! The light, speedy commercial car and, in their way, the intermediary sizes and kinds of trucks right up to and including even the mighty airflow "monarchs of the highway" have "gone Ritzy," become "high-hat," or, in better English, become things of beauty.

SAFETY IS GOAL OF CAR BUILDERS SAYS NASH HEAD

BY E. H. McCARTHY.
[President, Nash Motors Co.]

E. H. McCARTY.

The Nash Motors company heartily indorses the many campaigns to reduce the driving hazards of the highways that are now under way both within and outside the industry. Within the industry we are building better brakes, stronger bodies, and easier control into the vehicles. Top speeds are no longer stressed because almost any modern automobile can be driven faster than it can be operated safely by the average driver.

THE ROAD HOG

Here's a common type of road hog, the driver who stops his car on a cross walk. Note that the women, to pass the car, are forced to walk around the front of the machine in the path of any trafic that might be approaching from their rear. The scene is at Broadway and Sheridan road.

DON'T TINKER WITH SPEEDOMETER.
Do not touch the speedometer head. A special form of calibrating equipment is required, which is used almost exclusively by speedometer specialists.

WARM ENGINES SLOWLY.
Cold motors should be warmed up carefully. It is not unusual to burn out a bearing or two during cold weather by racing a cold motor.

WARNS AUTOISTS OF STATE'S NEW MOTORING CODE

BY J. H. BRAUN.
[General Counsel Chicago Motor Club.]

Counterparts of those shiny models at the automobile show will be subject to the new trafic code as soon as they roll on to Illinois pavements. Yet, many of their drivers will have only hazy ideas of code provisions.

Some have thought that since the 45 mile an hour speed limit in the open country has been abolished, the legislation was designed to lift restrictions. Others, considering the reckless driving clauses, have believed that trafic laws were tightened.

Since the slightest offense against the code has become a misdemeanor and is punishable by a jail sentence or a fine, or both, drivers might do well to acquaint themselves with its provisions. Among other things, it provides that motorists shall keep equipment in good working order. Brakes, for example, must be able to stop a car traveling 20 miles an hour within 30 feet. Lights must work—two in front and one in the rear.

Hand signals have been standardized. To indicate that he is going to turn left, a motorist should extend hand and arm horizontally from the window. To indicate a right turn, he should extend hand and arm upward. To indicate that he is slowing or about to stop, he should extend hand and arm downward.

Hitch hiking has been curbed under the clause forbidding a person to stand in the roadway to solicit a ride from the driver of a private vehicle.

The question of speed remains. Although there is no specified limit outside of corporate limits, a motorist can be arrested for speeding when driving "at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard for the trafic and use of the way." If the court believes the driver's conduct reckless, the motorist may be punished by imprisonment.

It should be clear, then, that a speed of less than 45 miles an hour in the open country might lead to arrest if conditions made it dangerous—for example, if cattle were crossing the road or other trafic created a hazard.

In cities the prima facie speed limit has been raised to 20 miles an hour in business sections, 25 miles an hour in residential districts, and 35 miles an hour in suburban areas.

OLDSMOBILE 8

The 1936 Oldsmobiles, both the six and the eight, are at reduced prices but with a list of improvements that substantiates an advertising slogan, "the car that has everything."

Knee action, hydraulic brakes, and solid steel top are retained from last year. The general outward appearance likewise has merely been refined. Safety glass is standard equipment throughout.

The two engines develop 90 and 100 horsepower, respectively. Pistons are of aluminum alloy. Spark adjustments are automatic. The carburetor has been redesigned to prevent percolation, to eliminate hard starting in hot weather.

In the front end treatment the lamps are mounted high. The hood extends foreward all the way to the grille. Eye shaped louvres blend into the harmony of line that characterized the 1935 Oldsmobile.

Driver Hitting Light Pole Must Notify Its Owner

When a motorist runs into a fixture on an Illinois highway, such as a light pole, sign, or signal, he must notify the owner or agency responsible for this property, giving his name and address and the license number of his car.

HOW TO JUDGE A CAR TO MEET SPECIAL NEEDS

BY WILLIAM E. HOLLER.
[Vice President, Chevrolet Motor Co.]

W. E. HOLLER.

Wise buying consists of carefully considering in advance just what one's needs are—and then arriving at a compromise on qualities that conflict. Performance must balanced with economy, speed with durability and comfort, beauty with practicability, size with first cost and upkeep, luxury with price, and so on. Once you decide on your requirements it is then wise buying to decide which of the cars within your limits of price best fulfills your needs. And just as every car has some particular outstanding feature and as it is not feasible for every car to possess everything, your purchase should be the car that has the most of the features and qualities you think essential.

M'NUTT TELLS INDIANA WORK ON HIGHWAYS

Eastern Gateway to Chicago Is Improved.

BY PAUL V. M'NUTT.
[Governor of Indiana.]

Indiana, as the cradle of the automobile industry and as the proving ground for the advancement and improvement of gasoline motors, is deeply interested in the 36th annual Chicago automobile show.

It was in Indiana that Elwood Haynes developed the first automobile, and it is at our own speedway that for many years the 500 mile Memorial day race has been the testing ground for improvements in the automotive industry.

The Hoosier state has given many notable names to the automobile industry and has played its part from the days of the first Haynes automobile, in the development of the modern streamlined automobile of today. Such men as Louis and Gaston Chevrolet, Fred Duesenberg, and many others have made, and are a part of automobile history.

Indiana Among Leaders.

With the growth of the industry has come the development of hard-surfaced highways and the expansion of state highway systems. I am proud to report that Indiana's highway system takes its place well in the forefront of the states in the country in this regard.

Northern Indiana, and particularly Lake county, is the gateway to Chicago for trafic from the east and southeast.

Anticipating the heavy trafic of Indiana's trunk lines to the Chicago World's Fair, our state highway commission laid its plans to effect improvements which would more readily handle the enormous increase in trafic. I am happy to say that great improvements have been accomplished.

Underpass a Hazard.

One hazard was the narrow underpass on Roads 12 and 20 in the east part of Gary. This has been widened to take care not only of present trafic, but for that which will come in the future. Fourth Avenue was widened and paved from Washington to Fillmore, and a narrow bottleneck thereby eliminated. A connecting link was built from the industrial highway to 141st street in East Chicago, thereby making it possible to use the wide stretches of Columbus avenue.

A very dangerous trafic situation has been eliminated by the construction of a grade separation on U. S. 12 over Kennedy avenue at the west end of 141st street viaduct. In Gary the highway commission rebuilt the deteriorated portion of 5th avenue west of Gary on Road 20, thereby making a wide route from Gary to East Chicago. A further improvement was the widening and paving of Indianapolis boulevard at its southern extremity, through East Chicago and Whiting to the connecting junction at Five Points. On U. S. 41 through Hammond, the highway commission constructed new pavement and resurfaced portions of the highway from U. S. 6 to Hoffman street, north of the Grand Calumet river, making a wide and thoroughly modern highway of U. S. 41 through Hammond.

Make Improvements at Gary.

On U. S. 6, between Gary and Hammond, the final gap in that pavement was constructed, making it a forty foot pavement from Gary to Hammond, with new structures over the Hart ditch and the E. J. and E. railroad. Work is progressing on an overhead crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad at 4th avenue in Gary, paving of the car tracks area on 5th avenue from Broadway to the Pennsylvania railroad, and the widening of Industrial highway from the Pennsylvania crossing in Gary to the new pavement at Cline avenue.

Plans are complete for a separated crossing of the railroads at Highland on U. S. 6, and for the construction of a divided lane and thoroughly modern highway on U. S. 30 from its junction with U. S. 41 to the Porter county line.

What has been done in the Calumet region and that which is now assured, provides highly desirable entrances into Chicago from the Hoosier state.

DESCRIBES 1936 AUTO MODELS AS 'BALANCED' CARS

BY NICHOLAS DREYSTADT.
[General Manager, Cadillac Motor Car Co.]

NICHOLAS DREYSTADT.

Sir Malcolm Campbell's giant Blue Bird automobile will go 300 miles an hour, but it's not an automobile to offer the public market. It is not comfortable nor safe nor economical. This illustrates what is meant when it is said that the 1936 models are balanced cars. They have not sacrificed other qualities for the advantage of excellence in any one quality.

Perhaps the most comfortable car that could be designed would be too heavy for speed and economy. The most economical car would be too light for comfort and too weak in horse power for speed or acceleration.

The automotive engineers for 1936 have struck a happy medium, producing a better motor car than predecessors in a compromise combination of all desirable qualities.

Autos Passing on Curves and Hills Kill 470 in Year

Failure to heed perhaps the simplest of all trafic rules—not to pass on hills or curves where vision is limited—in the last year killed 470 persons and injured 10,330 others.

HUGE RETURNS PAID MICHIGAN BY ADVERTISING

Summer Visitors Spend $300,000,000.

BY FRANK D. FITZGERALD.
[Governor of Michigan.]

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—One of Michigan's best paying investments is the tourist and resort industry. In actual return to the state, I do not believe that any appropriation made by the legislature can show such a better return than the $100,000 a year provided for advertising the state as a summer playground.

The return is around 5,000 per cent, according to statistics of the resort associations. From the $300,000,000 that the summer visitors spend in Michigan the state has an immediate return of $5,000,000 in taxes. An estimate shows that $900,000 is paid in gas tax, $3,500,000 in sales tax, and the balance in fees for foreign fishing licenses, fares on state ferries, and liquor taxes.

Resort Property Valuable.

But this does not tell the entire story by any means. This resort business of ours helps to run our schools and municipal governments. A survey conducted in one small community on the western side of the state showed that within its village limits there was $83,000 assessed valuation of improved property that is strictly resort, bringing into the village and township treasuries more than $2,300 a year in taxes.

In another community the resort property constituted 87½ per cent of the valuation of the township. Other townships show 83⅓ per cent of the valuation in resort property, 65 per cent, 60 per cent, and 56 per cent. One county in the northern part of the state shows 27 per cent of the entire county's valuation in resort property.

Money Allotted Yearly.

Quick to see the value of the advertising appropriation, the legislature has continued its appropriation each year since 1929. The tremendous increase in Michigan's tourist and resort industry proves the wisdom of the legislature in making this appropriation and in setting up a nonpolitical machinery for its administration.

HUDSON CONVERTIBLE

Five engineering developments are announced by Hudson for its restyled 1936 sixes and eights.

The front end spring, axle and steering assembly has been redesigned for better shock absorption and better directional control. The ventilation system introduces a filter port at the bottom of the body near the rear axle for admission of air to compensate for the exit of air through shielded windows. A mechanical braking system supplements hydraulic control.

Both the six and the eight are entirely different in appearance from their predecessors. The sloping radiator grille is of a new design. V-type windshields blend with sweeping contour lines.

Trafic Law Violators Benefit from Schools

Trafic schools for violators according to a recently completed survey, have proved meritorious in various parts of the country. They are in operation in Berkeley, Los Angeles, Oakland, Piedmont, San Francisco; Tracy, Cal.; Wichita, Kas.; Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and Portland. Juvenile offenders and adults who have been indifferent to a fine are said to have benefited by the operation of such schools. Results were good in those instances where the court found that a fine would constitute a hardship.

RALSTON CITES IMPROVEMENT ON SAFETY DESIGN

BY D. E. RALSTON.
[Vice President, Oldsmobile.]

D. E. RALSTON.

Balanced engineering—that favorite study of the automotive engineer—will be more than ever in evidence in the automobiles of 1936.

Balanced engineering means a development of each feature of an automobile in proportion to its importance to the car as a whole. It means a gradual perfection of mechanical device and beauty of design, blending into a finished car which will give the owner the utmost in value.

There are four principal considerations in the designing of an automobile. They are safety, economy, comfort and performance. Paramount in importance is safety. No car can boast of balanced engineering without every proven safety device. Each car must be turned out to give the greatest possible protection to passengers.

In recent years great strides have been taken by manufacturers in recognition of their responsibilities to the public. Bodies are now built of steel; brakes have been developed so that a swift, smooth stop is assured. Particular attention is paid to ease of steering. Devices have been invented to keep cars from swerving while rounding curves at high speed. Manufacturers have urged all owners to have periodic inspections of their cars to test brakes, headlamps, steering, tires, and windshield wipers.

1936 TERRAPLANE

The 1936 Terraplane, dressed up in an original radiator grille and streamline styling, is a bigger automobile than its 1935 predecessor. Three inches was added to the wheelbase while the tread at the rear was raised from 56 to 57½ inches.

This lower priced brother of the Hudson has the same mechanical innovations—a combination mechanical and hydraulic brakes, a new front end assembly of springs and axle to improve roadability and steering, and a novel ventilating system that includes an air intake through a filter in the floor near the rear axle.

Keep Feet Off Clutch and Brake in a Skid

Keep your feet off the brake and clutch pedals if you find your car in a skid. As you release the accelerator, the braking power of your slowing motor is your safeguard. Meanwhile, you can steer your way out of the skid by bringing your front wheels into line with those in the back.

BURNED BRAKER POINTS.

If the ignition breaker points burn away rapidly, it may be a sign that the condenser is defective.

Overheating Often Caused by Bad Radiator Hose

Overheating of the motor often is caused by improper circulation of the water in the cooling system. This condition frequently is traceable to the radiator hose, which may appear sound from the outside but often deteriorates on the inside, blocking the flow of water.

Four New Parking Lots Ready Soon in Preserve

Four new parking lots in the forest preserves are being prepared by relief workers. They are scheduled for completion by Thanksgiving.

FORD TO PUT OUT HIS 1,000,000TH '35 CAR THIS MONTH

BY W. K. EDMUNDS.
[Chicago Branch Manager, Ford Motor Co.]

W. K. EDMUNDS.

By the end of this month, Mr. Henry Ford will have realized his production prediction of a million cars for 1935. The outlook for 1936 is good. Economic conditions have improved greatly throughout the nation. Statistics show greater farm income, insuring better business in the vast agricultural area where thousands of persons are interested in the purchase of all sorts of commodities.

Factory activity has increased and wage disbursements have doubled. With industrial workers and farmers entering a period of greater prosperity, the favorable reaction in cities and towns is a matter of course.

The automobile industry is convinced that these conditions will continue to grow better through 1936 and is backing up its confidence with vast expenditures for plant improvements.

How Motorists Can Aid Highway Beautification

By confining their patronage to roadside establishments that make a definite effort to present an attractive appearance, motorists of the nation can speed up the movement for beautification of the nation's highways.

AGAIN THE PRIZE FOR Beauty GOES TO Pontiac!

AMERICA has seen them all! Compared them for grace and sweep of line; for all that pleases the eye in a motor car. And it's America's verdict again this year: "Pontiac—the most beautiful thing on wheels!" And why not? What car but Pontiac offers the distinctive styling of the famous Silver Streak—refined, improved and made more than ever a thing of distinguished beauty? What car but Pontiac stands out among the commonplace and conventional designs of the day—giving its owner the happy satisfaction of being one in a million rather than one of a million?

Yes—again the prize for beauty goes to Pontiac! And wisely has America chosen—for the 1936 Pontiac is even better than it looks!

Here is a big, full weight low-priced car offering improved performance—greater safety—increased economy—faster starting—greater handling ease—even longer life and lower upkeep costs. Just a 10-minute ride and you'll decide you can't do better than a Pontiac for 1936!

CITY MOTORISTS AWAIT FINISH OF OUTER LINK

Bridge to Near Completion in 18 Months.

BY HUGH E. YOUNG.
[Chief Engineer, Chicago Plan Commission.]

Construction on the outer link bridge made excellent progress until it had to be suspended early in 1932 because of a collapse in the municipal bond market. Now, however, work has been resumed, and it may be expected that in about 18 months this important lake front highway will be nearing completion.

At least 40,000 motorists have long awaited this short cut in their daily trip between the north and south sides of our city. As time goes on this direct park connection can absorb additional trafic amounting to several times the initial volume.

Extension Plan Tentative.

Plans for carrying the improvement on north of Ohio street are tentative. The accompanying drawing is presented merely to show the possibilities. This study, together with others, will be submitted to Chairman A. A. Sprague of the Chicago Plan commission by the technical staf when all features have been carefully examined and estimates of cost made.

This study shows the outer drive extended north of Ohio street on a strip of made land 350 feet wide, that extends to Oak street and covers an area of water which the war department relinquished to the commissioners of Lincoln park in 1931. North of Oak street the drive sweeps around the Oak street beach area to a connection with the Beach drive beyond North avenue.

Three new grade separations are shown in the study, located respectively at Grand avenue, Chicago avenue and North avenue. An improvement of the character illustrated here would not only have the express highway feature, but would also result in a decided benefit to adjacent property by removing the dense flow of trafic away from the buildings and thereby greatly minimizing gas fumes and noise.

New Beach Contemplated.

The project contemplates a new beach at North avenue in a location that will give it good transportation access, ample park approach, and sufficient area for beach buildings.

An attractive North avenue beach would automatically solve the Oak street beach problem.

ILLINOIS TRAINS HIGHWAY FIELD MEN IN FIRST AID

BY H. H. HARRISON.
[Trafic Engineer, Illinois Highway Dept.]

All field employés of the Illinois division of highways henceforth are to be given instructions which will enable them to lend valuable first aid to victims of trafic accidents, and already 2,100 highway department employés have completed a standard 15 hour course of training.

Accidents resulting in injury and death of motorists and pedestrians happen daily on the streets and highways in Illinois. In 1934 there were 2,575 fatalities in Illinois, a terrible toll that has slightly abated this year on the basis of comparative figures up to the present.

Accident prevention work, carried on by many agencies in the state, having its effect, but it does not extend far enough, in the belief of highway officials. Few realize the general lack of knowledge in what first aid treatment should be given the injured.

With this in mind the Illinois division of highways determined upon the training of all field employés in first aid methods. This plan was thought to be more practical of operation for the highway department than the idea of establishing first aid stations along the more heavily traveled trunk line highways. The latter plan has been advocated by some agencies engaged in highway safety work.

With the coöperation of the department of mines and minerals, a standard 15 hour course of training has just been completed for more than 2,100 highway department employés. The manual of the United States bureau of mines was used as the text book for this course.

HOLDS 1936 CAR EVIDENCE OF A BETTER OUTLOOK

BY J. E. FIELDS.
[President, Chrysler Sales Corp.]

J. E. FIELDS.

We Americans are people who appreciate and work for the good things of life. The United States has been the great land of opportunity because its standards of living were higher. And, in 1935, there has been evidenced on every hand a public desire to return to sensible luxury; to get more out of life.

The motor car industry, therefore, in addition to an improved performance has placed a definite accent on luxury. By luxury I do not mean gadgets, extravagence or ostentation. I mean the luxuries of superior performance, the luxury of longer, roomier, more sleek exteriors, the luxury of fine interior trim and equipment.

It is every day evident that the public not only wants to but is ready to get away from the bare necessities of transportation and enjoy a higher standard of living. This is evidenced on the railroads, in the ever-growing demand for air-conditioned cars. It is evidenced in the steadily improving facilities of the air transport lines. It is evidenced in the goods sold over the counters of department stores, and most assuredly, it is apparent in the 1936 cars.

Wisconsin Improves Highways in Resort District of North

BY DEE INGOLD.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin highway commission this year was content to improve northern Wisconsin tourist roads rather than develop new highways leading from the southern border of the state into resort areas.

By applying a new type of bituminous surfacing to the dusty roads of the north the commission found a satisfactory method of holding the dust to the roadbeds and creating at the same time a lasting road surface which, according to members of the commission, has drawn praise from tourists.

The more expensive bituminous road covering will provide next spring's early spring tourists with satisfactory highways leading to northern resort sections soon after the snow has disappeared.

Arteries Developed.

With the exception of this broad improvement of heavily traveled "tourist roads," 1935 achievements of the state highway commission were confined to paving, rerouting and otherwise developing sections of main arteries in the south-central and southeastern portion of the state.

One of the major developments in the Milwaukee area was a relocation and grading of nearly nine miles on the route to Chicago to connect with a new Illinois location of U. S. 41. About four and a half miles of this highway in Racine county were paved. The commission proposes to pave all of this strip to the state line next year.

Continue Pedestrian Work.

Throughout the 1935 construction season the commission continued a new form of project developed during the previous year. The new projects are construction of bituminous and concrete footpaths along heavily traveled highways, especially in Milwaukee county. They are designed chiefly as a medium of keeping pedestrians off highways, permitting autoists to travel faster, and reducing the number of accidents involving pedestrians.

Two major projects were completed in Milwaukee county. One was reconstruction of Milwaukee street from Detroit street to Kilbourn avenue. The other was reconstruction of North Port Washington road from Capitol drive to Hampton avenue.

White Pines State Park Sets Record in Chicagoans

Dixon, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The White Pines state park, north of here, is ending a season that entertained more Chicago visitors than ever before in its history. This 315 acre reservation is one of the most southerly tracts of virgin white pine in the midwest.

Thieves Reap Profits Through Open Windows

Thieves take hundreds of thousands of dollars annually from motorists' cars, often because drivers fail to close all windows before leaving their machines. Unguarded automobiles on streets in business areas offer an opportunity for the sneak-thief.

1936 PONTIAC

The horsepower of the 1936 Pontiac eight has been stepped up from 84 to 87 with a consequent increase in acceleration, in hill climbing ability, and in top speed. Hydraulic brakes now have the more expensive cast iron drums and molded linings. Automatic choke, automatic throttle opener, new intake manifold, and new combustion chamber are improvements in both the six and the de luxe engines.

Retained with some modification is the radiator and hood grille that distinguished the 1935 Pontiacs. Fenders are more deeply crowned but there is no radical change in style. Refinements have been made in interior fittings, including an entirely new instrument panel.

WISCONSIN HAILS TOURIST TRADE'S REVIVAL IN 1935

Resorts Report Amazing Gain in Business.

BY THORNTON L. SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16.—The tourist industry in Wisconsin enjoyed an amazing comeback this year.

Although there was no official checking, the best available surveys of resorts indicate that 1935 returns from travelers reached nearly the $140,000,000 high of 1931. The tourist trade makes the entertainment of visitors rank among the most profitable industries in the state.

Resort Owners Get Even.

Two previous lean years left many resort owners in the red. Most of them got even this year. There also was an increased movement in sales of resort real estate for permanent camps. Many Chicagoans took advantage of the low prices of northern Wisconsin lands to obtain their own homes for future visits.

Fishing this year was the best in five years, and constant improvement has recognized the importance of the tourist industry by appropriating $50,000 in its last session to advertise the state's recreational facilities.

Both the roads and fishing have been improved. The state legislature is expected, due to intensive stocking of lakes and streams. The experience of past years has enabled the commission to improve its skill in fish planting and the percentage of baby fish that survive to maturity.

Rich in Forest Land.

Wisconsin has now 1,810,000 acres of state and county forest land pledged to public use. Under no circumstances can this land ever be posted against trespass. There are 14 state parks in addition to county and federal parks. The state parks comprise 11,000 acres. They are spotted about the state to invite visitors to points of more than ordinary scenic attractiveness.

The state parks have new buildings, constant fresh water supplies, and improved parking facilities. There are also four new roadside parks to provide facilities for overnight camping, as well as for roadside lunching. Each is in a wooded site, provided with good water, and boast fireplaces and firewood for tourists.

TREND TOWARD MORE LUXURIOUS CARS HELD SIGN

BY WILLIAM R. TRACY.
[Vice President, Hudson Motor Car Co.]

W. R. TRACY.

As we return to normal in business, Americans return to their normal habits and one of these is our time honored characteristic of "keeping up with the Joneses." Expressed in other terms this is "pride of ownership." In the automobile business it means greater dollar volume as people chose the larger, more powerful and luxurious cars.

The innate love of the finer things in life has been one of the American characteristics that has contributed to the properity of this nation. Nothing reflects the prosperity of the individual so much as his home and his car. This tendency towards the purchase of better cars is one of the healthiest signs we have in America today and if the present trend continues, as far as the automobile industry is concerned, conditions will reach normal in 1936.

With 1936 cars designed to satisfy the growing pride of ownership as well as the pocketbook of the buyer, we are really geared to public demand. The industry is looking forward to a profitable year.

NASH OFFICIAL PREDICTS RISE IN 1936 AUTO SALES

BY C. H. BLISS.
[Vice President, Nash Motors Company.]

C. H. BLISS.

With the public in a buying frame of mind, and with automobiles capable of demonstrating their value under actual driving conditions, sales for 1936 should be greatly increased.

The engineers for the 1936 motor cars have done a splendid job. There have been improvements in economy, safety, comfort, appearance, and performance. These are honestly and unmistakably advanced automobiles.

• • •

These well publicized contributions to motoring have whetted the public's desire to own a modern automobile and the public will not be slow in satisfying this desire.

PACKARD SHOWS MINIATURE CARS IN ACTION TESTS

A miniature proving ground with miniature automobiles being put through the tests is part of the display of the Packard Motor Car company at the motor show this week. It is said to be an exact replica of the company's proving grounds near Detroit. By means of telegraphic communication the work going on this week at the company's outdoor laboratory will be duplicated in miniature at the automobile show.

CHAINS TO KEEP JAYWALKERS OFF LONDON STREETS

Open Guardrails at Regular Crossings.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Jaywalkers are to be chained from the streets in the large towns in England, because it has been decided that in no other way can they be prevented from ignoring pedestrian crossings and stepping into busy trafic.

The ministry of transport officials have come to the conclusion that the next step which must be taken in their big new campaign against road deaths is to rail off the sidewalks of all busy streets. Legal experts have informed the ministry that it is impractical to enforce the use of pedestrian crossings by law. An exact legal definition is difficult to determine, and in any case, extra police would have to be employed to watch for offenders.

Open Rails at Crossings.

Belisha guardrails will be placed the entire length of each side of the street, and openings will be left at pedestrian crossings. There will be detachable chains at various points to enable shop keepers to load and unload their vehicles.

Experiments in various parts of London with the new system have proved highly successful, and the ministry of transport believes that a solution of one of its biggest problems is in sight.

Railed streets, it is hoped, will answer the criticism of motorists that pedestrians ignore the crossings, and cross busy streets haphazardly and regardless of the consequences. It is felt that the new system will help to reduce the number of accidents, for latest statistics show that thirty per cent of the fatal accidents this year have been caused by people stepping off the sidewalks into trafic.

Program Is Under Way.

Negotiations for the creation of hundreds of miles of railed streets are progressing satisfactorily with local authorities in London, and this fall will find them springing up in all parts of the metropolis. By degrees they will spread to the provinces until, it is hoped, their use is general throughout the country.

The cost of the scheme will be borne up to sixty per cent by the ministry, and the balance will be provided by local authorities according to negotiation.

Meanwhile, the system of trafic lights and crossings has spread throughout the country, and the ministry claims that, though still in the initial stage, they are producing the desired effect.

It is estimated by the ministry that by the end of this year road deaths will have been reduced by 1,000 compared with last year, and that the number of injuries in the last nine months has already been reduced by 10,000.

NASH TOURING

4 DOOR LA FAYETTE

From Kenosha, Wis., for the 1936 automobile market, comes a new La Fayette and three new series of Nashes, new in appearance as well as in performance.

The low priced La Fayette has increased horsepower, improved spring suspension, redistributed car weight, greater interior roominess, and hydraulic brakes. The Nash Motors company contends that this number has the largest body in its low price group. Floors, pillars, side panels, and top are all steel.

In the Nash group, ranging from a six to a luxurious eight, is a "400" model with a so-called monitor sealed motor. The outside of the engine is free from gadgets and miscellaneous fittings, including the manifolding. For this neat power plant, there are but two castings, the cylinder block and the cylinder head.

The hood length of the Ambassadors has been increased six inches. The radiator grille is chromium plated and the louvres are of airfoil design. Large tear drop head lamps and heavy bumpers contribute to the sturdy appearance.

CHICAGO EXHIBIT TESTS PUBLIC'S BUYING MOODS

Recent Trends Point to Active Sales.

BY GEORGE W. YOUNG.
[President, Chicago Association of Commerce.]

Chicago, where the farmer, the factory worker and the average citizen have made up the bulk of attendance, automobile show exhibitors have long enjoyed their best opportunity to sense public buying sentiment most accurately.

In Chicago, itself, all through 1935, each month has seen new car registrations topping in significant fashion the records of similar periods for the previous year. With the farmer happier, the industrialist busier, and the ordinary man on the street freed of much of the uncertainty that had previously curtailed his normal buying, there is every reason now for feeling that the motor exhibits will show even greater results in sales and attendance.

While its progress may not have been as rapid as we had hoped for, the great street rehabilitation plan made possible under the Works Progress administration is bound to bring real results. Hundreds of miles of our streets will be placed back in first class condition.

One motor car department which should show greater stimulus this year is that of the motor truck fleet operator. Increased business and freight shipments have found industry and commerce in many instances with sadly reduced or antiquated motor truck equipment. As a result, purchases of replacements and additions have been on the increase, adding their weight to the new balance in improved general business.

As in past years, the automobile show has attracted many thousands of out-of-town visitors to our city. And if we can judge the recent experience of trade expositions staged by other lines of industry the 1935 attendance figure will top all others since 1930.

What such an influx means to the prosperity of Chicago needs no explanation.

SKILL IN DRIVING KEY TO SAFETY, HOFFMAN CLAIMS

BY PAUL G. HOFFMAN.
[President, Studebaker Corporation.]

PAUL G. HOFFMAN.

During the spring, summer, and early fall of 1935 the American press has devoted considerable space to automobile accidents.

One newspaper, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, has been particularly aggressive in this work. This newspaper has printed several full pages of photographs of men, women, and children killed in motor accidents. It has pictured sufferers in hospitals. It has published editorials and has done heroic duty with public officials, urging them, coöperating with them in the work of reducing accidents. This has been a laudable and noteworthy work.

Although THE TRIBUNE has covered this subject quite thoroughly, there is one phase of it that may have been neglected. I have sought permission for a few inches of space in the annual automobile section to outline my views on this particular angle of automobile accidents.

Seek Improvements.

The request has been granted. Here are my ideas:

Men and women are inclined to take their driving casually and as a matter of course. Once they have learned the simple process of starting, steering, going forward, stopping and parking, they quit trying to learn. They just drive. Skill in driving is forgotten. There is no desire to make constant improvement. This is regrettable.

All automobiles are beautifully made today. They run better, handle better, ride better, and stop better than we would had dreamed possible twenty years ago. One would think the improvements in performance, steering, brakes and all of the other things that make driving enjoyable would whet the driver's appetite for more skill, for greater and better command of his vehicle.

But this is not so. We see men and women committing all sorts of errors any time we go on the boulevards.

Rarely in Trouble.

Let THE TRIBUNE conjure a device that will focus motorists' attentions on skill at the wheel. Let them hammer away on the subject. Let them stage driving contests. Let them print photographs of driving mistakes and of skilful maneuvers. If every man takes the same interest in his driving that he does in his golf game, we'll find our good automobiles are more carefully driven and fewer of them becoming involved in trouble.

"DODGE IS THE ONLY LOW-PRICED TRUCK I COULD AFFORD TO BUY" Says Harry Chaddick

Dodge 1½-ton chassis and cab, 6 cylinders, 149" w. b.—$825 (Fifth wheel and trailer equipment pictured, extra)*

I CHECKED GAS ECONOMY!

FULL LENGTH WATER JACKETS—The most modern type of engine construction! Cools cylinders their entire length. Saves gas and oil.

SPRAY-COOLED EXHAUST VALVE SEATS—"Spray-cooling" lengthens life of exhaust valves. Helps to reduce valve grinding.

VALVE SEAT INSERTS—of alloy steel. Won't pit or burn like ordinary engine block metal. Make valves seat better. Save gas . . . valve grinding.

I CHECKED UPKEEP!

FULL-FLOATING REAR AXLE—Dodge pioneered this fine truck feature in low-priced trucks. Saves repairs . . . cuts upkeep expense.

HYDRAULIC BRAKES—Genuine Dodge hydraulic brakes stay equalized. Stop quick. Save money on tires, brake relining and adjustments.

SAFETY-STEEL CAB—Among the three lowest-priced trucks, Dodge gives you the best type of cab. Safety-steel, welded construction.

"NOW I'M SAVING OVER $90 THIS YEAR IN GAS ALONE!"

HERE'S Mr. Chaddick's letter: "I had a show-down before I bought and Dodge is the only low-priced truck I could afford to buy. In comparing Dodge with the others, I checked gas economy and I checked upkeep and the way Dodge led simply astonished me. My comparative figures show that now I'm saving over $90 this year in gas alone."

What Mr. Chaddick says is repeated by thousands of shrewd truck buyers who compared Dodge feature by feature with the other lowest-priced trucks. Today there is no need to depend on claims or to buy a truck on mere habit. Anyone can take the simple, easy-to-understand Dodge show-down chart and compare values for himself. This chart is free at your Dodge dealer's. Learn how to get the most value for your truck dollars. Drop in and see your Dodge dealer or 'phone him today.

INDIANA PUSHES ROAD PROGRAM IN CHICAGO AREA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The Indiana state highway system is spending more than $5,000,000 in improvements in the Chicago area alone. Expenditures throughout the state are correspondingly great. However, Indiana is giving its sector of Chicagoland particular attention, as it realizes that this area is the gateway of the metropolis to the east.

As never before, motorists are finding it easier to approach Chicago via Indiana. This means definitly that the borders of Chicago have been pushed far into central and eastern Indiana. Many Indiana counties, their county seats and their villages, now are merely Chicago suburbs as far as transit facilities are concerned.

To its already extensive highway system in the Chicago area Indiana is adding this program: $2,418,000 of the federal works program being spent in grade separation construction; $1,662,000 of federal works program being spent in highway construction; $1,200,000 of federal aid program being spent in highway structure construction.

Here are some of the types of projects in the area:

A divided lane road on Lincoln highway across Lake county. This type of highway, providing two wide one way lanes separated by a landscaped parkway, eventually will be adopted as the model for all Indiana trunk highways.

The paving of road 43 from Westville to Michigan City.

The paving of road 52 from Indianapolis to Lebanon (the principal Chicago-Indianapolis route), widening to 30 feet.

Elimination of an annoying and dangerous bottle-neck on road 31 at South Bend.

Improvement of most express highway routes through cities, hitherto frequently unsatisfactory because of narrow streets or bad paving.

AUTO REGISTRATIONS IN ILLINOIS FOR TEN MONTHS ABOVE 1934

Passenger car registrations in Illinois for the first ten months of this year exceeded the entire passenger car registration for the full year of 1934 by 52,084 vehicles. The total number of passenger cars registered up to the close of business on Oct. 31 was 1,337,518, as compared with 1,285,434 cars registered during the full twelve months of last year. Truck registrations up to Oct. 31 were 189,496, as compared with 178,496 in all of 1934.

BUICK'S SALES HEAD SEES 20 PCT. PRODUCTION RISE

BY W. F. HUFSTADER.

[General Sales Manager, Buick Motor Co.]

Many sound observers, both within and without the automobile industry, foresee a future American prosperity that will rise to heights never reached before. The automobile industry will do its share to bring that about.

W. F. HUFSTADER.

A review of the record shows that the automobile trade has come a long way in the last three years. In 1935, it is estimated that close to 3,000,000 passenger cars will have been produced in the United States and Canada. This was a substantial increase over the previous year and exceeded early estimates, which in themselves were reasonably optimistic.

Concensus in the industry is that there will be about a 20 per cent increase in 1936 over 1935, which would mean a volume of more than 3,500,000 passenger cars. Truck production for 1935 is placed at 740,000. With a corresponding increase in this division, the total for 1936 would pass 4,000,000 units.

If this is accomplished, the automobile industry will indeed be back to prosperous levels and another long step in the direction of the much better days that are in store for it.

Five States Raise Total Gas Tax Bill $32,000,000

America's gasoline tax bill was raised $32,000,000 a year by increases in the rate enacted this year in five states. Eight states, including Illinois, reduced their registration fees.

GRAHAM SUPERCHARGER

The Graham-Paige Motors corporation is introducing a supercharger to the lower price field in one of its three 1936 cars. The manufacturer is also presenting something new in style—a band of body color sweeps vertically through the center of the radiator grille of the machine.

The advantage of a supercharger is that it produces more power per pound of engine weight. This is illustrated in the technical description of the engines in the three 1936 Grahams. All are six cylinder jobs.

CHOICE OF AUTO IS QUESTION OF PERSONAL TASTE

BY L. G. PEED.

[Sales Manager, De Soto Motor Corp.]

The 1936 models vie with one another for the public's beauty reward. The average motorist has found that satisfactory mechanical performance is inherent in any car that is being offered today by an established manufacturer. The choice, therefore, becomes more and more a matter of suiting individual preferences in appearance and appointments.

L. G. PEED.

Another style factor is the woman's vote.

NOW THAT YOU CAN SEE THEM ALL

—match Packard 120 against the field!

YOU who will buy new cars in 1936 are indeed fortunate.

No matter which price field you turn to, you will find excellent cars to choose from. There never was a time when the automobile buyer was offered so much for his money.

Yet Packard, a company that for 35 years has been known for conservative statement, today issues this sincere invitation . . . Match Packard 120 against the field.

We believe you owe it to yourself to make this comparison, regardless of the price of the car you are now contemplating.

It is good business. It is the only sure way to discover for yourself which of the year's many fine motor cars offers you the greatest dollar for dollar value.

AGAINST THE LOW-PRICE FIELD

If you doubt the wisdom of spending a little more for the Packard 120's more agile performance, immeasurably better ride, greater comfort and longer life—both style and mechanical—let the car itself dispel those doubts forever.

AGAINST THE MEDIUM-PRICE FIELD

If you think that all cars in the Packard 120's own price class are about equal, inspect the new Packard 120 and see what a difference 35 years of fine-car manufacturing experience makes.

AGAINST THE HIGHER-PRICE FIELD

If you think you need pay several hundred dollars more than the price of a Packard 120 to get truly fine-car safety and luxury, spend half an hour in the new Packard 120.

THIS—ONLY IN PACKARD

Packard builds every one of its cars with the expectation that its owner will want to keep it at least 5 years. You can do this not only because the car remains mechanically good, but because it remains in style. With its distinguished lines—lines accepted as smart the world around—Packard does not have to make obsoleting yearly style changes. That is why Packard is the one 1936 car on the roads today that you can recognize.

AND SO EASY TO BUY

The new Packard 120 is within the financial reach of almost everyone who will buy a new 1936 car. If your old car is of average value, it should cover the down payment on a new Packard 120. And Packard's Payment-out-of-Income Plan is one of the most liberal in the industry. Get the facts—then drive this great car.

CHIEF ROAD JOB OF STATE IS TO AID THE FARMER

BY CHARLES E. DE LEUW.

[Asst. Chief Engr., Illinois Highway Dept.]

More than 50,000 miles of rural roads in Illinois are today in substantially the same condition as during the civil war. The improvement of secondary and farm to market roads is not only the most important highway problem in Illinois, but is intimately related to the improvement of the economic condition of the farmer.

The term "secondary roads" has been more or less loosely applied to any rural highway not included in the state bond issue systems. As a matter of fact the term "secondary" should be applied to those roads which connect the several local centers of population or commerce throughout the state with each other or with the shipping points.

During the past few years there has been a great deal of discussion concerning farm to market roads. These roads extend from cities and villages or shipping points into the country, providing highway facilities for farmers.

The Primary Road System.

The primary road system of Illinois consists of trunk line highways connecting population centers inside and outside of the state, comprises slightly more than one tenth of the total of 97,000 miles of public roads in the state.

The county highway or state aid system of secondary roads, comprises slightly less than two tenths of the total mileage of public roads. These secondary roads are under the joint jurisdiction of the counties and the state division of highways. They have been developed rapidly of recent years so that now well over half of the mileage of these secondary roads has been improved with some satisfactory type of all weather surfacing.

It follows that approximately 70 per cent of all highways in the state are local or farm to market roads. Less than 17 per cent of the 70,000 miles of local or farm to market roads have been improved with gravel, stone, or other wearing surface.

Explains Situation.

This lamentable lack of development of farm to market roads may be in part attributable to inefficient administration of township and other local funds, but by and large is mainly the result of scarcity of surfacing materials in many large areas in the state.

During the past two years the state division of highways has conducted intensive studies of highway economics with a view to developing that type of roadway improvement best suited to carrying trafic of varying densities on not only primary but also secondary and farm to market roads. At the same time it has been engaged in extensive searches for suitable road materials. Much study and experimental work has also been carried on with a view to developing a satisfactory means of using clay or loam to be found everywhere as a substantial element of the all weather road surface.

MORE ILLEGAL PARKING

Diagonal parking is illegal in Chicago, but take a look at this curb of Madison street east of Austin boulevard.

PLACE PORTABLE WARNING SIGNALS IN SCHOOL AREAS

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Portable warning signs are being placed at nine school crossings to protect children. Mounted on movable standards by the city, they will be set in the middle of school intersections during hours when children are crossing, and stored in school buildings at other times.

AIRFLOW DE SOTO

De Soto for 1936 is continuing two lines, the Airflow and the more conservative Airstream—both with new refinements in style and in engineering.

The tear drop model is still tear dropped but with a new trellis of vertical chromium bars for a grille harmonizing with new louvres. The Airstream appearance shows more influence of streamline styling. Bodies are longer, lower, and roomier.

Both models employ an overdrive gear ratio. The device automatically shifts gears to reduce engine revolutions for higher touring paces. The cooling system of the engines has been improved and a new spark adjustment eliminates spark knock in accelerating the unusually high compression engines.

NEW CAR THRILL DRIVERS USED TO OLDER MODELS

BY A. W. L. GILPIN.

[Vice President, Pontiac Motor Co.]

A. W. L. GILPIN.

The drivers of cars three years old or older can have little appreciation for the full meaning of quick transportation consistent with safety, comfort, and economy. Improvements in automobiles since 1932 have been radical. The ingenuity of the engineers was tested to tempt purchasers during a tight market.

"I had no idea cars had been improved so much in the last two or three years." This is a typical expression heard from those taking their first ride in one of today's models.

PLYMOUTH HAS A GREAT NEW CAR at the Auto Show!

You'll Agree it's the Most Beautiful Low-Priced Car

THIS IS THE LARGEST, most beautiful and, in every way, the greatest Plymouth ever built. There are more than 40 new improvements . . . in safety, economy, comfort and performance . . . things that people want today.

Eleven new comfort features have been added to Plymouth's famed Floating Ride. A new sway-eliminator, and the twice-as-rigid frame, give even more riding smoothness than you'd expect in this big car.

The 1936 Safety-Steel body is newly reinforced at five main points. Plymouth's 100% hydraulic brakes stop you quickly and smoothly. Your family is safe in this car!

It is more rugged throughout . . . will stand up and stay quiet under more road punishment than even the great 1935 Plymouth could take. It costs you less to run.

All evidence indicates the new Plymouth will consistently do 18 to 24 miles per gallon of gasoline.

With new design steering there just isn't any trace of road-shock in the wheel . . . it makes the car easy to handle anywhere. With vibrationless Floating Power, Plymouth performance is a constant delight.

Be sure to see the 1936 Plymouth at the Auto Show.

MICHIGAN BUILDS NEW ROADS ON SHORES OF LAKES

Stimulates Tourist Trade with Highways.

By MURRAY D. VAN WAGONER
[Michigan State Highway Commissioner.]

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A well rounded program of state highway trunk line improvements in Michigan has been featured by the contribution of the state highway department to the promotion of this state's tourist industry.

Policies of the state highway administration take into consideration that Michigan is one of the leading industrial states in the country as well as an important agricultural section. They also take note of the rapid advance of the tourist industry which is crowding the manufacture of automobiles as the chief source of income for residence of Michigan.

1,624 Miles of Shoreline.

The Great Lakes fringe upon 1,624 miles of shoreline territory in this state. There are 5,000 inland lakes and streams. It is the policy of the state highway department to do its utmost to stimulate the tourist business through highway improvements.

Perhaps the most important phase of this highway tourist promotion has been the construction of shoreline routes. A shoreline route in this state is one that will give the motorist a view of the Great Lakes at least 50 per cent of the time he is driving along the route.

Michigan has just completed its construction program under the $6,452,000 Hayden-Cartwright grant of last year. Under this program $1,750,000 worth of shoreline projects were constructed.

$20,600,000 Road Program.

This state is now well in the midst of a new $20,600,000 highway relief program. Shoreline construction under this program is to be continued. In addition, plans have been submitted for the approval of Washington for the construction of $12,000,000 worth of shoreline and tourist relocation roads.

One of the most important shoreline propects is the socalled Huron Shore drive in the northeastern section of the lower peninsular. If the plans are approved, the entire route from Bay City to Cheboygan will be improved.

This program calls for considerable construction in the Upper Peninsula, which has often been labeled the "Forgotten Road Country of Michigan." Extensive improvements are proceeding on US-41 and US-2, the most important tourist arteries in that section of the state.

GENERAL MOTORS EXECUTIVE SEES HUGE '36 SALES

BY WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN.
[Executive Vice President, General Motors.]

W. S. KNUDSEN.

Next year's sales of motor cars should show the highest total since the 1928-'29 season. General business conditions are distinctly better than in recent years. The demand for automobiles continues strong.

The industry is contributing to employment stabilization through these earlier dates for the annual automobile shows. This should meet with public approval.

Every manufacturer is presenting his latest improvements in style and performance. Production is well under way.

We, in General Motors, have every confidence that business is going to improve steadily from now on. The impetus of the improvement of 1935 will carry forward and the still pent-up demand for motor cars insures good deliveries to retail buyers, and with that, steady employment in the industry and allied industries.

The depression years were hard years. Many suffered through no fault of their own, but, the will to work, the cheerfulness and patience of the American people, who have been the real victors over the depression, which from now on will be something to think less about.

BICYCLES CLASSED AS VEHICLES UNDER TRAFIC ORDINANCE

Bicycles are classed as vehicles in the Chicago trafic ordinance and are thereby required to obey all rules dealing with vehicular trafic. Cycling rules recommended are:

1. Obey all trafic laws, stop signs, and other trafic regulations.
2. Dismount and walk across congested or hazardous corners.
3. Ride close to the right hand edge of the pavement on city streets and rural highways.
4. When approaching motor trafic or pedestrians, give audible notice of approach with horn or bell, not siren or whistle.
5. After dark, carry a white light in front and at least a reflecting red tail light in the rear.
6. Signal for left turns and stops with left hand outstretched.
7. Do not try to squeeze into narrow spaces between two vehicles.
8. Do not hitch on other vehicles.
9. Do not race on crowded streets.
10. Do not carry another person on the handle bars or cross-bar of the bicycle.

Parents are advised to explain these rules to their children, together with the necessity for obedience to the standard regulations.

WINTER QUEEN

Michigan's summer resort area is bidding for winter tourist trade. Here is Miss Eleanor Buell, 1935 winter sports queen, of Petoskey, Mich.

MICHIGAN NOW A YEAR 'ROUND TOURIST LAND

Chicago Flocks There for Winter Sports.

BY H. J. GRAY.
[Secretary-Manager, West Michigan Tourist and Resort Association.]

West Michigan has just enjoyed the greatest tourist season it has had since 1929 and in many sections the most successful in its resort history.

There was a time when Labor day rang down the curtain on what the resort people called "the season," but west Michigan knows no season now. It has developed a year round program. The growing custom of late vacations has meant that this year many resorts have remained open through autumn.

Build to Meet Situation.

At least one unusual condition developed in western Michigan this year. The demand for cottages was in many sections far beyond the available supply. Anticipating an even greater demand next year many communities are building new summer homes this fall and winter in order to be prepared for next year's business.

Many of those city residents who own summer homes in the vacation paradise are planning to make winter use of them. Thanksgiving dinners and old fashioned Christmas, with Christmas trees cut in the woods and a yule log in the fireplace are on the program of many of the people who have previously made use of their second home only in the summer.

A Topsy of Sportsdom.

Michigan is swinging back to winter sports. The lull following the deer season just serves to whet the interest in the Petoskey winter sports carnival, which is rapidly becoming known as the Lake Placid of the middle west. Like Topsy, the winter sports carnival "just grew up."

It started in 1923 with a Washington's birthday celebration of skating, skiing, and snowshoe races, but is now a ten day affair, stretching out over two week-ends, which draws many Chicagoans among the 10,000 or more who attend. Hocky games, fancy skating, skiing, snowshoe races, bobsledding, and tobogganing, ruled over by a winter queen, make the event packed full of interest.

Cadillac, Traverse City and other communities are planning winter sports programs this year, with a hocky league and ice boating on the inland lakes helping to bring Michigan home to its year 'round residents and visitors as a winter wonderland.

ADEQUATE SPACE FOR CAR PARKING IS CITY PROBLEM

Full Use of Auto Depends on Facilities.

BY LESLIE J. SORENSON.
[City Trafic Engineer, City of Chicago.]

Our modern automobile can no longer be considered as merely an instrument of pleasure. It has become a value of necessity affecting every phase of our social and industrial life. The most radical change has come to our transportation system and today we find literally a nation on wheels.

Great effort has been exerted by our governmental agencies to keep pace with this phenomenal growth by provision of adequate facilities for movement. This attempt has taxed the limit of street and highway planning and maintenance authorities, and in the concentrated effort to keep pace with automobile production a most important part of the trafic problem has been relegated to private initiative without plan or coordination to the problem of mass transportation by individuals. This is the parking or terminal part of the trafic problem.

To be able to move with a fair degree of convenience and safety over our street and highway systems is in itself without social or economic value if we cannot consummate our objectives at our intended destinations. Each year brings larger demands for street facilities and each year proportionately equal demands for terminal or parking space.

High Charge Deters Motorist.

Private enterprise has afforded practically the only partial relief in metropolitan centers, but under the handicaps of economic returns on investments the necessary cost to the motorist has been and will continue to be an excessive charge and a deterrant to full use of the automobile.

Just as the facilities for moving trafic are social problems, so is the terminal and parking requirements of that moving trafic also a social problem and as such must be met by the same source. It is not intended that the garaging of an automobile at an owner's abode should be construed in the same category as the parking problem, for the former is purely an individual responsibility and relates to a vehicle not in use, while the latter refers to the stopping, standing, or parking of a car which is incident to its use and therefore an integral part of the trafic problem.

Chicago Acts on Problem.

Chicago is an outstanding example of the large cities of the country which has taken definite action to relieve the situation. The loop no-parking ordinance and similar regulations and time limit restrictions in every part of the city has relieved trafic congestion and increased accessability to business establishments.

Provision for off-street storage has been aided and encouraged by granting permission for parking lots and driveways thereto. The Chicago park district has made provisions for the parking of many thousands of cars adjacent to the great boulevard system of the city and at locations where the temporary storage of automobiles is best served.

1934 Automotive Business Put at Nearly 7 Billions

Four cars were produced and registered in the United States in 1895. Registrations last year totaled 24,690,789, the automotive business, including new cars, trucks, gasoline, oil, replacements, accessories, tires, equipment, and labor, constituted a $6,997,600,000 market.

Repair of Faulty Parts Called a Money Saver

Many cars are operated at an efficiency of about 50 per cent below normal. Owners would save money by having leaky ignition wires replaced, valves ground, carburetor adjusted, and many other inexpensive operations performed which increase efficiency and reduce wear.

THE 1936 FRONT DRIVE CORD

A radically different motor car, a new Cord, is presented by the Auburn Automobile company with its more conventional 1936 Auburn models. It's a front wheel drive job in a body style that has no precedent.

The headlamps when not in use retract into the fenders in covered recesses. The hood is in one piece, without radiator cap or ornamental substitute.

The most striking feature are Venetian type louvres, seven chrome edged fins, that extend horizontally completely around the front of the car, from front door to front door. The radiator, unlike the arrangement with a conventional grille, is entirely hidden.

From the long, low hood, the split windshield slants sharply at a 45 degree angle to blend aerodynamicly into a parabola that ends at the rear bumper. The manufacturer reports that wind tunnel tests establish this Cord as having the best streamlining, in a scientific sense, ever offered the public in a production automobile.

Due to architectural advantages peculiar to the front wheel drive assembly, the top of the car is no higher than the shoulders of an average man yet there is headroom inside for a silk hat. With no drive shaft extending to the rear, the floor boards are but 10⅝ inches from the ground. An unusually low center of gravity with normal road clearance is cited as a safety factor.

A Lycoming V-8 engine of 125 horsepower drives the car at a top speed of better than 95 miles an hour. The transmission, with four foreward speeds, is operated by remote control.

TRAFIC ENGINEER EXPLAINS VALUE OF 1-WAY STREET

Asserts It Evens the Flow of Trafic.

BY OTTO KOPP JELINEK.
[Trafic Engineer, Chicago Park District.]

We are so often asked, "Why one-way streets?" Our answer to that question is not one which takes a definite stand for the one-way street as a cure-all for all the ills of the trafic problem but a stand for modernizing the antiquated system of trafic regulation and for the principle of trafic segregation and channelization which the one-way system illustrates.

This principle was successfully illustrated in the two years of A Century of Progress in Chicago. However, further evidence of this principle working along actual trafic need and volume is now being illustrated in the three period shifting system on Lake Shore drive, Lincoln park, between Byron and North avenue.

Proves a Safer System.

It has not only proved itself an efficient system for moving trafic but also—and this is more important—as a safer system from the driver's point of view as well as the pedestrian's. This was also the case during the World's Fair. The same system on the north side has cut down accidents 33⅓ per cent.

Thus, following the ideas of Mayor Kelly and working out the system for the one-way trafic on Jackson boulevard and Monroe street, we predict the same measure of success as has been attained by all systems based upon the principle of segregation and channelization.

Does Not Mean High Speed.

Among the advantages of this system will not be the attainment of high speeds along the road but an even and orderly movement with constant flow of trafic.

It is not a substitute for planned limited or elevated highways but as an immediate trafic remedy for the great west side, serving both the outlying districts as well as the central district, and forming a link connecting the already existing ones at the north and at the south.

1936 CARS ARE NEARER TO GOAL OF IDEAL AUTO

BY J. W. FRAZER.
[Vice President, Chrysler Sales Corp.]

J. W. FRAZER.

The success of 1934 and 1935 did not lull automobile manufacturers into any false idea that we could rest on our laurels. On the contrary, it inspired our engineers to seek even greater things. The result is that in the 1936 cars we have incorporated more than a score of advanced features that contribute to performance, safety, luxury, comfort, and economy.

To my mind the 1936 cars bring to a focus all the things that the industry has been striving to accomplish. There is no such thing as the final goal in motor car design, of course. The industry will keep going forward as long as motor cars are used. But I can say truthfully that this year we have come closer to the ideal car than I had expected to get for many years.

I personally have given these new models the most exhaustive tests over all kinds and conditions of roads. I have driven thousands of miles in them, and I have found in them a performance that amazes me, accustomed as I am to having our engineers do great things.

FAULKNER TELLS HOW AUBURN CAN BUILD THE CORD

BY ROY H. FAULKNER.
[President, Auburn Automobile Co.]

ROY H. FAULKNER.

It is in this field of new design, as exemplified by the radically different Cord automobile, that the truly independent company best serves the public. Only a small portion of the motorists may be in position to buy such a radically advanced car but much of the engineering progress which it pioneers is eventually made available to the low priced mass production vehicles.

I do not want in any way to create the impression that the mass producers are not performing a great service. They in reality have made it possible for millions of persons to avail themselves of higher standards at lower costs, but it is equally true that because of the nature of their production problems, they cannot give that individuality to their products that so many Americans seek.

Motorists Must Check Exhaust Pipe for Leaks

Check all connections from the motor to the rear end of the exhaust pipe for leaky gaskets or joint. If leaky gaskets are not removed, dangerous fumes from the poisonous exhaust gases may find their way into the passenger compartment, causing headaches, nausea, and other ill effects.

Illinois Motorists Pay $10.15 Average U. S. Tax

Recently enacted federal excise taxes will impose an average tax of $10.56 on each motorist of Illinois. These taxes, which were scheduled to expire last summer, were extended by last minute legislation rushed through congress without ample public hearings.

RIGHT TURN ON RED NEEDED HERE

With a right turn on a red light, this trafic would not be stalled in Howard street waiting to turn south in Sheridan road. Until about a year ago such a maneuver was legal here, and it may become legal again. Engineers are planning to inaugurate the right turn on the red at certain intersections throughout the city.

CHICAGO TO TRY TURN TO RIGHT ON RED LIGHTS

Engineers Working on Progressive Plan.

BY J. J. CAVANAGH.
[General Manager, Chicago Motor Club.]

An authorized right turn on a red light is planned for Chicago. Engineers are preparing a program for its progressive introduction at appropriate intersections. It is proposed that these intersections will be marked and the turning movement controlled by a flickering red arrow calling for a preliminary stop before the turn.

Estimates of the number of such intersections vary from 50 to 350, or about half the existing intersections controlled by lights.

Each Intersection Studied.

It is agreed by engineers that such a movement will expedite the trafic flow. It is essential, however, to make a study of each intersection prior to such an installation to determine how the turn may be made in safety and convenience with proper consideration for pedestrians and for other vehicular movements.

Engineers for the city of Chicago, the Chicago park district and the Chicago Motor club this summer studied the right turn on the red as practiced in New York and as practiced in Detroit. As a conclusion to these studies, they were opposed to the New York system that does not always require a stop preliminary to the turn.

Detroit System Favored.

The Detroit system was favored, with modifications. The automobile manufacturing center requires a stop before swinging right to mingle with cross trafic.

The Michigan metropolis permits such a manuever everywhere except where specifically prohibited by signs. For Chicago, the engineers approved a regulation that would permit the right turn on the red only where specifically authorized by a flickering red arrow.

TRAFIC FATALITIES INCREASE AT NIGHT; TRAFIC IS LIGHTER

Although four-fifths of all automobile trafic operates during the daylight hours, nevertheless, one-half of all fatal accidents occur after sunset. In other words, night travel is four times as dangerous as day travel.

Many accidents can be prevented, in the opinion of safety experts, by adequate street lighting, a theory supported by trials in various parts of the country, notably at Cleveland, San Francisco, New York, and Detroit.

DEVICE DESIGNED TO WARN DRIVERS OF DANGER ZONES

An amber lamp and vibrating bell mounted on the instrument board of a motor vehicle constitutes a novel signal device designed to warn motorists of approaching danger zones. A detector unit, attached to the right front fender, is connected with the instrument board. In the roadbed pieces of magnetized steel are buried at proper distances from highway intersections, sharp curves, railroad crossings, or other places where accidents are frequent. When a car passes over one of these magnets, the detector unit on the fender is energized and the lamp on the instrument board is illuminated and the bell rings.

RAILWAY BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM URGED FOR AUTOS

Means of Governing Trafic Proves Big Problem.

BY MAJ. GEORGE A. QUINLAN.
[Cook County Highway Superintendent.]

The diversion of gasoline tax revenue to other than highway usage has curtailed construction and forced cities to more than ordinary diligence in obtaining the greatest possible efficiency from existing pavements.

Transportation demands have far surpassed available facilities. An increase in automobile usage far exceeds the development in new facilities. Lacking a subway for rail passengers and an elevated highway system for motor cars, all avenues to the loop are overtaxed.

A notable step toward an increased efficiency from existing pavements has been taken this year by the Chicago park district on the north side's lake front boulevard. A railroad method of dispatching trafic was borrowed in using pavement for travel in one direction at one time of the day and in another direction at another time of the day to meet the changing demand. Rush hour blockades were broken.

On some thoroughfares, the average speed of trafic has been stepped up so much that another scheme may have to be borrowed from the railroads—the block signal system. Chicago and Cook county are rapidly nearing a need for a light signal on the approach to intersections as well as at the intersections. The advance light would show either green, meaning to proceed without reducing the travel pace, or amber, meaning to slow down for a possible red light at the next intersection.

Britain's Trafic Death Rate Higher Than U. S.

Great Britain suffers a much higher trafic fatality in ratio to the number of cars registered than does the United States, the rate for Great Britain being one fatality for every 241 cars registered, as compared with one fatality for every 690 cars registered in the United States. The narrow, winding roads of Great Britain, cluttered with pedestrians and cyclists, have been blamed by British safety leaders as one of the major causes of England's high mortality rate.

America's Finest Six

A BIG CAR IN EVERYTHING BUT PRICE!

THE NEW REO FLYING CLOUD

Reo pioneered internal-expanding sealed hydraulic brakes. It is natural that Reo brakes should provide the utmost in safety with straight line, easy action. Reo buyers are assured the finest in hydraulic braking equipment. Their instantaneous two-shoe action is not affected by temperature, dirt, or moisture.

This economical power plant, floating in rubber, provides prompt effortless, smooth power. Starting is easy by depressing the safety-type starter on the clutch. Automatic choke and vacuum spark advance make starting instantaneous, under all weather conditions

Rigid double strength X type frame provides extra strength during the long life of the car.

YOU'LL want to stretch out in the luxury of a Reo—and you can! There's plenty of room. When you come to a rough stretch of road, relax — America's Finest Six has enough weight and wheel base to smooth out the bumps. And if your watch says "Step on it!"—go ahead with confidence. Reo's hydraulic brakes will stop you where you want to stop—and when!

This 1936 Reo — America's Finest Six—is something new in automobiles. Everything about it will thrill you—the luxury, the performance, even the price! After you drive the Reo, you'll look twice at the price-tag—for the cost of America's Finest Six is no more than you would expect to pay for just an ordinary car. And the upkeep is surprisingly low. It's the car for you to own—the car that you'll be proud of now, and years from now! See America's Finest Six at the Show. We'll be glad to arrange a demonstration.

COURTNEY TELLS HOW HE REDUCED THEFTS OF AUTOS

Asks for Aid of Public by Locking Cars.

BY THOMAS J. COURTNEY.
[Cook County State's Attorney.]

In December, 1932, I inherited a deplorable situation with regard to stolen automobiles. For two years the daily thefts had amounted to more than 96 cars. Real action was needed. Vigorous prosecution was immediately ordered. This brought some reduction.

In July, 1933, an intensive study and investigation was begun. Long days and many times far into the night the work carried on. In conference after conference each new matter was discussed, facts marshalled, charts prepared, and finally a program adopted late in December, 1933. My first year had seen steals reduced to 76 daily. We were encouraged.

Prosecutions Bring Reductions.

The specialized prosecution provided for in my program was calculated to and did produce greater reductions. I requested the establishment of a special auto court. This was done. It started to function in January, 1932. In that court stealing an automobile was dealt with as a crime, not a harmless prank. Jail was the medicine to be administered the guilty. Municipal Judge Graber has admirably conducted that court.

In April, 1934, I created in my own office an auto department consisting of 4 men. With added duties it was necessary to increase its personnel to 25 men. Every auto theft on arrest must be brought promptly to this department. Every automobile prosecution must be here prepared. When 1934 ended thefts had been reduced to 33 daily. The stripping of cars had been reduced from 27 to 3 daily. This was real progress.

In 1935 for the first 9 months, the thefts have been reduced to 18 daily.

Public Can Do Part.

The public can help. Every person should securely lock his car. An unlocked car amounts almost to the lending of it to the criminal. This unlocked car, so easily taken, may be used in a murder, a series of robberies or burglaries, or a rape. It may be recklessly driven on the highways and bring death to other autoists or pedestrians.

Today, back of practically every crime of violence is the stolen automobile. That is why I, despite all the wonderful progress made, am fighting harder than ever to exterminate this evil.

PLYMOUTH HEAD SEES INCREASING MARKET FOR CAR

BY B. E. HUTCHINSON.
[Chairman, Plymouth Motor Corporation.]

B. E. HUTCHINSON.

How well the automobile industry maintains its projected production and employment schedules depends on retail deliveries to new car buyers. Business conditions at the present time definitly indicate an active market for new cars; and the indications are that the automobile industry, and other industries contributing to it, will enjoy a better stabilized business this winter than has heretofore been the case.

General business displays a better tone; and when general business improves this industry always benefits. When it is considered that automobile workers are now receiving wages at an all-time high average hourly rate, it will be realized what the prospect for a better stabilized employment this winter means to them.

The new models on display at the automobile show offer every inducement to stimulate fall and winter buying. Style is the predominating note, but the latest cars also embody all kinds of new comfort, economy and safety features.

FALL AUTO SHOW EXPECTED TO AID U. S. EMPLOYMENT

BY D. E. BATES.
[President, Reo Motor Car Co.]

D. E. BATES.

One of the former weaknesses of the automobile industry was that production was limited to too few months of the year to provide stable employment. The advancement of the date of the annual motor show this year will doubtless go far to correct this state of affairs.

There has been some progress in spreading employment without this change of show dates. In years past, the spring purchasing season was followed by a dull sales period that started about the middle of June. This year heavy buying continued through the summer into the fall.

Without regard for season, motorists are replacing old, unsafe and uneconomic machines with new models as rapidly as funds are available.

240 Killed, 33,420 Injured by Cars Without Driver

Low gear or reverse can supplement the hand brake when parking on a grade. There were 240 persons killed and 33,420 injured in the United States last year by automobiles without a driver.

CALLS '36 MODELS RESULT OF ALL MECHANICAL GAIN

BY F. A. BOWER.
[Chief Engineer, Buick Motor Co.]

F. A. BOWER.

The trend in automotive engineering represented by the 1936 models is a consolidation of mechanical gains of recent years rather than toward any radical innovations.

Engines have been stepped up in performance through the application of established principles. Developments in brakes, steering, and springing likewise have been proved by the test of time.

Fundamental changes on the new cars to be seen at the annual exhibition are few. But you will note the widespread usage of all mechanical advancements of generally recognized merit.

STUDEBAKER DICTATOR

The 1936 Studebakers, both the six cylinder Dictator and the eight cylinder President, are advertised as having greater acceleration, higher top speeds, and more economy than their predecessors. A consultant in the design, style, and trim of the larger model was Miss Helen Dryden, New York artist and decorator.

Centers of gravity on both models have been lowered and the roof lines have also been dropped so that greater interior room has been provided.

The steel body, including a single panel extending from the hood to the top of the trunk, is one of several safety factors stressed this year. Other features of this nature include the hydraulic brakes and a "hill holder" that automatically prevents the car from rolling backward when stalled on an upgrade.

WATCH WINTER SALES FOR O. K. ON EARLY SHOW

BY G. I. SMITH.
[Chevrolet Regional Manager.]

G. I. SMITH.

I look to the Chicago show to demonstrate more conclusively even than the one at New York that the early introduction of new models by the entire automotive industry is a wise procedure.

"The actual test, however, of the value of the early introduction date will be in sales during the remainder of 1935 in the early months of 1936. That is, the change of date was adopted as a means of promoting employment in the automotive and related industries, by maintaining production through months when formerly it was at its lowest point.

LOW PRICED PACKARD

Packard's 1936 cars range from the low priced to the luxury field, including forty-three different models.

The power of the eights has been stepped up from 110 to 120 horsepower. The higher top speed is incidental. Important benefits come in faster acceleration and in lower engine speed during ordinary usage. The motor now operates at 315 fewer revolutions per minute, reducing wear.

All four lines retain distinctive Packard characteristics of appearance while in keeping with 1936 body styles.

DIFFICULT STARTING.

When there is persistent difficulty in starting the car it is advisable to examine the choke control.

WATCH AMMETER NEEDLE.

Erratic action of the ammeter needle often is caused by a loose belt when the generator is belt-driven.

W. E. FISH SEES FARMER KEY TO INCREASED SALES

BY W. E. FISH.
[Chevrolet Truck Sales Manager.]

W. E. FISH.

The farmer is the reason for the pick-up noted in truck sales. City purchasers of trucks and equipment are able to make these investments only because the farmer has recovered his buying power and is utilizing it in the cities. The rural areas are necessarily the key to the whole economic situation; for the greatest single contribution to the country's wealth is that which is produced on the farm.

Excellent crops have been the rule, rather than the exception, during the past year. Almost all sections have benefited.

An Important Statement by Walter P. Chrysler

In which he Explains the Plan and Purpose Behind the New Lower-Priced De Soto for 1936 . . Companion Car to the New De Soto Airflow III

THIS IS THE NEW CUSTOM AIRSTREAM DE SOTO TOURING SEDAN, WITH BUILT-IN TRUNK. THE SAME BODY STYLE IS ALSO AVAILABLE IN THE DE LUXE SERIES.

TODAY WE ARE INTRODUCING the new De Soto for 1936. I believe you will be interested in the engineering thinking that went into this car—the planning behind it and how we visualized its market.

As you know, times are getting better. Today people are again thinking of automobiles in terms of style and beauty and excellence of appointments—not only transportation.

As buying power improves and people get more money . . . it is logical that they will want more style, additional room and greater beauty than the very lowest-priced cars have offered.

What we could plainly see for De Soto this year was a market of thousands of buyers who were eager to own a STYLE CAR . . . and could afford it, due to this upturn in business conditions.

So we created for them a brand new De Soto—that is actually a custom-built car—to sell for only a few dollars more than the very lowest-priced automobiles made today.

In the last five years, we have learned how to build cars better and we found ways to bring the luxury and appointments of two and three-thousand-dollar cars into this medium-price bracket . . . and I can say to you sincerely that this new De Soto has as many CUSTOM FEATURES as any car built in the finest custom-body shop.

• • •

THE NEW DE SOTO INTERIORS are most beautiful. The outside styling, you can see for yourself, is distinctive and pleasing. People who have seen this new De Soto have gone out of their way to tell me that they believe it will be the best-looking, most distinctive car of 1936.

In addition, it is a marvelous performing automobile. I can tell you, from hundreds of miles of personal experience, that it is a real pleasure to drive. It steers easily, stops quickly, and the engine is the most powerful in its price class.

Furthermore, tests have shown that the new Gas-Saver Transmission is capable of giving the remarkable economy of 25 miles per gallon.

I want you to see this car. It will be displayed this week at Automobile Shows all over America and it is also being demonstrated by De Soto dealers throughout the country.

After you see it, write me your frank opinion of this car. The Chrysler Corporation is very proud to present this new De Soto, and I feel sure you will agree with me that it is destined to be an outstanding success.

NEW 6% TIME PAYMENT PLAN

Ask for the new Official Chrysler Motors Commercial Credit Company 6% Time Payment Plan. You can figure it out for yourself:

1 Start with your unpaid balance.
2 Then add insurance cost . . . at conference rates.
3 Then multiply by 6%—for a 12-month plan. One-half of one per cent per month for period more or less than 12 months.

In some states a small legal documentary fee is required. NO OTHER CHARGES.

FIND COMMERCE BOARD BIG AID TO AUTO SAFETY

Lindheimer Tells Work of Reducing Hazards.

BY B. F. LINDHEIMER.

[Chairman, Illinois Commerce Commission.]

A large measure of protection that is being furnished motorists today emanates from the Illinois commerce commission, although that body has no jurisdiction over the usual automobile driver. The commission, however, has been given a very broad jurisdiction over railroads.

Where a railroad crosses a public highway, that itself creates a possible hazard to motorists. The extent of travel on the highway and on the railroad and the visibility around the crossing are the principal factors determining the degree of hazard.

Close Coöperation Needed.

An effective program for the elimination of grade crossing hazards requires coöperation between the Illinois commerce commission and those state and federal agencies which direct the construction of highways and the control of automobile trafic thereon. This needded coöperation realized full effectivveness under the present federal and state administrations.

The results thus far achieved are impressive. Crossings have been classified according to the degree of hazard. Those which are most hazardous and over which there is the greatest amount of trafic were completely eliminated by the construction of expensive subways and viaducts. The commission, since Jan. 1, 1934, has authorized the construction of 76 subways and viaducts.

More crossings are thus to be eliminated than the combined programs adopted in all of our adjoining states during the same period, and a greater number than has ever been provided for in this state in any period of similar duration.

Protects 800 Crossings.

The other means of protecting motorists at grade crossings, by special signal devices, has also been employed to a larger extent during the present commerce commission's incumbency than during any previous administration. Since June, 1934, the commission has provided for special protection at approximately 800 grade crossings, or a number equal to 50 per cent of all crossings protected in the previous ten years.

Auto Tourists in Mexico Increase Despite Roads

Although road conditions barred many motorists from vacationing in Mexico, the government estimated a gain of almost 60 per cent in tourist expenditures this year. More travel into the country is expected this winter, as the highway to Mexico City is now open although still a long way from being a first class road.

BEFORE AND AFTER BEAUTIFICATION

Here are "before and after" pictures showing how the bare earth slopes of a grade separation were beautified in the state's landscaping program. The location is the Evanston-Elgin highway underpass at the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad near Golf, Ill.

ILLINOIS ROADS PLANTED WITH 149,500 TREES

Plan to Fit Them to Countryside.

BY ROBERT KINGERY.

[Illinois Director of Public Works.]

In the last two years 116,500 trees and 300,000 shrubs have been planted on 1,388 miles of Illinois roadside. This fall the division of highways is planting 336 more miles with 33,000 trees and 57,000 shrubs.

Of this total of 1,724 miles, the federal government has allotted $206,500 for the development of 213 miles at an average cost of $970 per mile. The state has spent, or set aside, $413,600 for the remaining 1,511 miles at $273 per mile.

The federal work has cost more per mile because the labor used on such projects was paid at the prevailing wage scale. The state used, to a great extent, labor furnished by the Civil Works administration and the Illinois emergency relief commission. Also, in the federal work, more grading was done and larger sized trees were used.

Part of Development Plan.

The grading of steep banks and deep ditches is part of the roadside development plan which in general tends to make the right of way fit, and once more be a part of the adjacent land. The material planted in an informal style is native to the localities in which it is used and further tends to restore the roadside to the natural character of the countryside.

The possibility of landscaping some of the narrow roadsides is limited by the presence of overhead wires of the utility companies. Such a road, the Evanston-Elgin highway between McCormick boulevard and Waukegan road, has been experimentally planted with seven miles of apple trees, which at maturity will remain below the wires.

Cook County Routes Planted.

The following routes have been planted in Cook county:

SKOKIE ROAD—Elston avenue to Lake county.

NORTHWEST HIGHWAY—Park Ridge to Barrington.

ILLINOIS 63—Barrington to Dundee.

ALGONQUIN ROAD—Des Plaines to Illinois 63.

EVANSTON-ELGIN ROAD—Evanston to Elgin.

ILLINOIS 53—Palatine to Lake street.

OGDEN AVENUE—Cicero avenue into Du Page county.

MANNHEIM ROAD—Archer avenue into Will county.

HARLEM AVENUE—Ogden avenue to 79th street.

SOUTHWEST HIGHWAY—Western avenue to Orland Park.

U. S. 6—Oak Forest into Will county.

GOVERNORS HIGHWAY—Harvey to Richton Park.

GLENWOOD-DYER ROAD—Glenwood to Lincoln highway.

The state highway department has an allotment of $253,000 for additional highway landscaping in 1936.

700 Fatalities of 2,500 Are Blamed on Speeding

A recent study of 2,500 motor vehicle fatalities revealed that 700 of these were for speeding [going too fast for conditions]; 400 ran off the road; 400 were driving on the wrong side of the road; 316 did not have the right of way, and the remainder, 684, were attributed to a variety of causes.

PARTS INDUSTRY PRAISED FOR AID ON NEW MODELS

BY FRED S. KIMMERLING.

[President, AC Spark Plug Company.]

I am unquestionably in accord with the opinion generally expressed that the earlier introduction of new models is bound further to improve employment conditions in the automotive industry as a whole and in the related industries as well. In the aggregate this, of course, affects American industrial activity in its entirety.

F. S. KIMMERLING.

In regard to engineering developments contributed by the parts makers to the 1936 models, I would say that the last year saw many advancements in designs and materials as well as in new devices.

A new air-cleaner in combination with a silencer was perfected in a smaller size making it practical for use on automobiles generally. This device reduces wear on pistons and rings. It was originally developed for cars operating only in sections of the country where severe dust storms prevail, and where an engine would be worn out completely in a week or two if not adequately protected.

By far the most important progress yet made on bearings had to do with development of high speed bearings composed of copper and lead.

CAR WATCHERS THORN IN SIDE OF CITY DRIVER

Former Convicts Among Club Wielders.

BY CAPT. DAVID FLYNN.

[Chief, Police Trafic Bureau.]

The greatest nuisance the motoring public has to contend with is the self-appointed car watchers, many of whom are imbued with ulterior motives and none with any particular interest in the protection of the cars.

In many cases when motorists appear to enter their cars they find these stalwarts waiting. Sometimes, in order to emphasize their self-imposed authority, they are equipped with an improvised club or baton, anl if the desired cash is not forthcoming the aforementioned emblem of enforcement is flourished with vigor and the vituperations of a foul mouth are showered on their victim.

Use Depression as Excuse.

The presence of those watchers has been noticeable since the parking of cars on city streets became a custom. However, they were not prevalent until late years, when they made use of the depression as an excuse for their conduct.

Many are harmless, but some place tacks in the road for the "stingy" motorist to deflate his tires. Others use a piece of hose to drain the gas from the tank of nonpaying motorists.

What would motoring theatergoers, many of whom parked their cars on Wabash avenue in the early part of September, think if they knew that a watcher, William Barnes, who used to wait on them in a most assiduous manner, had been serving penitentiary sentences since 1908?

93 Watchers Arrested.

This ex-convict showed a propronounced degree of efficiency in his efforts to collect. He was arrested and, in default of the fine, committed to work out the sentence in the Bridewell. The strange feature is that some motorists will argue with the police in favor of those parasites.

An imperative order from Commissioner Allman directs that self-appointed car watchers be arrested. In the last few months the records of the central trafic division show that 93 persons have been arrested and charged with unauthorized car watching. The cases were disposed of as follows: Forty-three were discharged, 4 put on probation, and 46 assessed fined ranging from $3 to $200 and costs.

Cut Accidents by Proper Road Design, Builder Says

One-half of the casualties now occurring on American streets and highways could be prevented by proper design and construction of thoroughfares. This is the opinion of William P. McDonald, president of the American Road Builders' association.

LUXURY BOULEVARD

GRAHAM SEES GOOD FOREIGN AUTO MARKET

BY ROBERT C. GRAHAM.

[Executive Vice President, Graham-Paige Motors corporation; chairman export committee, Automobile Manufacturers' Assn.]

The foreign market is in a healthful condition for the sale of American motor cars in 1936. Barring, of course, an unexpected outbreak of an European war, we are completely justified in a most optimistic forecast for next year's export business.

ROBERT C. GRAHAM.

The Washington administration's reciprocal trade policy has been effective in reducing tarifs and other barriers in some sixty countries. For 1935, exports will total 535,000 trucks and passenger cars as compared with 435,000 units exported in 1934.

An example of our new trade agreements lies in Colombia. Duties on passenger cars have been cut 20 to 25 per cent and on trucks and buses 50 per cent. In 1929, Colombia bought $4,087,801 worth of motor cars from the United States. The 1936 total is expected to exceed this figure.

Albanian Buses Go as They Please; Keep No Schedules

Except for the few that carry mail, buses in Albania, a country without railroads, have no schedules on which to bounce their way along the dusty rutted roads. The buses—mostly light American makes—stand with open doors in the town market places for hours or even days, waiting for every seat to be filled, so that they can start. Plodding donkeys still carry most of Albania's freight.

BLOOD TEST WILL SHOW IF A DRIVER HAS HAD DRINKS

Examination of a drop of driver's blood will reveal if he has been drinking, according to an article in the Lancet, official publication of the British Medical society. Experiments with a special capillary tube are said to have given accurate results through the Widmark test for alcohol in the blood.

Federal Funds Allotted for Roads Near Rockton

Rockton, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Farm to market roads in Roscoe township are being improved through a federal allotment of $16,046, supplemented by $3,822 of township money. Roads scheduled for improvement are: Middle Manchester road for two miles, Burr Oak school road for one mile, Hamburg road for one mile, Hayward road to the Wisconsin line, Dwyer road to the Boone county line for three miles, and Manchester road, which will be resurfaced.

Dust Storms Damage Automobile Motors

Dust can ruin an automobile engine not properly protected. One case has been reported in which engine cylinders were damaged beyond repair after operation through only twenty miles of dust laden atmosphere. If there is danger of dust, the motorist traveling in storm country can obtain the recently developed nose and throat masks for himself and his family, and have his car outfitted with air cleaners at all in-take points.

Accidents on Sunday More Often Are Fatal

Accident records reveal that the fatality toll on Sundays is worse than for any other day in the week. The rate of death per accident is 18 per cent greater on Sunday than the average for the seven days.

NEW TRAFIC CODE TRIAL PROCEDURE IMPAIRS ACTION

Jail Penalties Hamper Its Enforcement.

BY CARL A. BARRETT.

[President, Illinois Automobile Club.]

Enforcement of the trafic laws of Illinois has, during recent months, been seriously impaired and disorganized because violators must, under the new trafic code, be tried in a court of record and not by a justice of the peace. This change in the law has been the subject of much discussion on the part of lawyers, state officials and law-enforcing officers.

This anomalous situation has come about because the new trafic code has added jail sentences to the penalty for a trafic misdemeanor. Heretofore justices of the peace could assess fines for these minor offenses, but they cannot, under the statute, commit any one to jail. Therefore, with jail sentences now possible, justices of the peace have lost jurisdiction and such cases must go to a court of record—a city, county or Circuit court.

Abuses Under Justices.

Whether this new procedure is preferable and what to do about it is the subject of contention. Under the old "J. P." regime it is admitted many intolerable abuses arose, while under the present court of record procedure complaint is made that motorists are inconvenienced, especially when arrested in outlying districts, frequently being required to appear repeatedly in a court many miles from their home.

Two methods of correction have been suggested—either to amend the trafic code by removing jail sentences for misdemeanors, thus restoring jurisdiction of the justice of the peace over these cases; or, to amend the justice of the peace act and elevate these courts to the dignity and responsibility of courts of record, put the justice on a straight salary as are all other judges, and abolish the pernicious "fee system."

Prefers Status Quo.

I do not believe there is any such serious inconvenience to motorists, in the operation of the law as now in effect as would justify restoring the jurisdiction of the "J. P." or to clothe him with the powers of a court of record. For thep resent I think the law should remain as it now is—at least until it has had a thorough trial.

Auto-Train Crashes Show Fatality Ratio of 1 to 4.5

Accidents at railroad crossings are eight times as likely to be fatal as mortor mishaps at other places. Of each four and one-half injuries at railroad crossings, one is a fatality, while in the other classes of automobile accidents, only one out of every thirty-six proves fatal.

V-12 LINCOLN ZEPHYR

Henry Ford's new entrant in the medium price field, looks like its name the Lincoln-Zephyr. The architecture is as refreshing as a streamlined train, yet with the dignity befitting an offspring of its high priced parent, the Lincoln.

The 110 horse power V-12 engine, coupled with light weight chassis construction and reduced wind resistance, promises a performance in keeping with the outward appearance of the car. The manufacturer also makes such a promise.

The Lincoln-Zephyr looks in some respects like the "motor car of the future" that was displayed in the Ford building at A Century of Progress. The rear is tapered in lines such as formed by ripples on the surface of a river after passing a rock. The company contends that it is the best job of aerodynamics ever to leave an automobile production chain.

The radiator grill is V shaped, with horizontal bars, bordered by lines that sweep upward and outward like waves from the bow of a speed boat. Headlamps are built into the fenders. There are no running boards; in their place are rubber covered side buffers.

The body is technically classed as a "rigid structure." Body panels are part of the load carrying structure. This type design, novel in automobile construction, gives strength without weight. It is on the same principle used in streamlined trains and in airplane fuselages.

The springs are transverse cantilever, similar to those in a Ford V-8. The wheel base is 122 inches. The brakes are mechanically actuated.

The conventional Lincoln is represented in the 1936 market with a 150 horse power V-12 engine in eighteen body types. The coach builders are Brunn, Judkins, LeBaron, and Willoughby.

CHRYSLER DE LUXE 8

Chrysler for 1936 has further streamlined its "airflow" models and also is presenting a six and an eight in a modern expression of more conventional exterior appearance.

A higher aerodynamic efficiency is claimed for the new tear drops. Structural strength has been increased by means of unbroken trusses of steel from the front to the extreme rear of the cars.

The automatic overdrive, or fourth forward gear ratio, now is available at slight extra cost for the sixes and the conventional eights. The overdrive reduces engine speeds 30 per cent for any given car speed. To illustrate, the engine speed required to drive the car 65 miles an hour in the overdrive is the same as for 45 miles an hour in ordinary third gear.

For the conventional sixes and eights, interior dimensions are enlarged, the bumper to bumper measurement lengthened, and the height is reduced one inch.

EVERYONE has known that some day such a car would come. A car for you who rebel at mass-sameness—who covet quality—and whose alert sense of value enables you to get most for your money.

Here it is—bearing the proud old name "HUPMOBILE"—complete assurance of the honest worth that twenty-eight years have established.

The moment you see the new Hupmobile, you will know it's the car you have wanted and waited for. You will like its smoothly-moulded, stream-line beauty.

Here is nothing bizarre or "freakish." Instead, a harmony, symmetry and grace which experts describe as "the most highly refined expression of the modern motif."

The interiors will delight you—and very likely surprise you. Because it is doubtful if the person whose investment must be moderate will expect such luxury. Upholstery, fittings and hardware are of superb quality, and the "Tailoring by Lichter" expresses a tastefulness that is not excelled at any price.

Here is engineering with the skill born of experience; materials of rare quality; and workmanship done with a care, effort and precision impossible to the hurry of mass-production.

With a horsepower wholly uncommon to comparable weights and wheelbases, these new HUPMOBILES can perform in a manner that is literally breath-taking—and deliver speeds that you'll rarely, if ever, demand.

Most surprising of all are their prices—prices only made possible by the skill and experience gained thru twenty-eight years of incredibly careful designing and manufacturing.

We are proud to submit them for your most searching examination or test. We believe they will please both your pride and your purse, and give a trustworthiness that will earn your lasting satisfaction.

Crowds View Cars as Automobile Show Opens at Palace

The Number One Auto Section in New York at the Most Successful Show in Years

"RETAIL SALES at the National Automobile Show — in New York, November 2nd to 9th — have been averaging about 60% greater than they were at the show in January," says Alfred Reeves, vice-president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association.

That's good news for Chicago dealers and distributors; for producers of cars, fuel and equipment; for the country as a whole. Because it's been proved repeatedly that heavy buying in the New York show forecasts a good year for the industry.

The right kind of advertising goes a long way toward building big sales volume. So it is significant that the Herald Tribune is again first—among all nine New York newspapers—in volume of automotive advertising published during show week and on show feature day.

Roper Finds Sharp Gains In Exports of Automobiles

U. S. Producers Resume Lead in World Markets With Gain in Foreign Sales of 16.4 Per Cent

South Africans Best Purchasers

Huge Outlet Available Abroad as Ownership Outside of America Is One to 187 Persons

By Daniel C. Roper
Secretary of Commerce

Export sales of American automobile manufacturers in 1933 reversed a downward trend that had been consistent since 1929. From the time these general decreases were checked two years ago up to the present, foreign sales of motor vehicles, parts for assembly and replacement and all related automotive manufactures have been steadily increasing.

Unmistakably, the upward trend of American motor vehicle exports that began shortly after the war and continued until 1929, when more than 536,000 motor vehicles were shipped abroad, has been re-established on a basis that justifies the assumption of continued world market domination by his industry. The importance of this industry in the export trade is apparent by the fact that it stands fourth in the export list of United States merchandise.

Huge Market Available

In spite of troublesome marketing problems in many countries of the world, there are encouraging factors pointing toward an increasing demand for automobiles. For the first time since 1930 the total number of motor vehicles in world use has shown an increase. As of January 1, 1935, it was reported that world registration of motor vehicles totaled 35,355,310, an increase of 1,793,251 units, or 5.3 per cent, as compared with the registrations at the beginning of 1934. Of this total, slightly more than 10,000,000 motor vehicles were in use outside the United States, the largest number ever recorded. The gain in motor vehicles in use in this country as of January 1, 1935, was greater than the world figure, the increase being 7.2 per cent, as compared with January 1, 1934.

In terms of world usage, the per capita ownership of automobiles is now placed at one motor vehicle for every fifty-seven persons in the world, but if the United States is excluded, the ratio is one automobile to every 187 persons. In the United States the ratio is still about one to five. While it is evident that per capita purchasing power in many countries of the world can in no manner be compared with purchasing power in the United States, the opportunities for increased usage of motor vehicles in the world markets is apparent when it is observed that one person out of five in the United States owns a motor vehicle and only one out of 187 persons in the rest of the world is the owner of such a vehicle. It is impossible to estimate the extent to which world motor vehicle usage may proceed, particularly in the heavily populated countries of lesser industrialization. In these countries today motor vehicle registrations are extremely limited; in fact, excluding the United States, there are only five countries in the world that have more than 500,000 automobiles.

Ratios of U. S. Cars Vary

No country should be considered too small to receive the attention of American automobile manufacturers, who hold a unique competitive position among world motor car builders. They should take full advan-

Visitors Flock to City To Attend Exhibition

Influx at Hotels—Special Excursions by Railways

Attracted by the National Automobile Show at the Grand Central Palace, throngs of people have flocked to this city from out of town, according to a survey of the hotels made yesterday. New cars manufactured by the various companies stand in the lobbies of many of these hostelries illustrating the automobiles that await motorists in the 1936 offerings.

Special rates have been made by the railroads to many points throughout this country, Canada and Mexico for the accommodation of those who travel to the show by rail. Others are motoring into the city from far and near.

It is already conceded by the majority of executives in the industry that the presentation of the exhibition in early November instead of January is assured of great success.

ments in its manufacturing facilities; its reasearch activities have not only been continued but expanded, and the results in public appreciation of the quality and price of its products has been very gratifying.

I believe the public's response to the new automobiles for 1936 will fully justify the industry's belief that the market for cars and trucks next year will be better than in recent years.

Year Begins Earlier

The next year for automobiles, of course, begins this time two months earlier than heretofore. This in itself is a significant development, because it is part of the industry's effort to bring about steadier employment throughout most of the year. The public, I believe, is interested in the success of this movement, but entirely apart from that matter, the new automobiles themselves will certainly justify the public's immediate interest in them regardless of the season of the year.

People used to call America the land of promise. I like to think of it also as the land of performance. Men who do things always find opportunity here, men of courage and vision, men who refuse to worry about the future, but take it into their own hands.

This year we have advanced the date for the introduction of new models by approximately two months, in the belief that by so doing we will be able to level seasonal fluctuations in employment, to some extent at least.

Development Rapid

Another objective this year has been to improve the cars from the standpoint of safety. We believe that the industry can best contribute toward safer streets and highways, both for motorists and pedestrians, by building into the cars every practical feature that will make them safer to operate—cars which respond instantly to the control of the driver and which are so strong and well built that they offer substantial protection to the occupants in the event of accident. As an important, interested group, the industry recognizes its responsibility on the safety question as a whole and is anxious to co-operate and assist on the other two vital phases of the problem—the education of the driver and the correction of faults in the roads themselves.

The development of the automobile has been so amazingly rapid that it has been difficult to keep pace with the many problems that have arisen.

New York Car Market Has Vast Scope for Sales

Automobile Demand Here Next Year to Exceed '35 by Many Thousands of Units Is Forecast

By Don E. Ahrens,
President Automobile Merchants' Association of New York, Inc.

In conformance with President Roosevelt's request, the announcement dates for new models have been advanced two months from their customary January appearance.

The 1936 models are now being exhibited in their world premiere at Grand Central Palace, and rapidly thereafter other cities throughout the entire country will have their individual showings.

World's Largest Market

The New York Automobile Show has always been considered as a barometer of the selling season to come, and factory production schedules are to a considerable degree projected upon the success and public acceptance of the cars at the New York show. For that reason and its importance as a first showing the New York exhibition assumes national prominence.

However, it is sometimes forgotten that in its own right New York and its immediate vicinity is one of the largest markets for automobiles in the world.

Demand Growing Fast

Nearly 100,000 new cars have been sold to the residents of this area during the first eight months of 1935. This represents an increase of more than 20 per cent over 1934 and 27 per cent over 1933. Replacement buying has constituted a large part of the sales but for the second successive year, new buyers are becoming a major factor in sales activity.

With the rapidly increasing demand for new cars through both sources, the New York area will undoubtedly reflect a continued increase of motor vehicles purchased throughout 1936. As of January 1, 1935, one out of every eight persons in the City of New York owned an automobile, or, nearly 800,000 automobiles registered within the confines of the city. Twenty-seven hundred cars are owned for every square mile of city area.

It is the enormous purchasing power inherent to the New York area that makes this possible. These figures do not take into consideration the outlying counties of suburban New York or the thickly populated centers of New Jersey where the per capita of car ownership is even higher than in the city proper.

Improvement Continuous

Constant improvement of traffic facilities, the new bridges, tunnels, roads and elevated highways is constantly making it easier and a greater pleasure for the metropolitan resident to own and drive an automobile. The new Mid-Town Tunnel under the Hudson River to New Jersey, the proposed

1936 Improvements Meet Call for More Safety Declares President of Auto Merchants Association

East River Tunnel to Queens, the Tri-Borough Bridge, together with the already existing traffic arteries — all lead to the facilitation of traffic in and around the city. In yearly increasing numbers, people are becoming more and more "motor-conscious."

Watching the public flocking to Grand Central Palace to view these new models and following a definite up-turn in business generally, it is believed that 1936 will be a most successful year. Judging by the ovation accorded the new cars at the New York show, which opened yesterday, purchasing ability is on the up-turn and the industry, as well as the country, can look forward to a return to more prosperous and happy times.

1936 Models In All Lines Are Marked By Advances

'Motordom on Parade' Is Brilliant Array of Vehicles Stressing Progress of Car Industry

New Peak in Safety, Ease, Endurance

Increases in Size, Air Resistance Reduction and Lower Suspension Among Improvements

By Bert Pierce
Automobile Editor

Automotive progress emphasized another advance with the opening of the thirty-sixth annual National Automobile Show at the Grand Central Palace yesterday. Presented against an autumnal background for the first time in more than three decades the exhibition was marked by numerous achievements in mechanism and design, while stressing the manufacturers' appetence to build the utmost safety into cars as well as perfection for performance. Grace, speed and endurance were blended with new standards in driving ease and riding comforts in the motor offerings for 1936.

"Motordom on Parade" is the title given to the show and several hundred cars, with attendant exhibits of accessories, add chapters to the brilliant history made by the automotive industry. In every line there were distinctive attractions as the engineers have gained high peak of attainment by incorporating the results of months of intensive research into almost every part of the vehicles. Features which were envisioned among possibilities a few years ago, are accepted equipment today.

Increase in Size Stressed

One of the outstanding effects is the impression of increase in size conveyed by the cars. Through clever utilization of design, extension of sweeping lines over exteriors and the rearrangement of interiors more space has been obtained for occupants while the car ensemble has been expanded to greater dimensions than were possessed by predecessors. Air resistance has been reduced to lesser degrees and the streamlining motif has eliminated angles in many places where they were considered essential before scientific analysis proved otherwise.

Another basic improvement is the lowered suspension, the center of gravity being brought closer to the ground, thereby assuring additional safeguard when rounding corners or clicking off miles in rapid succession on the open road. There is a noticeable step-up in power also, with resultant benefit in acceleration, regarded as contributing to smoother traffic and the curbing of hazards incurred by less responsive pick-up when driving in congested areas.

Fall Shows of Past Recalled

Although the automotive products are by far the greatest values ever offered to motorists, the schedule of prices average a downward revision from the 1935 figures. Despite the cut in rates there has been a general movement to include the "extras" of the past in the essentials of the present and cars awaiting purchasers are so completely equipped that there is little to be desired in additional "gadgets" or devices.

In contrast to the automotive achievements within the Palace were the reminiscent conversations heard among the crowd waiting for admittance yesterday afternoon by those who had attended previous autumn exhibitions held in the early years of this century. Those were the days when the "horseless carriage" snorted at hills, floundered over dirt roads and were designated among diverse opinions, as tributes to the courage of men who piloted them. A five-mile ride was a thrill and the pioneers who drove more

Old Pine Road Exhibit Planned in Cleveland

Called Million Dollar Show for Billion Highway Program

Arrangements are being completed for the "old-fashioned road show," which will be held by the American Road Builders' Association in Cleveland, January 20 to 24.

Popularity of this exhibition is proved by the all-time record established on October 15 when applications were received for 25,000 square feet of Road Show space. Prospective exhibitors are reserving an average of 590 square feet each. The exhibition was described recently by officials of the association as a "million-dollar road show for a billion-dollar highway program."

Placing of Retail Sales Tax

APPLY FOR 1936 PLATES NOW, IS PLEA OF HUGHES

State Secretary Tells Rules to Follow.

BY EDWARD J. HUGHES.
[Illinois Secretary of State.]

Use the mail. Apply now. This is my best advice to Illinois motor car owners who plan to purchase 1936 license plates. Plates will be placed on sale early in December.

By special arrangement application forms may be obtained at THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Public Service office, any motor club, or at any of the thousands of filling stations and garages throughout the state. County clerks, sherifs and all police stations will also furnish the application blanks.

The law requires car owners to display the 1936 license plates on Jan. 1. There are no provisions in the law for days of grace.

Avoid Late Rush.

In applying now for license plates by mail, car owners will avoid the inconvenience and annoyance experienced in a last minute rush to purchase plates "over the counter." Many persons last year were required to stand in line in sub-zero weather in order to purchase plates. The discomfort of this experience might easily have been avoided had our earlier warnings been heeded.

Owners desiring reassignment of their present numbers must make request and file their applications prior to Dec. 1.

Owners re-registering the same vehicle should return the 1935 registration card with application for new plates.

Certificates of Title.

It is not necessary to apply for a new certificate of title if applicant now has one.

The certificate of title is good for the life of a car when in possession of the original owner. If, however, ownership is transferred at any time, a new certificate of title must be obtained by the purchaser.

Those registering new cars for the first time are required to apply for certificate of title, which will be issued upon presentation of an authenticated bill of sale.

An applicant for plates for a newly acquired used car must furnish evidence of ownership in the form of a properly endorsed certificate of title from the previous owner.

License fees for 1936 on passenger cars are as follows:

Less than 25 horsepower, $6.50.
Horsepower of 25 and less than 35 horsepower, $10.50.
Horsepower over 25 and less than 50 horsepower, $17.
For vehicles having over 50 horsepower the fee is $22.

License plates next year will be black with white numerals.

Here are the locations of twenty-three highway viaducts and underpasses over and under railroads to be built in the Chicago area's largest grade separation program. Note in the key to symbols that the circles indicate 1935-'36 construction.

Farmer Working in Field Hit by Wheel from Highway

A wrathful victim of a recent automobile accident was a farmer who was injured by an automobile while he was at work in a field 200 yards from the highway. The injury was caused by a wheel that became detached from a speeding car after striking a bump in the road. The wheel traveled 100 yards along the highway, jumped a ditch, struck the farmer and finally ended its free wheeling adventure 500 yards from the point where it left the car.

MORE HORSECABS THAN MOTORS IN POLISH CAPITAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Warsaw, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—The latest census of taxis and horse cabs in Warsaw reveals that for the first time since the war horse cabs outnumber taxis. The police department reports that there are now 1,682 horse cabs in Warsaw, against 1,282 in 1928, while during the same period taxis have decreased from 2,114 to 1,629.

In an effort to increase the number of automobiles in Poland the government recently made a slight reduction in the customs, which are prohibitively high. At present there are approximately 30,000 automobiles in operation in Poland, a large percentage of which belongs to the government.

Negotiations which the government opened with two of the largest automobile manufacturers in America have fallen through.

CHANGES WROUGHT IN AMERICAN SCENE BY AUTO RECALLED

BY VERN L. DRUM.
[President, Hupp Motor Car Corp.]

Twenty years ago Europeans were saying that the automobile would never amount to much in America because the country had no roads. Today there are few towns or hamlets of 5,000 or more population not on a part of the hard-surfaced highway network that covers the country.

VERN L. DRUM.

It would be interesting if we could project ourselves twenty years into the future, but even those of us who are devoting our entire lives to the manufacture of cars cannot see clearly what lies that far ahead of us.

There are some things that we do know, however, and which we have strongly in mind when we build our cars. People are traveling farther and faster on their daily journeys than ever before. The standards of value, time, and distance have been entirely altered during the first quarter century of the automobile and probably will be even further altered during the next quarter century.

DIRTY PLUGS WASTEFUL.

Actual tests show that dirty, worn, or improperly adjusted spark plugs waste one or more gallons of gas out of every ten. Plugs should be cleaned and checked every three or four months and replaced when necessary.

SEES AUTO SHOW BOON TO TRADE IN CHICAGO AREA

BY W. E. BUTLER.
[Chicago Hudson-Terraplane Distributor.]

It is my prediction that the Chicago automobile show this year will be in many ways the most significant ever held. Coming two months earlier than usual it provides opportunities which were lacking to a great degree in the late January and early February exhibitions of previous years.

W. E. BUTLER.

Automobile executives count the great interest in the Chicago show as an important factor in the five million car year that is being freely predicted. A production of five million cars will mean much to the prosperity of this area. Electrical equipment, steel, lether, curled hair for upholstery and a wealth of other materials are drawn by the automobile industry from the Chicago zone.

When an industry consumes a billion and a half dollars' worth of raw materials it cannot help but affect the prosperity of the entire nation and Chicago will be strongly represented in this figure, which is a most conservative estimate of the requirements for the number of cars predicted.

OIL DOOR LOCKS.

A few drops of light oil on each lock prevent having to break a lock that has become so badly rusted it cannot be opened.

CADILLAC V-16

LA SALLE COUPE

Substantial price reductions will attract new eyes to the Cadillac-LaSalle line this year. One line bears the lowest price seen on any Cadillac since the four cylinder jobs of 1908.

The series sixty, the new medium priced Cadillac, has a top speed range between 90 and 100 miles an hour. There's a reserve of peppy acceleration from cruising speeds in the 70s. For such performance the V8 engine is rated at more than 125 horse power, with only 33 pounds of car weight for each horse power.

In the luxury group there are bodies by Fleetwood with V8, V12 and V16 engines, five chassis models, and 30 body styles. Without any decided change in general appearance of the cars, the radiators are narrower, the grilles are in two tones of chrome, and a slim feminine figure forms a new radiator ornament.

The LaSalle likewise retains its style characterists. The grille is slightly convex. A long, slender rib now cuts through the upper section of the cupped hood ventilator ports.

RUSH PLANS FOR ELIMINATING 23 GRADE CROSSINGS

Contracts to Be Let This Year or Early in '36.

BY HOWARD R. OLSON.
[Highway Engineer, Chicago Regional Planning Association.]

Motorists of Chicago and vicinity will benefit from twenty-three railroad grade separation projects which will be put under contract during the remainder of 1935 or early in 1936. When completed this work will eliminate each day much annoying delay for drivers, and in the long run will save many lives through prevention of collisions with trains.

Detailed construction plans are now being rushed to completion by the Illinois and Cook county highway departments in coöperation with the railroads. Bids will be called for as rapidly as possible so that contractors may put unemployed men to work during the winter. Federal money has been allotted to pay the full cost of the work.

Leads in Railway Mileage.

No other metropolitan area in the world has as many miles of railroad. Interwoven with this web of steel rails is the largest mileage of paved highways and streets of any similar area in the world. At many locations grades have been separated. But at thousands of points highways and railroads intersect on the same lavel.

Even when this large program is completed, Chicago, Cook county, and the Indiana Calumet district have a long way to go before the worst points of danger and congestion are eliminated.

On a number of the rail lines serving outlying areas, it is questionable whether isolated grade separations should be attempted at the more important crossings. The more logical solution seems to lie in the extension of track elevation, and in a few places where topography is favorable, track depression.

Hammond May Move Tracks.

Studies of possible extensions have already been made by a number of suburbs. Hammond has a plan for some changes in the location of certain railroad rights of way. Several north shore villages contemplate joint action to solve their problem.

Along the Burlington, municipal officials met recently to consider a plan of action. Oak Park, however, has applied to the government to use relief labor to consolidate and elevate the tracks used by the Garfield Park elevated, the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroad, the Soo Line, the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago terminal railroad, and the Great Western from Austin to Harlem avenues.

Sudden Temperature Drop May Lower Tire Pressure

DONOGHUE TELLS FUTURE TRAFIC AIMS OF PARKS

New Problems Created by Auto Increase.

BY GEORGE T. DONOGHUE.
[Superintendent, Chicago Park District.]

The mass production and sale of automobiles in ever increasing numbers, coupled with the development of rural highways that stimulate motor car usage, has thrown a tremendous transportation problem upon park boulevards originally designed for recreational horse and buggy trafic.

Designs Must Change.

The pressing demands for faster travel facilities and the many accidents that have resulted from an incompetent or inadequate response to these demands, have entirely changed original conceptions of park and boulevard designs.

Now, for the first time, engineers are squarely facing the problem of segregating the two conflicting functions of a park and boulevard system. For the safety and convenience of those using the parks for recreation and for the safety and convenience of those using the parks solely as a trafic artery the two functions must be separated physically.

Have to Obtain Funds.

Grade separations for cross vehicular movements and subways and bridges for bicycles and for pedestrians are expensive but we hope to obtain money from the Works Progress administration and the Public Works administration for the reconstruction and rebuilding of our parks and park highways.

Our aim is toward efficient, high speed highways free of pedestrians, cross trafic and parking, and toward the development of recreational areas segregated from fast moving trafic.

FOCUS THE HEADLAMPS.

Poor road illumination or glare tending to blind approaching motorists often can be corrected by refocusing the headlamps. Properly focused headlamps should concentrate the full power of their rays on the road.

MICHIGAN BUILDS CARS AND ROADS FOR USING THEM

1936 Highway Program Is Ambitious One.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Michigan not only is a builder of automobiles but also of highways on which to operate them.

Back in the earlier days of the motor car this state's highways were far from even being classified as fair, but the transition from bad roads to what is now admitted to be among the best in the world, was rapid, and Michigan now ranks as one of the foremost states in the Union in the development of a complete highway system.

At the present time there are approximately 9,000 miles of state trunk lines, 55,000 miles of country roads, and 23,000 miles of township roads throughout the two peninsulas.

1936 Program Ambitious.

Michigan's road building program for 1936 is an extremely ambitious one, all construction projects being governed by federal regulations.

The state highway department is now engaged in carrying out a $20,600,000 improvement program. Of this substantial amount $6,700,000 is yet aside for the elimination of 35 railroad and highway grade crossings by the construction of grade separations, and $6,300,000 will be used for road projects, mostly grading and drainage structures.

Under the combined program 13 bridges are being built at a cost of about $600,000. Hard surface is being applied on 300 miles of trunk lines, including 200 miles of concrete. Ninety miles of oil aggregate is to be put down as a first step in bringing this type of surface out of the infancy stage.

Nontrunk Lines Improved.

At the end of September, two months after the program was inaugurated, Michigan had in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 worth of projects under construction. This state leads the nation in point of placing federal funds under contract, as it was the first to have both its federal aid and work relief programs approved by President Roosevelt. Twenty-five per cent of the $6,300,000 works relief road fund goes for the improvement of nontrunk lines—a policy never before adopted.

During the last year the highway department has been engaged in carrying out a $6,452,000 work relief program under the Hayden-Cartwright federal grant. In the first nine months of the year 136 miles of all types of surfacing were constructed under this program. The entire allocation will have been spent and all projects completed by Jan. 1.

It is estimated that the combined road building program will offer 10,000 jobs to direct labor. With the normal rate of turnover this means approximately 36,000 persons will be employed during the progress of the program. Of the total amount to be spent nearly $7,000,000 will go to direct labor in wages.

RISE OF INDUSTRY CREDITED TO NEW CAR ADVERTISING

BY LEE COSART.

[Chicago Zone Manager, Dodge.]

LEE COSART.

First rank among America's industrial enterprises has been won and held by automotive manufacturers for a number of reasons, but high among them is the fact that automobiles and trucks are today sold by the most aggressive and the most resourceful group of merchandisers and salesmen any commercial group holds in its service.

And the most important factor in their sales strategy is their having made it so simple and easy for the prospective car buyer to obtain the precise information he wants—and in almost any way he wants it. Stated differently, the automobile industry has "made it easy for the buyer to buy"—easier than is the case with almost any other kind of product.

It is a thing that has come about gradually, but has received tremendous impetus in the last few years. The change has been vividly reflected, for example, in the altered character of much automobile advertising. Instead of dealing in glittering generalities and anguished superlatives, automobile advertising today, in picture and text, seeks to inform the reader—to tell him and to show him exactly what the car looks like, how it is made.

Lawrence Co. to Improve Farm to Market Roads

St. Francisville, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Lawrence county has received a PWA grant of $108,130 for work on three roads to aid farmers in getting produce to market. State aid route 8 from a point about one mile north of Bridgeport will be extended to Padgett's corner. Christy township will receive twenty-five miles of road. Twenty-four miles of secondary road will be constructed in Petty township. Curbs and gutters may later be installed along Main street in St. Francisville.

Widen Highway to 40 Feet for 2 Miles Near Rockford

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Grant highway is being widened to forty feet for a distance of more than two miles, west of Rockford city limits. The improvement is nearing completion. This is U. S. 20, known nearer Chicago as the Lake street highway.

FLORIDA BUILDS HOTELS TO LURE WINTER TOURIST

Miami Beach Ready for Record Year.

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—At no time in history has Miami Beach and south Florida been better prepared to greet, house, and entertain the thousands of Chicago motorists who are expected to spend their winter vacations in the region.

Since the last of the visitors left here late in the spring Miami Beach probably has been busy. Nineteen new hotels have been constructed at an aggregate cost of $1,570,500. These projects have added 1,306 rooms to the city's hotel capacity. Sixty-nine new apartment buildings have been erected, adding 757 units. These structures cost $1,472,975.

Residential Construction Up.

In addition to the housing facilities for visitors and transients 204 private residences have been constructed at an aggregate cost of $2,416,160. This is an average of $11,843 for each dwelling.

Two new theaters are being erected, which will give the city a total of five modern, air cooled theaters. Five new school buildings are under construction, costing $525,000.

Although Miami and Miami Beach are expecting the greatest winter season in history it is not believed that hotel and apartment rentals will be higher than in past years. The facilities added during the summer are expected to keep the rates at a minimum. Even when the peak of travel is reached early in January it is hoped by local civic leaders that a majority of the owners will be satisfied to accept a reasonable rent and create good will rather than take a chance on holding out for the higher fee.

Ship Reservations Heavy.

Besides the automobile travel expected this winter the railroad and steamship companies are making plans to handle a much larger volume of business than ever before.

Yacht reservations are heavier than any year since 1928, and harbor officials here conservatively estimate an increase of 25 per cent in yachts under 100 feet and 50 per cent in vessels over 200 feet.

The telephone company is enlarging facilities for a great season, and it reports more telephones connected right now than any time in history, not excluding the boom times. The electric light company officials are optimistic and believe the seasonal rush will become heavy right before the Christmas holidays.

SHOW MANNIKINS

Here are an assorted three of the twenty mannikins who will take part in a fur fashion parade at the automobile show this week. Reading from top to bottom: Rae Kehoe, blonde; Rosemary Porter, red haired, and Mary Owens, brunette.

TO PREVENT WINTER SKIDS.

In order that a car may be handled well on slippery streets it should have equalized brakes. Tires should be matched for equal tread wear in pairs—the two front and the two rear—and the air pressure should be uniform in pairs also.

REO FLYING CLOUD

Reo's 1936 offering is a new Flying Cloud. Its six cylinder engine is rated at 90 horse power. Brakes are hydraulic. Helical gears give silent transmission operation in all three forward gear ratios. A steel panel has been introduced to the roof as a safety measure. The general styling is moderately streamlined.

CHICAGO AUTOS WILL BE TESTED IN SAFETY DRIVE

Defective Cars Blamed for Many Accidents.

BY WILLIAM C. BRANDES.

[Asst. Trafic Engineer, City of Chicago.]

Another step in the promotion of safety on the streets will soon be undertaken by Chicago in the form of compulsory, periodical mechanical inspection of all motor vehicles owned by residents.

It does not appear logical that every motor car that is capable of being driven be allowed to roam about our streets unless it is equally capable of being stopped. A passenger automobile or truck that is deficient in mechanical equipment or to which the various safety devices are not in proper working order is as dangerous to the welfare of a community as a mad bull would be in a picnic grove.

See Accidents Reduced.

From experience in other cities where vehicle inspection has been inaugurated, it is believed that trafic accidents can be materially reduced in Chicago by a similar measure. Last year there were almost 1,700 injury accidents. Many of them were caused by vehicles that were mechanically defective. Obviously much human suffering might have been saved entirely had every automobile been in good working order.

It is intended that tests be made at least twice a year. Such inspection will cover brakes, lights, steering gear, horn, rear-view mirror, windshield wiper, and such other devices which are considered necessary to the proper use of a motor car.

Must Repair Defects.

If a vehicle fails to pass the prescribed tests, the owner will be required to have his machine repaired within a reasonable length of time, after which it is to be returned for another test. All vehicles must finally pass all tests within the prescribed limits. To identify tested vehicles, some form of visible emblem will be attached to the car.

FISHER STRESSES SAFETY DESIGNS OF THE NEW CARS

BY WILLIAM A. FISHER.

[President, Fisher Body Corporation.]

WILLIAM A. FISHER.

The bodies of the 1936 automobiles are built for safety. Manufacturers are using the best talent of the nation's best engineers and are not sparing costs, as a contribution from the industry to the country's efforts to reduce trafic accidents and the serious results of motoring mishaps.

With few exceptions safety glass has become standard for windows as well as windshields. Flying splinters of the ordinary type glass inflict mutilating injuries in collisions that otherwise would hurt no one.

A solid steel top has gained wide usage. This protects passengers from any heavy object that might fall on the car or any blow from the top that might accompany some such accident as hitting a telegraph pole.

Skidding of Automobiles Classified in Five Types

Automobiles are subject to five types of skidding: The braking skid, which is most common, caused by too sudden application of the brakes; the steering skid, whereby the car is guided either incompetently or carelessly, causing the back of the car to swing around to the front; the power skid, caused by too much engine speed, which results in spinning wheels without normal traction; the traction skid, resulting from smooth tires on oily or icy roads, and the mis-alignment skid, which is often overlooked, affecting cars driven with wheels out of line.

MICHIGAN PRACTICE ON AUTO LICENSES ACCLAIMED BY HILL

BY ROY W. HILL.

[Chevrolet Zone Manager.]

ROY W. HILL.

A neighboring state—Michigan—has set an example that it is to be hoped every other state will follow sooner or later, in taking action to permit 1936 license plates to be purchased and used on and after Nov. 1 of the present year.

The advantage to the motorist is obvious. He may buy a 1936 model at the automobile show and use his new car from the date of delivery all through next year, for only one year's license fee. In states where this rating is not in effect, the purchaser of a 1936 model must obtain a 1935 license for the remainder of this year, and within two months make an additional outlay for his 1936 license. In many cases the extra cost is sufficient to induce a motorist to postpone the purchase of his car until after the beginning of the new year.

EVANSTON'S AUTO SAFETY INSPECTION

A mechanic of the Evanston police department is shown testing headlights in the suburb's compulsory inspection of automobiles such as is contemplated for Chicago.

EXPLAINS STATE MOTOR VEHICLE SPEED STATUTE

Trafic Committee Aid Tells Regulations.

BY ROBERT H. NAU.

[Secretary, Street Trafic Committee, Chicago Association of Commerce.]

How fast? How slow?

The Illinois general assembly this year passed legislation of utmost importance to the motorists concerning speed regulations within and without city limits.

The outstanding changes include the removal of the 45 mile an hour prima facie speed limit on rural highways; the increase of speed limits for passenger cars in business districts, residential areas, and a so-called suburban district; delegation to cities, villages and park districts the authority to alter prima facie limits; increase in the speed rates of commercial vehicles, and a minimum speed regulation.

A recent investigation reveals that Illinois became the 24th state to abandon a fixed speed limit regulation in the rural areas. The basic rule which applies sets forth that "no person shall drive a passenger vehicle at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper having a regard for the trafic and the use of the way or so as to endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person."

All Limits Increased.

Within city and village limits in business districts the speed limit has been increased from 15 to 20 miles an hour, while the rate in residential areas has been raised from 20 to 25 miles an hour. In the old law the territory outside of business and residential areas, but still within the city limits, the speed limit was increased from 25 to 35 miles an hour. These areas now are known as suburban districts.

The fact that the speed of a vehicle is lower than the prima facie limit does not relieve the driver from the duty to decrease his speed when approaching and crossing an intersection, when approaching and going around a curve, approaching the top of a hill, when traveling upon any narrow or winding roadway, or when a special hazard exists with respect to pedestrians or other trafic, or by reason of weather or highway conditions. Speed shall be decreased to avoid colliding with any person or vehicle.

May Change Speed Rate.

After an engineering and trafic investigation, the state highway department may determine a reasonable or safe speed for any section of the road or approach to an intersection. The law requires that any speed determined upon shall be posted for the guidance of the motorist. In no case, however, may a rate higher than 45 miles an hour be set by the department.

Local authorities also may determine speeds at intersections and on certain streets after an investigation. They are limited, however, to a maximum of 45 miles an hour. So far as Chicago is concerned, through police order and in conjunction with the courts, a limit of 45 miles has been determined for most sections of the Outer drive, while on other park boulevards and city streets the speed has been set at 35. However, the motorist must take cognizance of the provision in the state law with respect to traveling 20 miles an hour in a business district and 25 miles in a residential area.

Permit 17 to 28 Miles Per Hour.

In effect, the Chicago park district and the city of Chicago have been setting average speeds for certain streets for some time in the operation of their several progressive signal systems. In these the rate of travel has been set as low as 17 miles an hour in some, as in the loop, while others average as high as 28 miles an hour, as in La Salle street.

For the first time more definite attempt has beed made by legislation to speed up the motorist who impedes or blocks the normal and reasonable flow of trafic. This section is known as the minimum speed regulation. Police officers are authorized to enforce this provision by directions to the driver. It is a misdemeanor for a driver to wilfully disobey or refuse to comply with the directions of the officer.

BUILT IN TRUNKS

Built-in trunks are found on a majority of the 1936 sedans. This shows the interior of a luggage and tire carrier as built by Fisher Bodies for one of the General Motors line.

Safe Driving Depends on Conditions Lying Ahead

Safe drivers subconsciously analyze trafic conditions 200 to 300 feet ahead. You should be able to visualize what trafic conditions ahead will be when you get there. The situation ahead may appear safe when you first observe it, but it may be dangerous by the time you arrive. The faster you are going, the farther ahead you must look.

Illinois Trafic Code Requires Hand Signals

Hand signals by automobile drivers are required under the uniform act regulating trafic on the highways in Illinois. According to this act, no person shall turn a vehicle, stop, or suddenly decrease its speed without first having given adequate warning to motorists in the rear, or approaching from the opposite direction, or to pedestrians.

HUPMOBILE 4 DOOR

Hupmobile for 1936 has a six developing 101 horse power and an eight developing 120 horse power. The general body style is of the aerodynamic type with vertical grilling over the radiator and with headlights built into a single unit with front fenders and the hood.

A superdrive, an extra high fourth forward gear, has been adapted for the sturdy engines to deliver a maximum of vehicle speed with a minimum of revolutions per minute.

The extra high, reducing engine speeds 30 per cent, goes into operation automatically when the vehicle speed exceeds forty miles an hour.

BY WILLIAM J. BOGAN.

[Superintendent, Chicago Public Schools.]

The schools have always felt that safety was an important part of the educational program. During the last year the safety program has been intensified to assist in the elimination of trafic accidents and fatalities both to school children and adults.

In the elementary schools, safety lessons are placed before the children. Safety posters, motion pictures, and all other means at their disposal are used to educate the child in habits of safety.

In addition, the School Boy Safety Patrols, who take charge of the school children at the crossings on their way to and from school, have received new regulations which, it is hoped, will make them even more efficient than in the past. These boys are not policemen and do not control trafic, but during a lull in trafic endeavor to see that their schoolmates cross the streets safely.

Fatalities Are Reduced.

The record of child fatalities and injuries in Chicago shows that the work of the Safety Patrols has resulted in a definite decrease of accidents and fatalities among school children while in the adult group there has been an increase during the last few years.

In the high schools, safety education has in the past been rather sporadic, but at the present time an attempt is being made to educate young drivers into habits of safety which, it is hoped, will carry over into the future, thereby saving not only their own lives but other potential victims of the automobile.

In each high school under the direction of the principal, a safety commission has been appointed to place before the students the problem of safe and sane driving and the safety of pedestrians in general.

Permission Is Required.

In addition, the commission regulates automobile trafic about the school building. Students expecting to drive their cars to and from school must furnish the commission with parents' permission and a statement of the need of such transportation. If approved by the commission, definite parking space is assigned to the pupil where possible. Cars are not permitted to be operated except for transportation to and from school.

Slippery Leaves Autumn Hazard to Auto Drivers

Masses of wet leaves, topped with a thin dry layer, constitute one of the fall hazards that annually increase the automobile accident rate. The danger, although greater along country highways where cars travel more rapidly, is also present in many built-up sections.

TRIP SOUTH BY ROUTE 41 NOW IS ALL PAVED

Many Interesting Points of History Await.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—United States 41 drops down the North American continent from Copper Harbor, Mich., through Chicago, to Fort Myers, Fla., cutting through the heart of the republic.

Your trip from Chicago to Florida this winter, if it follows 41, will take you over an all-paved road. Through Terre Haute you go to Vincennes, where French from Quebec established a fur trading post in 1702. Much history of the middle west was made there.

Continuing, the route goes through Evansville to Nashville. This is the state capital and a manufacturing and educational center. Twelve miles from the city, and open to visitors every day, is the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson. The Parthenon in Nashville, housing an art collection, is a replica of the old Greek temple on the Acropolis.

Now into Far South.

Now you will be getting into the far south. From Nashville it's 146 miles to Chattanooga. Chickamauga battlefield, across the line in Georgia a few miles south of Chattanooga, where 34,000 men were lost in one of the bloodiest battles of the civil war, is now a vast national park, dotted with more than two hundred monuments.

The "circle tour" of Chattanooga and environs, sixty miles long, includes Chickamauga-Chattanooga National Military park, Signal mountain, Lookout mountain, and Missionary ridge.

See Tennessee Canyon.

Signal mountain, north of the city, and more than two thousand feet above sea level, offers a view of the Grand Canyon of the Tennessee from a vantage point reached by automobile.

Lookout mountain rises 2,225 feet. There was fought the "Battle Above the Clouds" in the civil war. A motor road ascends the hill.

From Missionary ridge, where monuments mark locations of engagements of the civil war, one gets an excellent view of the industrial city below.

Lonesome Travelers Easy Targets for Hitch-Hikers

Expert hitch-hikers testify that lonesome commercial travelers are the most susceptible, and the easiest time to get rides is in that period soon after lunch when most drivers are at peace with the world.

NEW PIERCE-ARROW

Pierce-Arrow, Pullman car of the boulevards, has an eight and a twelve in its 1936 line, developing 150 and 185 horsepower, respectively. With the engines stepped up, there has been a corresponding improvement in the power brakes and in the ruggedness of the frame.

In appearance the radiator lines are narrower and other front end contours have been modified in keeping with the popular trend without diverting from the style characteristics of this make.

A new transmission operates quietly in first and in reverse as well as in second and third. An automatic fourth forward gear ratio reduces engine revolutions during rapid cruising.

COURTESY PAYS AUTOIST; HELPS REDUCE MISHAPS

Unselfish Driver Fair to Others.

BY SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS.

[Director, National Safety Council.]

The courteous motorist is the unselfish motorist. He is one who has full consideration at all times for the rights of other users of the highways, whether motorists or pedestrians. He has a most laudable good sportmanship and follows policy of "give and take" at the wheel. He is one who disciplined himself to keep his temper under any and all of the many vexations which constantly arise on the highway.

Not only does he keep himself under control, but also he keeps his car under control. He regulates his speed in accordance with the existing conditions of trafic, keeping in mind the unseen hazards of the road as well as those which are obvious. In short, to be a courteous driver, one must, first of all, be a self-disciplined driver.

Plays Fair with Officer.

The courteous motorist is also courteous and fair to the trafic officer. He recognizes the absurdity of contributing, as a tax payer, to paying the salaries of trafic policemen and the cost of trafic control signals and signs and then trying to nullify the efforts of the officer, by fooling or bulldozing him or bribing him—or of violating the clear indications of the signs and signals that he has helped to pay for.

Finally, the courteous driver is fair to pedestrians. He does not scare them or splash them with mud or water. He recognizes the moral and legal rights of the pedestrian, who is half across the street when the light changes, to complete his crossing. He yields to the man on foot, when making a right or left turn. The discourtesy of many drivers, on these points, is one of the main reasons why so many pedestrians still prefer to cross in the middle of the block where they have to watch in only two directions.

Lack of Courtesy Blamed.

Lack of courtesy is thus a direct or an indirect factor in a large percentage of motor vehicle accidents, although it is equally true that any motorist, even one with ingrained Chesterfieldian manners, can still become involved in a most serious highway tragedy.

There is no one cause for these accidents. The person who says that the cause of highway accidents is lack of courtesy, or is speed, or is liquor, or is bad brakes, or any other one thing simply shows that he is not a thorough student of the problem.

1,800 U. S. Children Killed Playing on Streets in Year

Last year 1,800 children were killed and 46,160 injured while playing in public streets throughout the country. The injuries of persons of all ages in automobile accidents included: Fractured spines, 950; broken bones; 77,280; severe shock with contusions and lacerations, 186,030; sprains, dislocations, etc., 91,580; cuts, bruises, and other minor shocks, 555,230.

Zagreb Trafic Offenders Made to Deflate Tires

Policemen in Zagreb, capital of Croatia-Slavonia, Yugoslavia, have introduced a novel and effective method of dealing with violators of motor regulations. Instead of arrest and subsequent penalty, the offender is ordered to "pull over" and instructed to deflate all tires. Accidents have decreased materially, it is said.

HAND SIGNALS

When you slow down or stop, your arm should be lowered as in the illustration.

Note the position of your car in the diagram. This is highly important. You are now ready to make your left turn. The arm signal required for this maneuver is shown in the illustration: Arm straight out.

You make the right turn with the arm raised, as indicated in the illustration above. Your car should be in the position shown in the diagram.

SLIPPING CLUTCH.

When the speed of the car does not conform with the speed of the engine, look for a slipping clutch. The clutch should be adjusted without delay, as plates may become damaged beyond repair.

ENGINEERS FINISH 10 YEAR CYCLE IN AUTO DESIGN

BY N. F. HADLEY.

[Chief Engineer, Plymouth Motor Corp.]

N. F. HADLEY.

An engineering cycle just completed started back in 1925, with the development of the present type high compression, high speed engine. This development marked the beginning of modern performance and economy. Naturally, the increased power developed by the high speed engine necessitated comparable safety and comfort improvements. The industry met this necessity with four wheel brakes and the adoption of shock absorbers as standard equipment. The cycle swung toward increases in size during 1927, 1928, and 1929, with the engineers designing bigger cars on longer wheelbases than ever before. Power was stepped up to take care of these increases in size.

1936 Willys Emphasizes Economy of Operation

Economy is again emphasized in the 1936 Willys. The four cylinder engine of 48 horse power is retained in bodies little changed in appearance. Due mainly to its light weight, the car is said to get as much as 35 miles per gallon of gasoline. Passenger car models include a four door sedan and a two passenger coupe in both standard and de luxe design. There are two commercial units, a panel delivery and a cab pick-up.

FORD EXPANSION PROGRAM TO HIT 32 MILLION MARK

Completion of Project Planned Next Year.

Henry Ford is in the midst of a $32,000,000 expansion and modernization program to be completed by next summer. A little over a year ago it was announced that about $20,000,000 would be spent in construction, but the plans have grown as they progressed.

The largest single project is that of the hot strip and cold finishing steel mills, which are scheduled to begin production this winter. The mills together with the present facilities will give Ford a supply of steel sufficient for a production of 3,000 cars a day. The expanded blast furnace department can produce 1,500 tons of pig iron daily to supply the foundry and the steel mills.

To Cast Alloy Steel.

Also going into production this winter will be new units of the Rouge foundry for the casting of alloy steel. Modernization of the central power house will be finished next year. With the installation of a 1,400 pound pressure boiler and a new 110,000 kilokatt turbo generator, a duplicate of one already in use, Ford will have the largest high pressure power house in the world.

The boiler will produce steam at the highest temperature yet achieved in American industry. This furnace burns pulverized coal at the rate of 30 tons an hour; the total power house consumption will be at the rate of 2,000 tons a day.

A coke ovens construction project also is under way. An additional 8,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day will be available, despite the fact that two coke oven batteries now in use will be torn down.

Moves Fair Building.

Soon after Thanksgiving, visitors to the Rouge plant will be received in the rotunda of the Ford exposition seen at the World's Fair in Chicago last year. This has been transported from A Century of Progress grounds and reconstructed opposite the present administration building. One thousand tons of structural steel and 140,000 square feet of Indiana limestone were required for the structure.

Climaxing the improvement plans at the Rouge is an extensive project, designed to make necessary minor additions and changes throughout the entire plant, in which hardly a building or a department will be missed. This work is well under way.

Beyond the Rouge plant program are a number of Ford "little industry" projects which carry on the Henry Ford idea of decentralization of industry. Construction of several new "little industry" plants, establishing small Ford factories in rural communities scattered throughout the Detroit territory, is either under way or scheduled to be started soon.

LIQUID AUTOS

This giant bucket is pouring liquid steel in Henry Ford's Rouge river plant. It's the beginning of a long process of refining, rolling, pressing, pounding, grinding, and polishing that will end at another side of the factory by automobiles being driven from the assembly lines.

EXHAUST FUMES A WINTER PERIL FOR MOTORISTS

Colorless, odorless, tasteless carbon monoxide is riding this fall with thousands of motorists, imperiling their lives and those of every person they meet on the road.

Present in the exhaust gases of every gasoline engine in inverse proportion to the efficiency of the motor, carbon monoxide increases in potential deadliness with colder weather. It seeps through floorboards into automobiles with leaky exhaust systems. It swirls before motorists following heavy trafic. It may be caught in wind eddies that pursue all but perfectly streamlined cars and be carried into driving compartments.

In small quantities it induces heavy-headedness among motorists, slowing their reaction time. In larger quantities it puts them into a drugged sleep that often overpowers them before they can stop their cars.

Tests held in Evanston by the police accident prevention squad of that city demonstrated that carbon monoxide was present in 60 per cent of the automobiles examined.

RECKLESS USE OF HORN HELD TRAFIC MENACE

Apply Brakes Instead, Says Fleming.

BY GEORGE FLEMING.

[Secretary, Keep Chicago Safe Committee.]

The automobile horn, when used indiscriminately or when exceptionally loud, is a menace to safety. It is a disturbance to community peace and, more important, it is a cause of irritation and momentary panic with resultant accidents.

A motorist blowing his horn at a group of pedestrians crossing the street will send one bolting ahead, another jumping back, and freeze a third, each responding to his own reflexes. Such confusion frequently is fatal.

Some reckless drivers—and we're all too reckless—use their horns instead of their brakes where caution is demanded. Some fight their way through congestion with futile impatience by use of the horn.

An explosive horn blast is startling to any driver. In that split second of fear there's a momentary loss of control of the car.

Many horns are too loud for city use. Something should be done to curb their manufacture and sale. City police, in the interest of public peace and of public safety, are arresting the more conspicuous horn blowers under a Chicago ordinance. There's a new state law prohibiting the use of horns emitting an unusual or excessively loud sound.

How Tourists Spent 3 Billion Last Summer

Of the 3 billion dollars spent by tourists throughout the country this year, $800,000,000 paid for gasoline, oil, and garage work, and about the same amount for accommodations. Meals cost tourists $830,000,000, and $245,000,000 went for between-meal refreshments, especially candy and ice cream. Theater and moving picture house cashiers took in $325,000,000 from vacationists.

Use of Cold Test Oils Recommended in Winter

For utmost protection, service, and satisfaction, the new lighter, cold test oils recommended by manufacturers should be used in winter.

I AM THE CAR OF 1936

■ ■ ■ I have been designed to give you greater pleasure and greater safety. The first is accomplished by brilliant new styling and performance that will thrill you to your finger tips. The second results from better braking, better bodies and an almost universal use of Safety Glass All-Around. There is hardly a manufacturer who does not provide it as standard equipment.

Nothing in automotive history indicates more clearly the manufacturer's willingness to give the public what it wants than the remarkable rapidity with which Safety Glass All-Around has been made so readily and easily available. And there has seldom, if ever, been such general acceptance of an automotive product as that now accorded the Safety Glass made by Libbey·Owens·Ford. Buick, Cadillac, Graham, LaSalle, Oldsmobile and Pontiac use L·O·F Safety Glass All-Around in all models; Chevrolet uses it for all Safety Glass requirements; Auburn, Cord, Lincoln, Packard, Reo, Studebaker and Willys use it for a large part of their requirements.

Such significant recognition of one Safety Glass can imply but one thing . . . that it is unquestionably a product of marked superiority.

NEW YORK RIVER ROAD ELEVATION MAKES PROGRESS

Steel Arches Closing Gap from 72d to 76th Street.

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Arches of steel straddling their way along the Hudson river northward from 72d street gladden the passing motorist's heart these crisp autumn days with evidence of steady progress toward the completion of the much discussed "super" express motor route leading from the lower tip of Manhattan to points 50 miles or more upstate.

The steel work will carry the west side elevated highway, nucleus of the project, another six blocks farther on toward the top of the island, where the route is to span Spuyten Duyvil and connect with the Henry Hudson parkway. The elevated structure now ends at 72d street. The new "link" will carry it over a part of the New York Central freight yards, now being roofed over, and head it on along the water's edge. It is hoped to complete the stretch some time in January. This will extend the road as far north as 76th street.

Material in Making.

As the next step in the northward progress of the route, a grade crossing elimination at 79th street has been approved to cost 1⅓ million dollars. Contracts for the construction of a link to run from 76th to 79th street are already on the program. The concrete piers to support the bridge over the Harlem ship canal from Inwood Park to Spuyten Duyvil are being set. The steel for that span is being fabricated at the mills and is scheduled to be set in place before the end of the year. The bridge over Dyckman street into Inwood Park is also slated for completion by the first of the new year.

Construction of a new southern link to the highway to carry the structure twenty-five blocks farther toward the Battery or approximately to Rector street has been ordered by Borough President Samuel Levy of Manhattan and work on that phase of the improvement is expected to get under way soon.

Plans and specifications for the so-called "midtown link," the only remaining gap, have been drawn by engineers and the contract for construction is ready to be awarded. This link will straddle 12th avenue from 46th to 57th streets, where trafic now drops down to grade. With the completion of this link it will be possible for the motorist in a hurry to speed from 72d to Canal street without a stop at a saving of from twenty to thirty minutes' time.

Ultimately it is proposed to extend the highway on down to the Battery.

Extend Hudson Highway.

Within two years—long before the city's proposed world fair is scheduled to open—it will be possible for the motorist to drive from a point up the Hudson opposite West Point to the congested Wall street district in less than two hours without breaking the speed limit or his neck. The state and Westchester county already have created an express passenger car route from Clarence Fahrenstock Memorial park in Putnam county down the new Eastern State parkway, Bronx river extension, and Sawmill River parkway to Van Courtlandt park. Nearly all grade crossings have been eliminated.

The extension of the highway north from 72d street involves a Riverside park beautification project, with the park extending down over the roofed railroad tracks in places. Many indentations of the river bank are to be filled in creating a new straightened bulkhead line much farther out. Approaches and underground passes at 79th and 96th streets and below the Claremont inn near 125th street, similar to those on some of the latest Long Island boulevards, will feature the extension project.

The entire Riverside project is expected to involve about 17 million dollars before it is completed—7 million dollars to construct the highway extension and 10 million dollars to cover the railroad tracks.

The elevated highway when completed from Canal to 72d street will cost in the neighborhood of 25 million dollars. The estimated cost of the proposed new links to carry the structure on south to Battery place is about 6 million dollars.

Saving in Lives.

Even in its uncompleted state and in the few years it has been in operation the highway already represents the saving of many lives in trafic accidents and of millions of dollars' worth of time. It is only one of many such time savers in the city's constantly expanding system of motor speedways, the others including such well known improvements as the Pulaski highway skirting the Jersey meadows between Jersey City and Newark; the Holland tunnel.

AUTO DISTRIBUTOR URGES CONSTRUCTION OF ELEVATED ROADS

BY HUGO WEHMEIER.

[General Manager, Community Motors, Pontiac Distributor.]

We of the automobile business are very much concerned about trafic accidents. For years I have noticed that in general discussions of the subject there's a tendency to blame speed.

HUGO WEHMEIER.

Bear in mind that I am not making the statement that high speed driving does not contribute to motor fatalities, but I do make the statement that speed is not the chief cause of accidents. If I am informed correctly, the majority of fatalities and accidents happen at speeds under 40 miles an hour.

It is far safer to drive a car at 60, 65 or 70 miles an hour under proper conditions than it is to drive a car 30 miles an hour under improper conditions. For a maximum of pleasure and utility from motor car operation, let's improve the conditions. Let Chicago build elevated highways for urban trafic. Let the state build rural highways with a physical separation between all opposing movements.

The automobile has contributed much to the social and economic welfare of America. Simply to curb its speed would retard further advancements. For further advancements we need facilities for rapid travel with safety.

ALL LOS ANGELES AWAITS WINTER TOURISTS' RUSH

Area Sleeked Up for New Business.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Nature lavished many bounties of weather and picturesque settings on California, and nowhere more than the area around Los Angeles. Endowed with winter advantages for human enjoyment not possessed to the same degree in other sections, Los Angeles has been quietly anticipating and preparing for a post-depression rush of travel that is heralded to start this month.

All "Sleeked Up."

Los Angeles, where the residents have limited the height of their buildings in the interests of blue sky, sunshine, and the panorama [not to mention earthquake protection]. Long Beach, with its miles of seashore esplanade and its great spectacle of the American navy at rest. The orange orchards with their burdened trees. San Diego with its acres of glistening white stucco architectural beauty on its Fair grounds. Hollywood with the color and liveliness of the movies. All have sleeked up during the last half year, so that even if not in deliberate preparation for the newcomers, the winter tourists will nevertheless profit by the effect.

California, which endeavors to turn back the jobless indigent at its border, has been dusting off the welcome mat to unroll at the stopping places of the auto traveler.

Financial Brass Tacks.

This favored locality, whose natural beauty combines with good roads and recreational advantages, has known enough to get down to financial brass tacks in its preparations to welcome visitors.

Apartment and bungalow court rents for those who wish to hold a place at least one month can be obtained quite reasonably. There is, as always, a disparity in the rates of the swank, as compared with the modest hotels, with the latter exacting no robbery upon a normal pocketbook. Fresh fruits and vegetables, which are common in Los Angeles the year 'round, come to the markets in such profusion that prices never leap high.

DUST DAMAGES ENGINES.

Road dust drawn through the carburetor produces additional wear on the motor. Air cleaners catch most of the dust and, consequently, should be inspected occasionally to make certain that they are fulfilling their purpose.

LONG ISLAND'S SPEED HIGHWAY OPEN IN JANUARY

Boulevard Will Extend for 30 Miles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—Unless bad weather interferes to an unforeseen degree another four-mile stretch of Long Island's newest and in many respects finest scenic highway, the Grand Central-Northern State parkway will be opened to trafic early in January.

The extension, officially designated the Interborough Parkway will carry the roadway into the heart of Brooklyn and connect it with arterial trafic channels leading to Manhattan over Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges and with through routes to Coney Island and other points along the South Brooklyn shore. Work on the extension is reported as being more than 80 per cent complete today.

Contracts have been let and preliminary work begun on another six-mile extension of the so-called motor express boulevard to carry it northwesterly from Kew Gardens to the new $40,000,000 Tri-Borough bridge now being swung across the East river to connect Manhattan, the Bronx and Queens boroughs. This link is to be opened sometime in 1936.

Plan 30 Miles More.

Ultimately, the highway is to be extended thirty miles further east along the backbone ridge of the island to connect with the almost equally sightly Southern State parkway just south of Commack. Surveys for this extension have the right-of-way acquired and other preliminary work completed, but the actual start of paving operations depends on the appropriation of the necessary funds either by a bond issue as in the case of most of the state's big highways or otherwise.

At present the highway runs from Queens boulevard in Kew Gardens to the Jericho Turnpike, a distance of fifteen miles. Seven miles of this stretch running from the boulevard to the Nassau county line is known as the Grand Central parkway and the remainder as the Northern State parkway.

Despite its many turns and curves—some of them fashioned, it has been suspected to the practical end of enhancing property values to the profit of the politically great and near-great—the highway is one of the most popular trafic arteries of the whole fast-growing Long Island system.

A recent census taken on the Grand Central parkway stretch showed a total of approximately 56,000 cars passing in both directions between 8 a. m. and midnight on a Sunday, while a later count at another point showed the trafic to exceed 4,000 cars an hour on the average between 2 and 7 o'clock on a Sunday afternoon.

While a theoretical speed limit of 35 miles an hour is maintained, motorists as a rule feel no qualms in keeping to a 45 mile pace or even more. The four trafic lanes are amply wide and the entire elimination of left hand turns and cross trafic enables cars to traverse virtually the entire stretch without once checking speed.

With completion of the northern spur of the highway and the Tri-Borough bridge, it will be possible for a motorist coming in from the west to cross the Washington bridge, traverse 125th street, Manhattan, and the Tri-Borough bridge and speed by way of the parkway system into the heart of Long Island in fraction of the time such a trip now requires.

NEW SEAL GIVES GAS TIGHT PLUGS TO AUTOS OF 1936

BY R. A. STRANAHAN.

[President, Champion Spark Plug Co.]

A new dry powder seal of secret formula has been developed to assure a gas tight spark plug for for the 1936 automobile. This is said to be the first time that it has been possible to employ a seal around the center electrode wire without a danger of bursting the core through expansion of the cement under heat.

R. A. STRANAHAN.

The new seal powder contains tals that interlock under pressure into a solid mass.

The various plastic cements previously used in conventional plugs expanded so much when hot that it was necessary to sacrifice gas tightness to some extent to prevent the core from breaking. This tolerance for expansion represented a loss of power, a reduction in the pressure exerted on the piston head by the burning fuel.

Automotive Detroit Approves Detroit's Big Home Medium—The News

The preference shown The Detroit News by automotive advertisers during 1935 was based upon its known capacity for reaching the purchasing power homes of Detroit and the concentration of Detroit News circulation in the homes of purchasing power.

More than 71% of the financially able homes of Detroit take The News and 76% of the circulation of The News is home delivered by exclusive Detroit News carriers. The Detroit News is therefore counsel to the whole family, which must be consulted when the purchase of anything so important as an automobile or other automotive product is involved.

An atmosphere of optimism engendered by the remarkable leadership and achievements of the automotive industry itself surrounds Detroit. Detroit is in a buying mood. Automotive or general advertisers can best capitalize on the present expansive spirit of Detroit by employing its one great home medium—THE NEWS.

Who will snap up your new Automobiles?

Switching people from spring- to winter-buying of new motor cars calls for careful planning. Most important is to concentrate your sales effort on style buyers . . . people who are first to buy what is new—people with money to spend—people who are buying now.

More of these first-to-buy people are gathered in New York than in any other single market. But how can you find these style-pursuing purchasers among New York's teeming millions? How can you most economically bring them into your salesrooms, ready to buy? Let's see how other advertisers are doing it.

Real estate men are selling new homes and renting larger apartments to your immediate prospects by placing more advertising in The New York Times than in any other New York newspaper.

Oil burner manufacturers are selling new installations to your immediate prospects by placing more of their couponed copy in The New York Times than in any other New York newspaper.

Financial houses are reaching your immediate prospects by placing more advertising in The Times than in any other newspaper.

Insurance advertisers, using largely keyed copy, are selling more insurance to your immediate prospects by placing more advertising in The Times than in any other New York newspaper.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE • • • JOHN B. WOODWARD, INC., 400 N. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

You are cordially invited to inspect Three new Motor Cars offered by Ford and Lincoln at the Automobile Show

NEW FORD V·8

The finest, safest, most dependable Ford ever built. The car that led all others in 1935 has been made still better for the new year. New beauty has been added to outstanding comfort, safety and performance. The Ford V-8 engine gives you distinct advantages in power, acceleration, smoothness and satisfaction . . . everything about the car is built to that same high standard. Many important quality features put the Ford in a class by itself for 1936.

LINCOLN-ZEPHYR

The V-12 cylinder LINCOLN-ZEPHYR, born in the Lincoln tradition, is new in idea and appearance. It accomplishes, for the first time in automotive history, a successful mingling of advanced principles of streamlining, and efficient, economical performance. It brings to the medium-price field wholly new standards of power, comfort, safety, beauty—and expresses, in its own field, Lincoln and Ford traditional ability to give outstanding value.

NEW LINCOLN

In the New Lincoln for 1936, coachmakers have combined a fresh interpretation of streamlining with Lincoln traditions of dignity. New fenders, front and rear, accent the car's graceful contours. The radiator shell is deeper, handsomer. Wheels are of the new welded-steel design. . . . Power is supplied by the famous Lincoln V-12 cylinder engine. Refinements this year make for smoother control, for more efficient, more silent operation.

Lusty Hues Proclaim Coats Must Be Colorful to Be Chic

By RHEA SEEGER.

EVEN the designers wearied of the long, somber procession of sable black coats, dark, practical brown wraps and the uninspired dozens of navy blue winter coats casually dabbed with unimportant patches of fur, or collared and cuffed with dull and uninterestingly pelts. The revolutionists then went into a huddle and staged what is perhaps the greatest comeback of brilliant color in a couple of fashion decades. Bright reds, still brighter greens, all in clear, strong shades, march snappily along with old gold colors, soft honey beige shades, occasional, but extremely wearable, English violet tones, and, of course, every vivid plaid known to the plaid designers.

To be distinctively coated this fall is to be coated with color, and that doesn't mean pale pastels, but exuberant, lusty colors, the brightest that have been seen in years. Afternoon coats, dress parade coats, and practical, general purpose coats all boast brilliant colorings, smartly accented with dark or light contrasting fur trim. Flat, silky furs are the most popular, nutria, Persion lamb, and galyak as sleek as satin.

Gray Only Somber Shade in High Standing.

You will find brilliant red coats contrasted with silvery gray furs such as krimmer and the less expensive iron gray goat and kidskins. You will find all kinds of kelly green wool coats sharply accented with inky black fur or the same bright green wraps trimmed with dark brown fur. Some of the best looking beige wool coats, exceptionally effective on slim, dark personalities, are luxuriously frosted with deep, dark brown fur such as nutria, beaver, kolinsky, ermine, brown Persian lamb, and galyak as sleek as satin.

Gray coats are the smartest affairs you can wear . . . a good gray shade is just as much of a background coat for all your winter wardrobe as a black. It goes with everything and is quite the season's biggest success worn with dark brown accessories. You'll find all shades of gray, from slate or stone gray to the deep, interesting iron grays achieved with a black and white mixture.

Hairy Materials Are Favorites.

Textures are tremendously important. You still can find the rich, suede-like fabrics for afternoon and gala coats, but the hairy materials, the jacquard weaves, ribs, and wales are smart, young, and new. Sleeves in the colored coats are accommodatingly full at the armholes, as in black and dark coats. Dresses made in the new silhouette will fit as easily under these bright numbers as they do under the dark models. Most of them have belts to cinch in tightly around the waistline, and all of them feature unusual fur trimming.

Two interesting new models are illustrated in the colored photographs . . . at the top, one of the most distinctive of wool coats, cut in a slim, fitted streamline, with a suede belt three inches wide at the waistline. The pointed, deep collar and the clever double cuffs are of the fur. The lower cuff fits tightly at the wrist, the upper flares widely for contrast. A pert hat has two feathers.

The lower coat is of semi-rough wool, with a plaster-on collar of fur front and back. The high, round, upstanding collar and the cocky little Russian hat are also of fur.

Both coats are available in a Chicago boulevard shop.

(For information on any item described in this article call Rhea Seeger, Superior 0100.)

● Below: A plastron collar of fur, front and back, lends distinction to this semi-rough wool coat. The extra upstanding collar and Russian hat are also fur.

Sponge Cake Encircles Novel Fillings in Clever New Desserts

By MARY MEADE.

JELLY ROLL without jelly sounds as odd as ham 'n' eggs without ham. But, to the initiated who know several superfillings to substitute for the regular fruit jelly, it's a perfectly logical, as well as delightful, dessert.

There are two such fillings we know—one a fluffy orange coconut affair, the other a rich and creamy caramel nut—that go into a tender sponge roll so beautifully that you're sure to forget all about jelly for the nonce. If you don't know about them, you're due for a special treat. Here are their working plans, along with an excellent recipe for the wherewithal in which to wrap them.

Cake Is Basis of Luscious Rolls.

FLUFFY SPONGE ROLL.

4 eggs
1 tablespoon cold water
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Beat the egg yolks, until light and lemon colored, with the cold water. Mix lightly with the sugar and vanilla and then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and, finally, the sifted dry ingredients. Pour into a flat baking pan, lined with well greased waxed paper, and bake at 325 degrees F. Take out on a cloth covered with granulated or powdered sugar while still hot cover with filling and roll tightly.

And now for those two delectable fillings:

COCONUT ORANGE FILLING.

2 tablespoons flour
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons water
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons grated orange rind
¼ cup moist shredded coconut

Blend together the flour, sugar, salt, fruit juices, and water, and cook slowly until thickened. Add the slightly beaten egg, continue cooking gently for one minute, and add the butter, orange rind, and coconut. Cool and spread on hot cake as soon as it comes from the oven.

Filling Prepared Before Cake.

Here's the other, which also has to be made before the roll cake, in order to be

Anyone Can Copy Dresses of Mme. Balsan

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt's Clothes Simple, Yet Epitome of Chic.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — [Special.] — The Paris dressmakers tell me that almost all of their customers, even the richest and most lavish, who spend twenty to fifty thousand a year on back decoration, come to them for make over and arrangement of last year's clothes. Thrift is a word that is not without honor among the famous forty. They do not spare the purse when they amass new clothes, for new clothes, fresh fashions, mean maintaining a reputation for being one of the few best dressed. On the other hand, no more do they scorn wearing some frock or other because it is of last year's vintage.

This is an excellent method for every girl and woman to employ. New clothes, good clothes are assets that may be worth any woman's hard cash and certainly are the price of prestige and even popularity in your circle. The number and kind of things to buy depend on the environment, and such things. However, some of the most famous women are careful planners and get up a wardrobe that is entirely adequate with the least number of units.

Mme. Balsan's Ensembles Always Extremely Simple.

Molyneux has just shown me, for example, the clothes that Mrs. Jacques Balsan bought for her trip to America, and they are an excellent example of what is needed for a wardrobe. Mrs. Balsan, you know, was born Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York's four hundred. She married the duke of Marlborough, but that's ancient history. Her present husband is Col. Jacques Balsan, colonel in the French aviation corps. He belongs to ten of the most exclusive clubs in Paris and they have a magnificent house in Paris and two châteaux, or castles if you prefer, in the French countryside. They are what the French call "sportive," and play with their own airplanes, yachts, balloons, and a stable of racing cars.

Mme. Balsan, who is still considered a great beauty, is tall and slim, with a beautifully modeled throat, and small, aristocratic head. She chooses her clothes to suit her type, regardless of fashions, and always buys simple things, made of the finest materials and trimmed with the choicest furs and whatnots. She is excessively shy of publicity and doesn't, as some of the famous forty do, maintain a press agent.

Two what might be called "general wear" ensembles, are included in her winter wardrobe. One is a frock with a loose, fingertip length coat, trimmed with astrakhan. Both are made of dark green wool. The other "general wear" ensemble is a black frock and moderately long cape, the frock trimmed with silk rope and the cape with silk cloky.

Evening Clothes Outnumber All Else in Wardrobe.

Evening clothes, as is the case with most women living a life in elegant social circles, are more numerous than anything else. There are sleeved dresses and wraps for informal parties and lowcut frocks and elaborate evening cloaks for grand evenings. Everything in this woman's wardrobe, however, even for formal evening, is exceedingly simple. Her jewels are superb and furnish all the elaboration she needs.

There are, in the wardrobe of every woman of elegance, several fur coats, and Mme. Balsan's is no exception. She has the inevitable mink or sable cloak, the ermine wrap, and a sports coat of some such fur as Alaskan seal. An astrakhan coat, too, is universal.

Typical of Mme. Jacques Balsan's evening wardrobe is the black chiffon frock No. 1. It is rather tailored in style and the skirt, though wide, doesn't look it. Enormous pink velvet roses virtually cover the daringly low cut bodice, which is one of the high fashion notes of the winter season.

Lemon Yellow Antelope Gloves Relieve Black Ensemble.

No. 2 shows one of the daytime ensembles that Mme. Balsan will wear this season in California and Paris. The cape and frock are made of dull black wool and the cape is lined with and has full length revers of black taffeta cloky, or matelasse. The dress has its ruffled and gathered neckline held by a rope of black taffeta. The sash is also a rope of black taffeta, tied in an enormous bow. The black hat has a big black bird poised daringly on the crown. Lemon yellow antelope gloves and bag give a smart touch of color to this all black ensemble.

Typical of the particular style that Mme. Balsan effects is the ensemble sketched and numbered 3. This coat and dress are made of dark Italian green woolen and are trimmed with black astrakhan, or Persian lamb, fur. The short coat is banded all around with the fur, in rather narrow bands, and is fastened only at the neckline under the astrakhan collar. A dashing toque of black astrakhan fur goes with this ensemble. It is worn tilted over the left eye. The dress of dark green wool, classic in its simplicity, is cut entirely on the bias in an expert way. The blouse fastens on three oversize black astrakhan buttons and buttons of the same fur hold the loose sleeves close to the wrists. A belt of black antelope buckles at the back of the waistline.

Paper Curtains Freshen Room at Small Cost

New Hangings Have Fast Colors, Are Rainproof, and Drape Gracefully.

PAPER accessories are playing an increasingly important and attractive rôle in the domestic scheme of things. Now we find the stores offering charming curtains and draperies manufactured from a new type of specially prepared paper. It is claimed for them that their colors will not run and that rain will not injure them. They are easily ironed and drape gracefully. They come in generous widths and lengths, all complete and ready to hang, even to the tie backs. And it goes without saying that they are inexpensive!

An ingenious idea, these paper curtains, especially during the holiday season, when one wants to dress up a room in something new at small cost.

There are entrancing little cottage sets, in all over, cross bar "self-weave" design. In each of these sets there are four curtains; the top ones are forty-three inches long and the bottom pair thirty-five inches long, and each is standard width. Some of the sets are ruffled. Others come in polka dot design without ruffles. They come in soft shades of peach, yellow, green, blue, orchid, and in black and white.

Draperies Boast Large Floral Chintz Design.

Again these paper curtains come in chintz effects, with small flowered patterns, in peach, yellow, and green. These are two and a half yards long and thirty-six inches wide. They may be had ruffled or in smartly tailored style, with inside edges and bottom hemmed and ready to hang.

Or, if by chance one wishes draperies, there are paper models in large floral chintz with French plait top. They come in single weight or double weight, in dark browns and mulberrys, rich blues and greens, and in yellow.

For the curtains, the hanging process is facilitated by a special tubular lining in the casing through which a curtain rod can slip. The draperies are to be hung with curtain hooks, fastened on the back in the usual manner.

Pressing Iron Should Be Only Slightly Warm.

While these paper window accessories cannot be washed, they are simple to iron. They are merely spread with the design face up on a dampened cloth—don't use a pad—and pressed with an iron only slightly warm. Care must be taken that the material is not torn by the point of the iron in the pressing.

Paper accessories such as table cloths, napkins, and towels were never so varied in assortment and charm. They are extremely convenient at informal gatherings of either children or grown ups.

Snapshots from Paris

- The color for evening this late fall is red. Every woman worth mentioning in Paris has one red evening frock.
- Mainbocher reports that most of his fashionable clients are adding rhinestone buttons and clips to their black daytime frocks.
- Velvet and lace are the two hits of the season for evening, with satin a close third.
- Women who are wearing colored broadcloth suits for daytime this fall are numberless and many famous fortyites are wearing this fabric made into evening cloaks.
- Schiaparelli tells me that women in Paris to order her evening frock with satin pantaloons showing below the front of the skirt are many. The Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes and Comtesse de Robilant both have one of these spectacular frocks.

CARAMEL NUT FILLING.

⅔ cup light brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons milk
⅛ cup flour
1⅓ cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped nut meats

Blend together the sugar, butter, and milk, and cook slowly until of a waxy texture. Mix the flour with part of the milk to form a smooth paste and carefully stir into a mixture of the cooked brown sugar and remaining milk. Cook until thickened, add the slightly beaten egg yolks, cook for two minutes longer over a low heat, and cool. Before spreading on the warm roll cake add the vanilla and nut meats.

Homemade Toy Easily Made of Simple Things

By Virginia Garberson.

HOMEMADE playthings for children ask only the simplest of materials and a wee twist of ingenuity. Frequently cherished more than elegant "store" toys, these play materials may be found among the regulation supplies of most households.

Blocks may be made from small wooden cheese and cigar boxes, with their lids nailed down. Older children will be delighted with the task of lackering them in gay colors for their younger brothers and sisters. Buildings made from these same blocks may be roofed in professional manner with corrugated packing box paper.

For housekeeping play the small homemaker will be delighted with a set of paper plates and cups. With three coats of shellac these become sturdy enough to take hard knocks and daily usage in the doll family. And, speaking of dolls, a few spare minutes turn an old stocking foot or partly worn face cloth into a charming and cuddly doll baby. Faces may be painted on with crayon and then lightly pressed on the wrong side with a warm iron.

The small sculptor is delighted with a cake of soap, a kitchen knife, and an orangewood stick. A soap which is neither dry or crumbly works best, and a larger block may be made by softening the ends of two cakes in water and pressing them together.

Colored sawdust is fun in juvenile circles. The sawdust may be obtained from a sawmill, or occasionally from a carpenter. A strong dye powder is sprinkled over the sawdust to tint it and the whole moistened with cold or hot water. Stir lightly until the color is mixed and allow the sawdust to dry. A flat wooden packing box with raised sides, several bags of colored sawdust, and the preschooler is set for a morning of busy play.

First Duty of Hostess to Put Guests at Ease

Two Famous Phrases of Mme. de Stael Will Invariably Turn the Trick.

By Jane Hathaway.

BEFORE I offer a game to the readers of this column today I want to give you the secret of a great Frenchwoman who lived in the time of the first Napoleon. It is said that this woman made her reputation as a hostess by the use of two phrases. The first was used as she greeted her guest: "You have come at last." The second, as the guest took leave: "Must you go so soon?"

This was the famous Mme. de Staël, whose salon was sought by the wisest and wittiest French people of her time. Her secret may be used by any one with the happiest results. Every guest feels a pleasant glow when a hostess leaves the impression that he is especially desired and wanted. The successful hostess is not only the one who devises clever games to entertain her friends, but, even more truly, the one who makes them feel that they are members of her charmed circle.

Ask Shy Friend to Take Responsibility for Others.

Just one more general suggestion to the hostess who wants to make her guests feel at home. You may call this a bit of a trick, if you will, but it does help wonderfully. Have you a guest whom you like tremendously, but who is shy in the presence of those he doesn't know? Do you almost dread inviting such a friend to your party, knowing he will retire into his shell and look miserable?

Forestall such misery for him and for yourself by calling this shy friend up beforehand and telling him that there are several people you want him to be especially nice to during the evening. They are a bit shy and will be so flattered if he will go out of his way to talk to them. Tell him a little about these people, so he won't have to start without any idea of their likes and dislikes. Assure him he needn't tie himself to any one for the whole evening, but beg him to help you make this party a success. This bit of strategy is almost always successful, for it works on a well recognized principle. We all enjoy being depended on; we all like to be helpful. And it ends in the shy person, thus appealed to, becoming quite the star guest of the evening. Try this some time.

"Ghosts" a Game for Both Adults and Youths.

Now for a guessing game. Here is one entitled Ghosts. I played this at a country house in Michigan last summer, the other players being a well known Chicago lawyer, a University of Chicago professor, and two 15 year old girls. We were all interested every minute, so you may know this is a game which can be used by groups of all ages.

The host may begin by giving out a letter, the first of a word which he says he has in mind. Perhaps he will give the letter L. He may be intending to spell lemon. The next player says e, intending perhaps to spell letter. But the third doesn't want to add a t to the l and e, for that would spell a word, and the game is not to finish a word. So the third player says c, with the word "lecture" in mind. The penalty for finishing a word is becoming one-third of a ghost. The second offense results in the player's becoming two-thirds of a ghost, and the third time he spells a word, it's just too bad, for he is an entire ghost and is just left out of the game.

Now there are always those who, in playing this game, will take a chance, and, in order to avoid finishing a word, will give a letter which the other players feel has no relation to any word in the dictionary. Then this player may be challenged. He is obliged to tell the word he had in mind. Sometimes he has had none, and this awful fact is brought out! He is penalized as if he had finished a word.

One Hostess Created Merriment with Leaves.

A player cannot be challenged after the next player has given his letter. This is one of the best games I know of for a group of young people who enjoy a battle of wits. The dictionary should be at hand to decide points that may be questioned.

Before all the leaves are burned in the bonfires that blaze about this time, I want to suggest a game used—and, I believe, invented—by a hostess in a country town. She mounted a number of leaves on sheets of paper, numbered them, and asked her guests to name the trees from which the leaves came. I'm glad I didn't have to try that one, for I should have come out badly. But it was an interesting contest and showed which were the observing people.

If you write for help on your party problems, be sure to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Yours sociably, JANE HATHAWAY.

Intriguing Handkerchiefs Resemble English Samplers

SOME of the most surprising new handkerchiefs of the season are squares of linen printed to resemble old English cross-stitched samplers. They may be chosen with appropriate verses and quotations, and come in gay combinations of red, yellow, and black, green and yellow, or navy blue and red.

France and Switzerland, supposedly two of the most enlightened states in Europe, are about the only ones in which women do not have the vote.

A THREE-PIECE COSTUME

White galyak fashions the top coat and blouse of this three-piece costume. The skirt is of black transparent velvet. A smart black velvet scarf is worn and brought out over the coat when the latter is worn. There also is a white galyak beret.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Winter Brings Increased and Urgent Requests for Warm Clothing; Any Garments Which You Discard Are Solicited.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you! If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

By Sally Joy Brown.

"DO it now!" is the text for the day, and may it bring results! Good intentions won't strip closets of all wearable but seldom worn clothing. Neither will they pick up shoes gathering dust on the shelf and put 'em on shabby feet. But if you'll get them out and drop us a line or phone this office we'll see that they're transformed from their present state of uselessness to that of service.

Judging from my contacts the need for clothing appears to be greater than ever this year. Hence this call for immediate distribution of any apparel on hand. Winter doubles and triples requests for help, and each batch of letters paints more and more clearly the really desperate need existing in many homes in this locality.

Mrs. E. S.'s letter portrays briefly but pointedly her present position: "This is the first time in my life I have had to ask for help. I am 72 years old and have lived here in Chicago for 50 years. My husband, now 75, worked until two years ago, when his strength left him and compelled him to stop. We had saved a good, tidy amount, but lost most of it in bad investments. The remainder we used in the last two years, when we stalled off the acceptance of relief until we were penniless.

"Miss Brown, would you be so kind as to help me get some clothing, particularly a warm coat, size 40, stockings, and a pair of shoes, size 8? Your help would mean a great deal to me as, at present, it is impossible for me to go out."

The address is on the north side.

C. H., on the south side, is unemployed and ill, but feels that with suitable clothing he might be able to obtain work in spite of diabetes and leakage of the heart. A coat, size 54; shoes, size 9, and a hat, 7½, are his greatest needs.

"Dear Miss Brown: Would you please try to help me obtain a winter coat. I have a husband who has been an invalid for the last six years. I have ability as a salesperson and hope to be able to get at least a little work during the holiday season. It is imperative that I have a warm coat, size 40 or 42, so that I can leave the house to search for a job. MRS. J. H."

Mrs. J. P. also hopes to obtain work during the holiday rush, but needs a black or navy blue dress, size 40. She has been ill and unemployed for some time and is unable to purchase clothing.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am taking the liberty of writing to you as a court of last resort. Mr. R. is a spasmodic hospital patient, unable to obtain employment for that reason, and for the last year we have been unable to obtain clothing from the relief gency assisting us. We have a girl almost a year old, a 20 month old boy, and a 13 year old girl, and can use anything in wearing apparel from underclothing to outer garments. Our 13 year old girl is especially in need of a warm winter coat or jacket. She is thin blooded and always is cold. I am willing to try to alter anything you may be able to obtain for us. MRS. J. R."

From Mrs. A. C.: "My husband has had little work in the last three years and we are receiving relief at present. The agency has been unable to supply us with either shoes or clothing. The clothing we now have simply won't hold together much longer, and our feet actually are 'on the ground.' When the first snow comes we will have to keep the children home from school. There are six of us—three boys, 12, 7, and 2 years old; one girl, 16 years old, and my husband and myself."

If there's a new radio in your home wouldn't you like to pass along your discarded one if it's in working order? The patients in a ward in one of the municipal sanitariums have written to me requesting an instrument, which will be greatly appreciated by these invalids, who have no diversion or entertainment. The ward number and name of the sanitarium will be given to any interested reader.

We also have a request from a patient in a local sanitarium. He is anxious to obtain discarded packs of playing cards for his own use and for distribution among the other patients. If you've recently purchased a new supply for your bridge games perhaps you'd like to forward the old ones to this institution which shelters numerous men and women who have little or no recreation.

"Dear Miss Brown: I have a young baby 5 months old. I need a buggy for her, particularly for our trips to the infant welfare station, which is a mile away from our home, and a two mile walk with a baby in arms is rather exhausting for me. My husband will be glad to go any place to call for a carriage.—Mrs. T. J. M."

Milk Important Ingredient of Effective Diet

Its Qualities as a Food Make It Indispensable in Balanced Regimen.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

SO many queries have reached me pertaining to the milk diet that I feel it best to use the column today to explain certain of the frequently asked questions.

Yes, it is a diet you can follow the year around, in the cold weather as well as in the warm.

No, milk doesn't fatten when you incorporate it as a food, which it is, into the day's menus. If you ate hearty meals, and atop of these drank an inordinate amount of milk, of course you'd put on weight. But as the scientific diets are worked out today, with milk as the important ingredient, it's food balance and health and strength maintenance that are supported. Your other food suggestions are not stripped to the bone in this sane new way of reducing.

Perfect Reducing Diet Balances Substances Needed for Health.

The secret is perfect balance of the various minerals and fuels the body needs to function. The nerves, the teeth, the muscles of the heart, the blood, the skin each needs a particular kind of food to do its work efficiently. Every medical and dietary authority will tell you that there are certain types of protective foods which your body must have every day if it is to be healthy and beautiful. Mainly, these are:

Milk: At least a pint daily.

Fruit: Especially tomatoes, oranges, bananas, and apples.

Vegetables: Two, preferably of the leafy type.

One woman has written me giving a sample day's food consumption, which I calculate at over 4,000 calories. She eats enormous quantities of bread for breakfast, lunch, and dinner; fried eggs and bacon for breakfast every morning; a luncheon that sounds like a good sized dinner to me and rich in fat producing foods; and a dinner which is an enlargement on the noonday meal. She asks, then, if the quart of milk she plans to start taking in addition to her usual food will reduce her.

It won't. But the milk won't be responsible for the fat she piles on. It will be the inordinate consumption of bread and butter, the heavy noonday meal, and dinner.

Milk Is Food and, as Such, Must Be Computed in the Diet.

Let us make it clear again that milk is a food and has to be reckoned as food. Milk is relatively low in fattening power. A whole quart of milk, it has been proved, is only equal in fat value to four pieces of candy, four slices of white bread, or three waffles. But milk is rich in vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates, and proteins. And these are the elements that preserve the characteristics of youth. Milk combats acid acmulation. It's a necessary part of every diet, and particularly of a reducing diet. But, again I warn, count your glass of milk in as 160 calories.

Let's take a sample breakfast, the breakfast referred to above. The woman reports she eats each morning:

Orange juice	100 calories
Three pieces of buttered toast	600
Fried eggs and bacon [2 eggs, 4 slices bacon	500 easily
Coffee with cream and sugar [2 cups]	200 easily

There you have 1,400 calories for breakfast alone. On a reducing diet you need no more than two thousand calories for the whole day at the most. In fact, 1,500 is a better figure.

Now let's put the woman above on a different sort of breakfast.

Orange juice	100 calories
One soft boiled egg	75
One thin slice bread or toast	50

Milk, 1 glass	160

Grand total only 465 calories, and an all round healthier breakfast, with fried eggs eliminated and bread reduced appreciably.

Normal Weight Is Gauge of Calorie Intake Every Day.

The amount of calories you need per day is an individual problem. You can calculate the number of calories you need for yourself by the following rule: If you're the average person who gets light to moderate exercise you need from 18 to 20 calories per day for each pound of NORMAL body weight. (Not fat body weight, but NORMAL body weight). If your normal weight should be 128 pounds, say, your normal calories intake should be about 2,400 calories per day. But if you would lose a quarter of a pound a day, cut your calorie intake down to 1,400 or 1,500 a day.

I have a little booklet now, worked out in coöperation with bureau of milk publicity, New York state department of agriculture and markets, giving you diets, all worked out temptingly and sanely, which I'm sure you'll feel no strain on your will nor, what is more important to us women, no strain on your looks.

French Knots and Stitching Help Create Applique Quilt

BAMBOO BLOSSOMS.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

By Nancy Cabot.

FRENCH knots and stitching are included in the makeup of this beautiful appliqué block, "Bamboo Blossoms." The veins are stitched in either lighter or darker thread than that of the leaf. The color combination makes a most delicate quilt. Bamboo color, the shade of the good old fishpole, combined with soft rose and green and tiny blue French knots, catch the beauty of the old Japanese tapestry from which it was adapted. The entire coverlet requires 28 plain and 28 appliqué blocks, each block measuring 13 inches square.

For a period of 30 days, ending Dec. 2, Nancy Cabot offers 10 quilt patterns of her own choice at a price of 10 cents for the group (12 cents by mail). Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: 1 South Dearborn street, or Tribune Tower.

'Contradiction' in Physiognomy Is Made Clear

"Sublimation" Often Will Account for Variance in Features, Behavior.

SOMETIMES, a physiognomical reading does not seem to correspond with the actual behavior or the professed opinion of the person who is being studied. In such cases the mental process which psychologists call "sublimation" often will account for the apparent contradiction. Sublimation means that a spontaneous tendency in the behavior of an individual which is considered undesirable socially is directed into an approved channel. Great men in history furnish examples of this. The case of Socrates, the Greek philosopher, is especially interesting.

XANTHIPPE.

Socrates' face is known to us from the sculpture made by a contemporary and also from descriptions in the writings of his followers. He had a forehead that rose straight up, which would indicate that he liked to follow accepted rules and practice in thinking and in doing. Actually, he did not. He had a small, inward curved nose, which would denote a desire to please and a willingness to submit to dictation. He showed none of these traits in dealing with his fellow men. His full, red lips should indicate a desire for physical pleasures, but he neither ate nor drank to excess. Do these facts upset the claims for validity of this method of character reading from facial features?

Let us check his conduct on the two most important points in a man's career. What kind of a wife did he get and what kind of life work did he perform? The first question is answered by the report that Xanthippe loved him to the end of his days, at the age of seventy. That would indicate that it was a happy mating and she must have been his opposite in features and his complement in personality traits. His proverbial ugliness was attractive to her perfect type of classic Greek beauty and the usual family discords were never serious enough to separate them.

In spite of his neglect of her and their children, in spite of his idle, workless roaming about town, and his carelessness of personal appearance and social conventions, she stuck to him. She must have been a woman of fine qualities in addition to her attractive looks. This marriage was his way of finding compensation for his own well recognized baser traits.

The next step in his transformation was brought out in his achievement as the first psychologist trying the depths of the human mind and as the greatest of moral philosophers. Here his desire for information and his inclination for research, signified by a pointed nose tip in side view, were given free rein to supply his logical mind, denoted by his straight forehead, with material for higher thinking.

His awareness of bad points in himself and others was painful, and he began to work out ideals of conduct for the same reason that he had previously reached for beauty and morality in the person of his wife. Unconsciously at first, later feeling his way by questioning friends and strangers, he came to a clear understanding of virtue and truth in individual behavior. From there he could proceed to formulate the principles and structure of a human society worthy of the mind of man.

This change in himself, this sublimation of lower tendencies, original egocentric wishes, which some of his features reveal, into impulses effective on the higher plane of intellectual pursuits for the welfare of all people, he attributed to divine guidance.

SOCRATES.

Following an inner voice, he developed into a man of wisdom and a kindly, unassuming simplicity, a loyal citizen but independent in his thinking. He became the designer and the teacher of a moral code that contains all the characteristics we now can read in the face of his wife, Xanthippe.

Xanthippe's sloping forehead indicates a just and impartial judgment. Her straight, narrow nose, somewhat rounded at the tip, shows self reliance, fairness in evaluating others, and a tolerance of their shortcomings. Her short lipped mouth with fair sized red parts signify a moderate desire for personal gains and pleasures. There can be no finer human qualities than are combined in the personality of Socrates' wife, and if she has been given a less desirable reputation in history, that is probably where he did not quite live up to his new character. The tendency to detract from the value of another person, denoted by a broad and fleshy lower part of the nose, still cropped out in his weaker moments and influenced his opinion about his wife.

This analysis of Socrates shows that while a physiognomical reading reveals inherited fundamental tendencies, other psychological methods of observation and reasoning disclose possibilities of guiding and refining their expression in actual life.

Unfinished Furniture Includes Items from Bed to Brackets

THE unfinished furniture sections of the large department stores offer many helpful suggestions to home owners with slender budgets. It is possible to get excellently styled and well built pieces at an unusually low price simply because they are not painted or stained or varnished.

And it is not a difficult matter to do this job oneself. Long hours needed to finish a piece of furniture a few years ago have been reduced to a minimum by the new, quick drying paints and lackers.

Among the groups shown by one Chicago store are the following: Wooden shutter screens; dressing tables and benches; beds, chests of drawers, utility chests, end tables, and others of all types; modern bookcases; hanging shelves and brackets; modern, table top desks and chairs; coffee and cocktail tables.

Federal Period Furniture Known for Its Delicacy

FURNITURE of the Federal period in America roughly corresponds with that of the now popular Regency period in England. It was made in the early years of the 19th century, from about 1800 to around 1820 and was used in houses of great beauty of line and dignity as well as elegance of atmosphere.

The peasantlike sturdiness of the early American era was at an end. Furniture was made with classic restraint. Proportions were more delicate, more graceful to the eye. It was the day of mahogany, finely carved and honestly constructed. Duncan Phyfe was in his prime. It was the day of high ceilings, creamy white woodwork, beautifully paneled doors, elaborate cornices. In short, it was the day of gracious living.

Suede Cover Gives Bridge Table New Lease on Charm

FIRST aid for broken-down bridge tables! If the legs are rickety, there's not much help in this suggestion, but if it's a sturdy piece of furniture which has merely lost its looks, you can give it a new face with little trouble. One of the loop department stores is featuring suede cloth bridge table covers, just as smart looking as they are moderate in price.

Just the right texture for card playing, these tables are finished in bias tape around the edges. The color choice includes red, brown, green, tan, or blue—which makes them usable with almost any color scheme. The final touch of smartness is the monogram, which may be had in three different styles.

In the same department are numerous smart new designs in playing cards.

Drinking Glasses for Bathroom Are Cleverly Designed

DRINKING glasses, designed especially for the bathroom, come in a wide range of colors.

They're non-breakable and so decorated that there's little danger of them wandering from their rightful places to other parts of the house. You may choose glasses adorned with fat round fish and seaweed decorations, anchors, or waterlilies, in keeping with the wall decorations of the bathroom.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

Preparations to Enhance Eyes Bring Glamor to Orbs Nature Designed.

WHEN you list the big things in the fashion and beauty picture this season don't let your jottings concerning hair ornaments, Persian lamb on clothes, square heeled shoes, lamé frocks, and all the other big truths crowd out "beautifully made up eyes." They're enormously important.

Here's your eye program, if you want orbs soulful as well as stylish:

Nice eyebrows, in a line that's becoming and not obviously unlike the one with which you were born. Improve on nature to the extent of perfect grooming, if necessary, but don't go in for free hand drawing. It's a distortion of natural facial characteristics that can be, and usually is, ruinous. Besides that, it's out of style, which probably is what will stay the hand that wields the tweezers more effectively than will artistic truths.

◆

And get a little sparkle in those eyes, sister. Put down the book if the light isn't right. Get the blameless sleep you need, and take up fresh air as a habit if you've been spending more time in the house than outside.

Use a good eye bath to keep dust and dirt under control.

Don't invite the bloodshot blight by late hours, strain, or the cup that cheers. But if you do err, a good eye lotion will help. One new one on the market, one highly indorsed, of which you needn't be afraid, is rather miraculous. But remember that cause is better than cures.

◆

Learn about eye shadows. We don't go along with flat rules that this shade is for Sue, that for Sophie. The shade you wear should depend on your own eye and skin coloring, and also on the color of your costume. Lately we've been happy to hear that more beauty specialists are siding with us on the pale, subtle violet being swell-elegant for many of the brown eyed. Try it some time and see how it works. Experimentation is the only ticket when you're looking for the shadow that really does things for you. It might be green, blue, brown, or violet, or any of dozens of blends. But when you get the right one you really have a slick contribution to your glamor.

Eyes loom large on the winter beauty horizon. They should be beautifully groomed and made up to the point of glamorous perfection, but always with deft touch.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Brush your lashes. Cream them at night with your finger when you're giving your face its going over. During the day use mascara if the lashes are even inclined to be light. Use a good one—one that doesn't smudge but that doesn't have a drying base. Use brown or black, as you like, and when you want to do things up in the grand, glamorous manner experiment with other colors.

There is an amethyst that's lovely on the right eyes. Blues are marvelous for the blue eyed, especially under night lights. The latest is a green, and not dark, either. This is startling on the wrong woman, perfect on the woman with a glint of green in her eyes and lashes naturally so dark they can stand the slight lightening in color.

Fuss with your eyes as you fuss with your skin. You'll be surprised at what the well made up eyes will do for your face.

Objets d'Art in Pottery Are Tasteful Gifts

Lovely Ceramics Include Vases, Bookends, and Stateliest Candlesticks.

By Mabel Bryant.

FOR gifts of pottery that will reflect excellent taste of the donor, counters are fairly groaning under the weight of vases, bowls, candlesticks, bookends, and odd pieces of statuary. Many modern designs have been molded at domestic potteries to supply the constant demand of those who know and appreciate fine ware with a glazed porcelain finish, wax mat glaze, known as Vellum, crystaline, and aventurine.

The vases are legion in size and shape, varying from a slender, single stem size, to tall ones to hold American beauty roses, or gorgeous "mums" with stems a yard long. A set of exquisite urns in soft ivory tone, the upper part a delicate shell pink called "pâte sur pâte," would find their proper niche in a modern town home.

Designs in New Bookends Are Legion and Varied.

Bookends are infinite. So are the designs. Elephants standing guard over several of the best sellers, or resting upon their huge haunches, are in soft olive green, delft blue, ebony, gun metal, and striking ivory shades. A pair of slinky pumas in repose upon the open pages of a book are tremendously effective. The wise old owl is a smart number. A pair of houn'dogs with lugubrious expressions upon their faces, long floppy ears, in glossy black luster finish, would be a top-notch gift for a man's room or office. Or he might prefer a pair of steeds' heads with smartly groomed manes! There are bookends of the ever popular ship model.

A Dresden type called "The Colonial Girl" is a stunning bookend set. The girl's voluminous skirt is a delicate pink. Her old-fashion basque, the book in her lap, and the base of bookends are a soft, light gray. This distinctive set of bookends with mat finish has the appearance of alabaster rather than of pottery. Such a selection truly would be a beautiful, lasting gift.

Bowls of Great Charm Are Available in Many Colors.

Bowls of great charm are shallow or deep, with beautiful lines. They are available in gun metal, mellow iris tones, warm yellows, oxblood, and "Flambe" types, originated long ago by the great Chinese potters who set the pace in fine ceramics. Pottery figures in fine grades have endless decorative possibilities. Gorgeously plumed pheasants, with natural colors perfectly carried out in finished porcelain glaze, lend themselves to many effective arrangements. If your gift is to be equally as lovely as marble, quartz, Soo Chow jade, or crystal, any of the pieces described would make excellent Christmas gifts, or add distinction to your own menage.

Paris Pattern Frock Is Ideal Solution for Holiday Glamor

DESIGNED IN PARIS
by Bettina Bedwell
5111

No. 5111—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This Paris pattern, No. 5111, is the universal holiday party frock pattern. You might as well take forethought now and have a delightful, glamorous dress to wear when the parties of the holiday season come along at a very low cost to yourself. As you see, I have designed the dress so that it may be made either in daytime length, with long sleeves, or long, and with scarcely no sleeves at all.

The perfect materials for this dress are fashion's favorite fabrics—either satin or velvet. The ruffle that gives you a long line and a slim waistline should be made double, with the fold at the edge. Black velvet, the noncrushable kind, would make this dress simply ravishing, and you should wear two big clips at the neckline, as shown. Black satin would be just as smart.

The shirring at the waistline is the bit of drapery that makes the body look more slender, and it is easy in either velvet or satin. You may prefer color, and in that case take your choice of your favorite shade. This frock also may be made of taffeta, or taffeta cloky, and be delightful to look at and easy to wear.

Etiquet Editor Gives Column to Questions

Readers' Queries Provide Variety of Topics on Correct Social Usage

Miss Bartlett will be glad to answer questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior. For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

A COLUMN of question and answers should make us both happy, take care of a number of the letters we have on hand, and furnish you with a prompt settlement of your problems.

Miss L. M. inquires: "Should shower gifts and wedding presents be returned to the sender when an engagement is broken? And should a note accompany?"

All presents, shower gifts and wedding presents should be returned to the individuals who sent them when the engagement has been broken. A note may accompany the package, expressing the girl's appreciation at having been so well remembered. But the message should not contain any explanation of the change of heart, but just a tactful statement of the fact that the engagement has been broken.

◆

From Miss D. K.: "Is it in good taste for one to send personal photographs to friends and relatives as Christmas gifts? And can you tell me, too, if it is proper to autograph them and, if so, how?"

It is perfectly correct to give personal photographs to members of the family and intimate friends who, you know, will be happy to have them. The list should be limited. The rather general distribution of one's portrait is in questionable taste. And girls should be careful about giving pictures to their young men friends. It is more discreet not to autograph the photographs. But, if you must write something, make it impersonal, such as "With best wishes, Helen," or just the signature alone.

◆

A man writes: "When a letter is being written to the elder of two men who bear the same name [father and son], is it proper to address him as Mr. Howard Pearson Sr.?"

A man never is addressed as Mr. Howard Pearson Sr. If there are two men in the same family who bear the same name, the younger identifies himself as junior, and the elder simply uses the name Mr. Howard Pearson. The younger Mr. Pearson's wife also uses "Jr." after her name. When the elder Mr. Pearson dies, the younger man is entitled to the name and may drop the "Jr."

Tweed Frock Is Equally Smart for Office and Dining in Town

By Jean Macdonald.

SUFFICIENTLY dressy for any feminine informal occasion, cozy and warm for the game, and in perfect taste for dinner after the business girl's office hours, this stunning hand knitted, one piece dress is executed in a beautiful oxford tweed wool, flecked with rust red, royal blue, and citron green. These beautiful shades allow a variety of scarfs for the good looking neckline which is as smart as it is simple. A departure from the traditional buttons is found in the clever trim of chromium jumbo hooks and eyes, attached in the reverse manner of the good old fashioned dress hooks and eyes. A light eel gray suede belt with chromium buckle completes the detail of one of the best looking hand knits made to date.

This is a dress every one can knit since there is no stitch used but the stockinette, and a band of single crochet around the skirt and two or three rows around the neck, according to taste. An inch wide hem is turned back for the cuff and the opening is fastened with a single hook and eye. Crêpe scarfs are ideal for the afternoon and evening affairs, but a hand knitted scarf is perfect for the game or other spectator sports occasions.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 18.

It is an excellent plan to give iron fences, tools, trellises, and accessories a coat of paint to preserve them. Neglect brings ruin to them. A coat of paint improves their appearance greatly. See that all spades, hoes, and lawn mowers are oiled before storing for the winter. Complete the planting of bulbs immediately, before severe weather arrives. The bulbous plants are among the easiest of all to grow. They are hardy, requiring little or no attention for several years. The red hot poker plant is not hardy unless grown in a sandy, well drained soil.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The terrarium should make a fine showing at this season. Made up of tropical plants, such as small ferns of various kinds, the brilliant fittonias, the Chinese evergreen, club mosses, various grasses, Rex begonias and small plants of other begonia, it gives fine effects. When well regulated as to air and moisture, an aquarium-like terrarium will look well for a long time. Small plants from the woods may also be worked into an interesting display. They make a fine addition to the window show.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

The colored shrubs may be used to add interest to the home if twigs or branches are cut from the fresh wood of the current season. Use such shrubs as the brilliant berries of the sumac, red-osier dogwood, with its bright red stems, the bright green of the globe flower or kerria, yellow-barked dogwood or cornus flaviramea, and the yellow branches of salix vitellina aurea, with its companion, the dark red S. britzensis.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

Be sure to cut back the tops of all shrubs that are fall planted to place the root system and top in balance. Fill in among and between the roots with loose soil, and at the same time tamp it down firmly with the feet. Water well after planting and mulch after the ground freezes.

Friday, Nov. 22.

Good commercial fertilizers contain the necessary elements for plant growth and they are usually convenient to procure and handle. Watch the house plants that they are not allowed to stand in drafts of cold air. Wash off the leaves of the sansevieria, the rubber plant, the aspidistra, and other plants with similar leaves. A vegetable oil will not injure the leaves and will keep them in a smooth, glossy condition. Washing with soap and water will help control the depredations of insects and disease.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

See that the flowering plants, such as the chrysanthemums, do not suffer from lack of water. If these plants are kept in a cool room they will last for a long time in good condition, but in the overheated, dry atmosphere of the average room they soon wither and are useless for decorative purposes. Bonemeal is a good food for the pots of calla lilies. Give these plants plenty of water. Do not permit the poinsettia plant to stand in a cold draft or it will lose its leaves. Home gardeners who revel in watching plants develop may buy small, started plants of primroses, begonias, sansevierias, geraniums, and others and grow them in the window.

Prepared in coöperation with the Garfield Park conservatory.

Spider Web Pattern Delightful for the Crochet Baby Jacket

By Ellen Bruce.

NO one but a mother really appreciates how handy and comfortable are baby's crochet jackets. There never seem to be too many of these jackets, crocheted, knitted, or fashioned of flannel, in any infant's layette. Regardless of the number included, they all come in for their share of wear. The crochet jacket illustrated today is made in the spider web pattern with single and double crochet forming the yoke. Lovely to look at and easy to make.

Pompadour wool, baby yarn, 3 ply saxony, or angora, if you will, are soft and suitable for this type of jacket. White, pink, and blue are usually preferred for babies, but recently a soft sea green has enjoyed much favor in these little infants' coats. Narrow white satin baby ribbon finishes off the cuffs and neck. If the crochet worker has never attempted the spider web pattern previously it is a good idea to make a pattern or two in order that one may familiarize herself with the appearance of the design as well as the stitches. It isn't fun to pull out rows and rows of crochet work because no sample was made.

If you wish instruction for crocheting the baby's jacket in spider web pattern illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Don't Be Fat!

says IRENE RICH
Lovely Lady of the Screen

"DRINK 4 GLASSES OF WELCH'S DAILY
EAT SENSIBLY
THAT'S ALL!"

Tests, under a leading doctor's direction, prove that now you can safely lose fat the Welch way—pleasantly, too—without diet or exercise.

Simply mix ¾ Welch's with ¼ glass plain water. Drink a glassful before every meal and one before retiring. Then eat sensibly—that's all! Weight goes down; you actually build quick new energy at same time. So there's no strain, no discomfort. Soon you look—and feel—like a new person!

The reason is simple. For the grape sugar in delicious Welch's Grape Juice is the same kind the blood uses for energy. It is quickly, easily burned. It not only helps the body burn up fat, but also satisfies craving for rich, sweet foods. Hence, it helps you lose weight naturally. Get Welch's from your dealer today. Drink 4 glasses a day—eat sensibly. Keep fatigue and fat away.

Beware of Cheap Substitutes

Get only genuine Welch's. For the secret Welch process retains the essential healthful properties of ripe Concord Grapes. Welch's is one grape juice that is Certified-Pure, Pasteurized; contains no adulterants, no artificial coloring, no preservatives, no added water. Always full strength. Can be diluted and still be delicious. Hence Welch's goes farther, too. Ask for it by name.

Irene Rich, past 40, still has her slim, lovely figure of 16.

DIRECTIONS FOR TAKING WELCH'S
by DR. FREDERIC DAMRAU, 247 Park Ave., New York

Welch's Grape Juice is a wonderful blood, body builder. Gives buoyant energy. Drink all you want between meals—follow directions below for specific uses.

FOR REDUCING WEIGHT
Eat sensibly—drink a glass of Welch's (3 parts to 1 part water) before meals and before retiring. If faint between meals, drink another glass.

FOR GROWING CHILDREN
Give them ½ glass of Welch's at end of lunch and dinner—between meals, too, instead of sweets. Give undiluted to help build red blood, strong bones and teeth.

FOR TIRED, DULL FEELING
When fatigued, drink Welch's (3 parts to 1 part water). Quickly restores energy and relieves fatigue.

FOR EXPECTANT MOTHERS
Drink glass of Welch's (3 parts to 1 part water) after lunch and dinner, or between-meals when energy is low. Helps build blood, bones and teeth for the child. Excellent for nursing mothers, too.

Trimly Tailored Frock in Mustard Gold Woolen Is Two Piece Design.

By Clotilde.

THE two piece model has found a permanent niche in winter fashions. Its versatility in the wardrobe is undisputed, and its economy, as well. This design, created originally in thin woolen in a mustard gold shade, partakes of the current trend for light colored frocks for wear under somber winter coats.

Effective brown contrast lends distinction to this gold colored dress, and shiny brass buttons contribute an effect of the military. Junior girls usually favor sweaters, and they may be worn to advantage with the skirt of this design. The blouse of this pattern may be worn with a black woolen or velveteen skirt, thus providing at least three ensembles based on a single pattern.

Style No. 3023 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, and 19 years.

Size 15 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅝ yards of 35 inch contrasting.

Venetian Blinds Altered to Fit Size of Window

SOME women hesitate to invest in Venetian blinds, much as they like them, because they live in apartments and think that if they move the blinds will no longer be of the right size.

One Chicago firm makes a specialty of doctoring Venetian blinds. This renovating treatment includes cleaning, repairing, repainting, and altering to another size, when necessary. Thus, your blinds may be made like new and you'll find them just as useful in any home as in the one for which they were originally purchased.

Leap Year Plays Tricks with Woman's Birthday

IF Mrs. Josephine Grenoble of Pleasant Gap, Pa., lives to celebrate her 23d birthday anniversary she will be 92 years old. The reason behind this apparent contradiction is that she was born Feb. 29, 1844, so has only one birthday every four years.

Furniture Owned by Longfellow Sold at Auction in New York

THE sale of antiques has increased rapidly during the last few weeks. At a recent auction in New York some extremely interesting and valuable articles were offered. Among them were several pieces of furniture and household objects once owned by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow at his home in Portland, Me. There were a chest of drawers with shaving mirror, two mahogany bedside tables, a Windsor writing armchair, and seven Windsor side chairs.

Important pieces of 18th century furniture made by American craftsmen aroused much interest. There were two fine examples of the work of John Goddard, a carved mahogany secretary and a writing desk with claw and ball feet. A beautiful sideboard of bird's eye maple and mahogany came from the workshop of John Seymour of Boston, and a charming, gracefully curved couch was attributed to the famous Samuel McIntire of old Salem. There was also silver that had been made by both the Reveres, senior and junior.

Book Shelves and Niches Easily Hewed from Pine Walls

ONE reason perhaps that we see so many remodeled rooms finished in pine—pine walls, in the attic, in the basement, or on the first and second floors—is that this timber, as a wall covering, permits one to have many book shelves and cupboards and niches. Pine is easily cut into sections and as easily fitted into place.

Old homes in our pioneer days were lavishly provided with cupboards in which sundry articles of all kinds were concealed. Now we see these same cupboards in our midst again, together with open shelves, and niches too, for radio and telephone.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

CZECHOSLOVAKIA recently issued a series of three stamps to honor Saints Cyril and Methodius, who introduced Christianity into that region during the middle of the ninth century. Cyril and Methodius were brothers and were quite prominent before entering monastic life.

Methodius was the elder and held a high official rank in the government of Macedonia, while his brother Constantine, later known as Cyril, earned the surname "the Philosopher" during some time spent in Constantinople. After becoming monks the brothers spent some time among the Bulgarians of Thrace and Mœsia, and while there, in 863, accepted the invitation of Rastislav, king of Great Moravia, to christianize his subjects.

During a visit to Rome, Cyril died, 869, and Methodius returned to Moravia as archbishop of Syrmia. Both priests were noted for their successful labors in favor of a Slavonic liturgy instead of Latin, even though they subscribed to the teachings of the Roman Catholic church. Upon the death of Methodius, 885, the old order was reversed and the Latin language introduced into Moravian churches for the first time. Cyril is regarded as the originator of the Cyrillic alphabet, which largely superceded the old Slavonic characters and which is still in use among the orthodox Slavs.

World's Rarest Stamp Unsold at Auction.

The famous British Guiana one cent stamp, for which $50,000 had been refused during his lifetime by the owner, Arthur Hind, of Utica, N. Y., remained unsold in the recent offering at the auction rooms of Harmer, Rooke & Co., Ltd., of London. The stamp cost Mr. Hind something over $35,000 at the famous Ferrari sale held about 15 years ago by the French government.

Upon Mr. Hind's death it was found that this stamp had been conveyed to his widow, now Mrs. Costa Scala, of Utica. Mrs. Scala offered the stamp at public auction with a reserve figure of £7,500, but found no one willing to part with upwards of $37,500 dollars to become the owner of the stamp world's No. 1 rarity.

Collector Gets Cover from Stratosphere Flight.

The Stamp Collector is in receipt of an interesting cover which went aloft on the record breaking ascent of the Explorer II., Nov. 11. This cover, according to the printed information on the rverse, was ready to make the ascent scheduled for July 12, and had been placed in the gondola before the balloon ripped taht morning. It was then stored away while the balloon was being rebuilt, and after having the explanation printed on the reverse side, was again placed on board.

The cover is franked with a 6 cent airmail stamp and the original postmark reads, "Rapid City, S. Dak., Jul. 12, 4 AM, 1935." On the reverse is the second postmark, reading, "Rapid City, S. Dak., Nov. 11, 5 AM, 1935." On the face of the cover is a second airmail stamp with postmark reading, "White Lake, S. Dak. Nov. 11, 4 PM, 1935."

An enclosure guarantees the authenticity of the cover over the signatures of Capt. A. W. Stevens, Air orps, U. S. Army, leader of the stratosphere flight, and Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, Air Corps, U. S. Army, pilot of Explorer II. Our thanks to the sponsors of the flight for this cover.

This cover shows the stamps recently issued by Czechoslovakia in commemoration of Saints Cyril and Methodius. The story of these brothers is given in an adjoining column. The cover was loaned by Bernard Keenan.

The first American flight of a rocket carrying mail will take place at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., on Nov. 24. The announced destination is Hewitt, N. J. W. Ley, well known scientist, is in charge of this experiment, which will be made with a new type of rocket.

This airplane rocket is equipped with wings and develops its continuous propulsion power while in flight. All mail rockets heretofore used have been propelled by a powder charge, while the new rocket airplane uses, among other substances, liquid oxygen at a temperature of minus 200 degrees centigrade. F. W. Kessler, 485 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., is in charge of arrangements for carrying mail.

New Aristocrat Album.

A new album for United States commemorative stamps has been placed on the market by the Aristocrat Stamp Album company, of Colorado Springs, Colo. The album contains two volumes, 214 pages in all, in fabrikoid binders. The pages, which are interleaved with glassine, are printed in silver and black, and provide spaces for all United States commemorative stamps to and including the Farley reissues. Extra pages and pages for new issues are available. The album is priced at $6.50, postfree.

Airposts of Colombia.

This recent publication, which is a combination of handbook and catalog, is written and published by F. W. Kessler, of New York, a specialist on the subject. The first section outlines the airpost history of Colombia, including early governmental operation, the intermediate stage when French contractors operated the plane service, and the present contracts with the Sociedad Colombo-Alemana de Transportes Aereos, the SCADTA, as collectors know it.

The second section contains the pricing and data on the various stamp issues, prices being given for used and unused copies, and for used stamps on covers. A final chapter gives the pricing of the Scadta stamps of Ecuador. The book is priced at $1.

Cachet Notices.

The Mark Twain Centennial will be marked by a cachet sponsored by Randall Davis, 2949 North Menard avenue, Chicago. The hand colored cachet has been designed by Torkel Gundel, artist, and president of the Gateway Philatelic society. A limit of one cover per person has been set, and this must be in Mr. Randall's hands by Nov. 20, to allow printing and hand work, as well as forwarding to Hannibal, Mo. Include one cent for forwarding expense. Commemoratives on wrapper appreciated.

◆

Arnold and Bernstein will sponsor a cachet in their civil war series on Dec. 3. This is the 75th anniversary of the convening of the 36th congress of the United States. They also will sponsor a cachet on Nov. 30 to mark the dedication of the Wiley Post-Will Rogers airways beacon on the east tower of the George Washington bridge. Use 6¾ size covers, ready to go, for each event and include 1 cent forwarding charge for each cover sent. Nov. 20 will be the last day for covers to reach Mr. A. Bernstein, room 1504, 2 Lafayette street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Commemoratives appreciated.

Coal Feeding Is Made Automatic in New Furnaces

ANY home owner will miss one of the most amazing parts of the great home building or home modernizing venture if he fails to investigate the new boilers and furnaces of 1935—and 1936. There are boilers and furnaces especially designed for oil burning, for gas burning, for coal. Smartly styled and often festively jacketed, these are remarkable units in combining economy with convenience and safety with durability. The magazine type of boiler eliminates the need of frequent hand firing, since coal is fed automatically from the magazine by gravity. There are also automatic coal stokers which not only burn the cheapest grades of coal, but feed the coal automatically from coal bin to heating unit. No need for shovelling—and even the ashes are taken away.

Which shall it be—gas, oil, or coal? Investigate the units the market offers. Whatever you buy, choose equipment with a reliable company's backing. Then let your heater do the rest.

Glazed Finish Gives Textured Walls Smooth Surface

FOR a wall surface which requires frequent washing, an enamel or a glossy paint is a good investment. Enamel is also splendid for woodwork. For the textured wall, however, in living room, dining room, hall, or bedroom, a glazed finish will insure a smooth, sealed surface. In this way dust and dirt will not settle easily in the crevices. And what does collect there can be easily removed without damage to the finish.

Prefabricated Steel Used in Unique House

Simple Functional Design Proves Perfect Complement for Shore Setting.

Mrs. Bargelt will be glad to answer questions on new or old homes, prefabricated homes, or homes in the traditional manner.

By Louise Bargelt.

INGENIOUSLY SET INTO HILL

A view of the rear of this prefabricated steel home, notched into a steep slope of land. It has just been completed on the shores of Lake Delavan, Wis. Emphasis has been frankly placed on the functional in this home, designed for all year occupancy. The exterior walls are of copper bearing steel panels, painted an oyster white. Forty-two of the panels are glazed. The trim is turquoise blue. Architect, Howard T. Fisher, 220 South State street, Chicago.

A HOUSE of steel, in the style moderne, is shown on this page: a home designed for summer and winter living.

Just completed, this dwelling stands on the side of a steep bluff, overlooking a lake. From the entrance side the house appears to be but one story high. From the rear and the lake side it is revealed in its entire height; quite a distinctive and unusual sight, with its horizontal and vertical lines blending with those of lake, bluff, and sky line, and its trim, sharp sides in striking contrast to the towering trees around it. Not a house which nestles or snuggles into the woods around it, but an honest, frank house moderne with an exceptional degree of functional value. It was moderate in cost.

For the exterior wall construction copper bearing steel panels are used, bolted together and to an angle iron sill, anchored in the foundation. The interior walls are of plywood panels, the floors are of fir, the ceilings except those of bathroom and kitchen are of sanded, oyster gray wall board in four foot squares with V-joints.

A view of the front of a house moderne. The lower story invisible from the entrance approach. The first floor base is concrete, the walls are heavily insulated with mineral wool, the ceilings are sound deadened. The roof is of built up pitch and gravel, and winter air conditioning has been installed. Heat is forced air, oil fueled. Twelve tons of steel were used in the construction of this house!

The kitchen and bathroom ceilings are of plywood. In all there are sixty exterior panels in the home and of these forty-two are glazed! An unusually extensive window area is one of the principal features of this house, as it is of all homes which are ultramodern in spirit.

Mineral Wool Highly Effective Insulator.

The first floor base is of concrete, with flooring of fir resting on wood sleepers with mineral wool insulation between. Bats of this same mineral wool are used throughout the house between inner and outer walls, under the roof, and over the kitchen ceiling. This thorough insulation adapts the house to lowered air conditioning cost.

Light, strong, colorful this house is, with its walls painted an oyster white, its trim a turquoise blue. The heating is by forced air from an oil burning furnace. The water heater is electric, and there is an electric range in the kitchen. The lighting fixtures and hardware throughout the house are of modern design, in dull chromium finish. Much effort has been made to keep the lines of the home simple and direct. Twelve tons of steel have been used in the first floor and roof construction, with junior beams, steel columns, and expanded steel joists employed.

In the interior the general treatment is unpretentious and straightforward. It has been carried out under the unified direction of persons well versed in the requirements of modern interior architecture.

Eight Living Room Windows Overlook Lake.

The feeling of the great out of doors has been brought into the home by the liberal use of woods in their natural finish. Walls of plywood have been used everywhere except in kitchen and bathrooms.

From the entrance hall one sees ahead the large upper living room, with its eight windows overlooking the lake. This striking window assembly focuses attention on one of the highlights of the interior—especially dyed, orange-coral drapes of raw silk. Their brilliant color, made luminous when the sun shines through them, imparts a soft glow to the entire room. Venetian blinds have simplified the drapery treatment, since groups of windows can be handled as one. The plywood panels on the walls are beautifully grained and finished with filler and two coats of wax. The furniture is of natural design in wood finish, functional in its simplicity, with wood tones kept for the most part even in the chair covers.

In the master bedroom the colors are predominantly tobacco brown balanced with turquoise and pale yellow. The child's room has walls of plywood finished with white lead and oil which was rubbed off, leaving a charming silver grain effect. In the guest wing the bedrooms and bathrooms are in harmonious supplementary colors. One room is done in gray, with a pale yellow background; the other room is in a dusky pink, with tones ranging from grayish pink to a soft near-brown.

Closets Have No Doors.

In the seven closets we find an interesting feature. Instead of the usual doors, which demand particular furniture arrangement to permit swinging, drapes, which harmonize with the room curtains, are hung at the closet entrances.

The kitchen has been arranged to save steps and provide for the preparation of many meals with minimum effort. The corner windows and an exhaust fan are among the practical details. Venetian blinds are at the windows. There are ample storage spaces for food in the large mechanical refrigerator, and much cupboard space under the sink and the work table and on the walls.

The bathrooms are as ultramodern as the rest of the house, with ceilings of plywood, and floors of linoleum.

As can be seen from the floor plans, the central portion of the dwelling is devoted to large living rooms, one on the top floor and one directly below it. The two wings, one at each end of the house, enclose the bedrooms, maid's room, kitchen, and combination workshop, heater, and storage room. The unusual site allows entrance from the drive to the top floor. Interesting to note is that one of the wings contains the owners' rooms and service quarters, while the other encloses the guests' rooms.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

There are two living rooms in this house, one above the other, and both commanding a view of the lake. Their walls are of plywood. Venetian blinds at all the windows have simplified the drapery treatment. The ample fireplace is faced with antique Italian brick. The first floor base is of concrete.

The floor plans here show the unusual layout of rooms in this home. There is no basement, and the stairs from the entrance hall lead down instead of up! On the first floor are dining room-living room, kitchen, service, storage, and heater rooms. The house has seven closets, three baths, and a lavatory. Note the extensive window area in the rooms.

Household Hints

Don't forget to clean your paint brushes every time you finish using them. This lengthens the life of the bristles. Ordinary coal oil or kerosene will clean them, if you don't happen to have any turpentine around the house.

Don't forget if you are considering a new heating plant that there are available recessed or concealed radiators which can be built into the wall. You don't have to install visible radiators unless you wish them.

Storm sash on your windows this winter will not only reduce your fuel bills perceptibly but will largely prevent the formation of condensation and frost on the window panes.

Toy Store Charms Youngsters Who Play Shopkeeper

"PLAYING store" always has been a favorite pastime with most youngsters. It often is a bit annoying to mothers, who are called upon to provide stock for this exciting venture, and frequently such supplies as can be doled out hastily aren't quite satisfactory. One of the department stores is featuring a tiny play store, which will provide hours of amusement for any boy or girl. It has several counters, a tiny scale, wrapping paper, and shelves loaded with miniature packages of groceries. Another touch which will delight the storekeeper is the supply of money, patterned after real currency.

Wash Brass or Copper with Gasoline Before Painting

IN touching up brass or copper with paint by way of bestowing on it a holiday touch—first sponge the surface with gasoline to cut any grease. Then wash and dry it thoroughly before getting out the paint can and brush!

Unique New Lamps Promote the Study of World Geography

IF Johnny comes home regularly bearing a report card marked "zero" in geography, and refuses to show any signs of improvement, you might have a look at some of the new lamps being shown in one of the loop department stores. The connection between lamps and geography may seem a bit abstruse, but here's the trick. Fastened to the base of the lamp, in just the proper position for the best illumination, is a globe, with all countries gayly mapped in bright colors. It is movable, and the lamp itself casts a bright clear light under a white shade which prevents glare.

With a piece as attractive as this upon the desk or study table, learning the whereabouts of the Hawaiian islands or the Red sea should be great fun for any youngster.

Test Shows Women Likely to Overrate Themselves

WOMEN are more likely to overrate themselves than are men, a survey by the Drake university psychology department has revealed. It was shown, also, that both men and women rate themselves higher than do their friends.

A REGENCY DINING ROOM

A dining room of great beauty and distinction is achieved with a new suite of mahogany furniture in the Regency style. The sideboard is finished in black, with touches of gold for contrast. These pieces are made in Chicago and sold here and in stores in other cities.

THERE is no real substitute for fine furniture any more than there is a substitute for diamonds. Both are expensive. It takes time, excellent materials, skilled craftsmanship, good design to create a superior chair, table, or bed.

In Chicago is a factory that has become known for its beautiful, aristocratic furniture. A great deal of it is careful adaptation of rare and lovely antiques; some of it is conservative, distinguished modern. This line is sold at one large store here and in establishments in various cities throughout the country.

Sold with the dining room and bedroom suites and with the living room pieces are specially designed wall papers, custom made lighting fixtures built by this same company, as well as charming accessories adapted to the style of these furnishings. It is possible, therefore, for you to be your own decorator and to assemble a room that will be a perfect unit, harmonious in all its fittings.

Plain Draperies Used with Elaborate Rug.

You can see this furniture for yourself in the model apartment on the furniture floor of the store selling it here. This series of rooms has recently been done over and is well worth a visit. From the stunning little entrance hall in pale yellow, white, and black through to the grape wine red dining room groupings and color effects are intriguing.

In the living room, for example, a gorgeous Bessarabian, room size rug with a huge splashy pattern and much deep red in it is the center of interest. It has so much design that the walls and draperies are plain, acting as foils. A pale green paint is used on the walls and the draperies are a vivid wine red silk under a red cornice.

The furniture is simple, dignified, and livable. It is, for the most part, 18th century in feeling. A pair of small Empire side chairs are done in wine red satin; the sofa is a light green, rough silk.

Light Pink and Wine Shades Daringly Combined.

In the dining room is the handsome Regency ensemble pictured today. It combines a mellow, old world mahogany with a stunning sideboard finished in black with gold touches. The distinctive chairs with their striped, watered silk upholstery are mahogany, as is the table.

Accessories are crystal flower urns, a silver fruit basket, and porcelain plates in a pair of little china cabinets that flank the door.

The walls of this room are just the color of grape juice that has been diluted a little with water. A dado about a yard or more deep is painted white, in contrast to the color of the walls above it, and the fireplace mantel and woodwork are white as well. A striking color contrast is provided by light pink, diaphanous tieback window draperies. You either like these or you don't.

Seen against the grape toned walls, this light pink seemed to us a jarring note. But the women with red hair who wear cerise ought to like it!

Bedroom Done in Vivid Green and White.

The bedroom of this model apartment is all in deep, vivid green and white. The furniture is mahogany; draperies are pure white glazed chintz; bedspreads, eggshell satin; rug, pale beige. Above a white dado the wall paper is green, with tiny polka dots in white and dark blue. There is a white fireplace in the room, above which hangs a green and white water color in a white frame.

In the window recess is a graceful little sofa of the Mme. Recamier type, covered in a blue and green striped satin, a truly elegant piece and especially attractive against the sweeping, floor length white chintz draperies.

A Change of Gadgets Tonic to Any Room

Pictures and Mirrors, Judiciously Hung, Will Lend a Real Fillip to Decore.

"Selecting, Framing, and Hanging Pictures," a booklet by Claire Winslow, gives helpful suggestions on this subject for every room in the house. Price, 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

A FINE FEELING OF BALANCE

In this charming living room grouping the mirror and the wall brackets holding Chinese figurines play an important part. Matching objects flanking a third always create a feeling of balance. In this ensemble there are no less than four pairs: the tables, the lamps, the brackets, and the small figurines.

[Dana B. Merrill Photo.]

IT is not always necessary to spend a lot of money to work miracles with a living room that is sadly down at the heels. Sometimes merely shifting the furniture about, making new and interesting groups will change the whole appearance of an interior. Again, new draperies [and you can get charming fabrics for as little as fifty cents a yard] will do it. Or a pair of inexpensive pottery lamps, one for either side of the couch, will perk things up. Of course, slip covers are the best little transformers we know. They absolutely never fail in rejuvenating old furniture and making you feel you have new.

Still other solutions to the dejected room problem are pictures and mirrors. Pictures, when carefully chosen, bring beauty to your home and mirrors reflect the colors in it. Nothing can ever take the place of an oil painting above the fireplace, although many women feel it is the logical place for a handsome mirror.

Pictures May Be Hung on Either Side of Mirror.

A second important wall space that is decorated perfectly with a painting or handsome colored print is that above the couch. Here, again, a mirror may be substituted, if you wish. Then, make a little grouping by hanging a picture on each side, or by placing decorative wall brackets holding porcelain figurines to the right and left of the mirror.

This treatment is pictured for you in the illustration today. Here the figures are Chinese, agreeing in mood with the Chinese Chippendale lamp tables beside the couch and with the Chinese rug on the floor.

This couch, by the way, is excellent proof of the effectiveness of slip covers, for it is wearing a handsome, silky one that fits so nicely it looks like upholstery. And don't think these protectors are for summer use only. They cover the furniture the year around in a great many of our most attractive homes.

You'll notice the mirror in the photograph is hung so that the center is on a level with your eye when you are standing before it. This is the rule in hanging pictures, too. The most common error is to place them too high on the wall. Invariably many women arrange them so they bear no relation to the furniture above which they are hung and so that the visitor never does get a good look at them.

A second pretty general failing is to hang a small picture all alone on a large wall space. Or two little pictures, for that matter. They lose all importance if you do this. The average couch of six foot length can have at least four framed prints 12 inches by 15 inches arranged in a straight horizontal line a few inches above it. If these are all related: all bird prints, for instance, or all botanical ones, a felling of unity is achieved.

Low Piece of Furniture Built Up by Wall Grouping.

Often it's possible to "build up" a low piece of furniture, such as a chest of drawers or a table, by hanging a group of fairly small, rather long and narrow pictures above it. Or place a good looking lamp not in the center, but at the left side, and at the right hang a single picture in a size that will balance the lamp and that, at the same time, will rise higher than it on the wall. Or hang some little decorative shelves above it, or the inevitable mirror.

In arranging a mirror above a table be careful not to place it too high. Let it reflect some of the objects on the table—a bowl of bittersweet berries, or jack-o-lanterns, or artificial garden flowers, or part of the lamp. Let it seem to belong to the table and you will find every one admiring the grouping.

Woman Owns Biggest Private Yacht in U. S

THE biggest private yacht in the United States is owned by Mrs. Richard M. Cadwalder of Philadelphia, Pa. Registered under the name of Savarona, it measures 408 feet, with a displacement of 4,646 tons. She paid more than $3,000,000 for the craft.

Hints On Floors

- Winter is an excellent time to consider laying any new hardwood floor in the home—right over the old and worn one! The heating plant, which is busily at work during the cold weather months, will have conditioned the old floor to a dry and healthy state. There need be no great disturbance, either, attendant upon the laying of a new floor in a room. No woodwork need be removed except the quarter round molding at the baseboard.
- If you have an old-fashioned floor of wide boards it can be renovized and given a new appearance by one of the spatter-dash paint finishes.
- Don't overlook the fact that its flooring used can make a room seem larger or smaller. For instance, the greater number of strips in narrow flooring tend to make a room look larger, while wide flooring makes it appear smaller.
- When laying a new wood floor over an old one it is a wise precaution to place heavy building felt between the two floors. This will help to insure dryness, and even tends to make the room more soundproof.
- If the budget must be seriously considered, there are soft woods which are serviceable and beautiful. Look into what the market offers in Douglas fir and southern pine.

You will find floorings in many types of new woods, boasting new colors and new patterns. Plywood floors are new and not expensive. They consist of three, five, or seven sheets of veneer. One can obtain these floors in a large number of different woods. Then, too, there are the special grade floorings, from three-eighths to one-half inch thick, manufactured especially to be laid over an old floor if one wishes to avoid confusion and muss in the process of change.

- One of the great charms of a wood floor is that it will last a long, long time if kept properly protected with good paint, varnish, shellac, or wax. The wear and tear of constant trafic attacks the finish, not the wood itself. And a floor finish can be easily renewed from time to time.
- It has been estimated that the floor area represents from one-sixth to one-fourth of the total surface seen in a room. Quite an important base, this room's foundation, and home owners are increasingly fortunate, as beautiful floors—as beautiful as those from our well known decorative periods of the past—are being manufactured for the average budget and purse.

Home Treatment For Keeping Skin Young

MERCOLIZED WAX is the one beauty aid you can afford because this single preparation embodies all the essentials of beauty that your skin needs. It cleanses, softens, bleaches, lubricates and protects. It is so simple to use, too. Just pat it on your skin each night as if it were an ordinary cold cream. That's all. Mercolized Wax seeps into your pores and dissolves grime and dust and all impurities. It absorbs the discolored surface skin in tiny, invisible particles, revealing the beautiful, soft, young skin that lies beneath. It clears away freckles, tan, oiliness, sunburn or any other blemishes. You use such a tiny bit of Mercolized Wax for each application that it proves an inexpensive beauty investment. Beauty cannot be taken for granted. It must be cared for regularly if you want to hold it through the years. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin.

POWDERED SAXOLITE dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel quickly reduces wrinkles and other age signs. It is a refreshing, stimulating astringent lotion. Use it daily. At all drug and department stores.

Humiliating a Child Is Futile —or Dangerous

Youthful Sullenness Often Result of Parents' Stupid or Harsh Discipline.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

SCENE: The family dinner table of the Bronsons. The table is cheerfully lighted and Mrs. Bronson relaxes and looks with satisfaction at the delicious dinner she has cooked with her own hands.

Father: "This is a wonderful steak, Dorothy—it cuts like butter. Here, John, pass this to your mother—look out, the plate's hot."

[John starts to take the plate, but before his hand quite touches it his father puts it down again with a look almost of disgust.]

John: "What's the matter, dad? Did it burn you?"

Father: "Burn me? No, not the plate—it's your hands that burn me up. Look at them! They're a disgrace. How dare you come to the table with your hands in such a condition. Don't try to tell me you washed them before dinner."

John: No, dad—I didn't. . . . You see I was late getting in and I know you get mad if I'm not at the table when everybody else . . ."

Father: "That'll do. No excuses. Your business is to be clean and ready to sit down with the family."

Mother: "I'm sure I keep at you enough about washing, Johnny—I should think you could remember without being told, just once in a while."

Enter the Strong Minded Aunt.

Johnny: "But mother, you told me yourself that I could stay . . ."

Aunt: Dorothy, I don't see why you let that child argue with you and talk back to you like that."

Johnny: I don't talk back to mother."

Father: "John, keep still. Leave the table and make yourself presentable. And I don't know whether I'll let you come back or not—you should eat your dinner in a stable."

[John leaves the table looking first sullen and humiliated—then, as he reaches the doorway, ready to burst into tears.]

Aunt: "Well, that steak must be cold by this time."

Mother [sighing]: "I'll have to put it under the flame again—and that never does a steak any good. Not that I feel like eating, now, goodness knows." [And rising, mother takes the platter from the table and disappears dispiritedly in the direction of the kitchen.]

Scene: The family dinner table of the Atkins.

Mrs. Atkins [calling from the kitchen]: "Sit down, everybody—we've got a treat tonight—a big, thick, porterhouse steak, and it's done to a turn, but I won't bring it in until you're all at the table. I want it to be piping hot."

[The family sits down, and Mrs. Atkins puts the platter and hot dinner plates in front of her husband.]

Mr. Atkins: "Well you've certainly spread yourself tonight, Miriam. Just the way I like it too—rare, but with thick, crisp, brown fat. And it cuts like butter." [He puts a slice of the heart of the steak and of the tenderloin on a plate and holds it out to his son Jerry—then puts it down again.]

Jerry: "Here, dad, give it to me. What's the matter—burn yourself?"

Mr. Atkins: "No, I didn't burn myself, Jerry. But I couldn't let you touch it. Just look at your hands."

But Papa Atkins Makes No Stormy Scene.

Jerry: "What's the matter with . . . O, I forgot to wash them."

Mr. Atkins: "But you should remember that, Jerry—I've told you why enough times."

Jerry: "I know, dad—I'm sorry. But, you see, it was so swell out that mother said I could stay out and play ball until the last minute today—and then when she said hurry and sit down I rushed to the table and forgot all about my hands."

Aunt [to herself]: "He is the most forgetful child I ever saw—but I'll keep my mouth shut. Everybody shouldn't hop on a child. And, anyhow, it's none of my business."

Mrs. Atkins: "Yes, I did, James—he had a headache and I thought the air would do him good."

[All this time Mr. Atkins has been carving and serving the steak.]

Mr. Atkins: "Well, there's nothing to do I guess except leave the table and clean up, Jerry—pronto! But see here, son—don't let this happen again. Promise to try—solemn promise?"

Jerry: "Yes, dad, I will, honest. I'm sorry." [And the boy dashes up to the bathroom whence issue sounds of hasty, vigorous ablutions.]

Aunt: "Thank heaven, James, you're not one of those men that make scenes at the table so that nobody can eat."

Mr. Atkins: "But we must try to jack Jerry up on these fine points. Ten is certainly a terrible age for the niceties of civilization. We'll have to bear down on him about this washing-for-meals business, Mariam."

Don't Let Minor Faults Cause Major Rows.

Aunt: "I tried my hand at a chocolate soufflé for dessert, James. I hope it will be as good as Miriam's."

Jerry [entering on this remark]: "O, boy, Aunt Eleanor—is that the kind we had Sunday, that you serve hot with whipped cream? O, boy! I hope you made a big one. How do I look now, dad?"

Mr. Atkins: "Better—I'd hardly recognize you. By the way, I went on board the new liner today. She is a beauty."

There's a right and a wrong way to handle so many situations. The wrong way is apt to be futile, ineffectual; or it is apt to stir up unpleasantness and the wrong sort of emotions. The right way gets results or paves the way for them, and it does not arouse antagonisms or create strained relations.

Of course there's more than one right way, just as there's more than one wrong. Your way may not be my way—or your neighbor's. And, also of course, we're all human, we parents, and flare up occasionally and lose our patience. But we must, to get on successfully and happily with our children, make it a rule to avoid acting as the Bronsons did in a similar situation. Nothing is gained and much lost when the disapproving attention of a tableful of grownups center on one young offender, and when the manner of dealing with what is after all a minor fault upsets the meal.

Many of the problems that cause family argument in connection with the "Inbetweens"—children from 7 to 12. A fully written booklet on this age may be obtained by sending a stamped, self addressed envelope.

Can One Be a Dictator About Life and Love?

Correspondent Reveals the Heartache of One Who Refused to Compromise.

By Doris Blake.

"YOU'RE going to say 'another triangle,'" Lois challenges. "'Another married man affair.' I do believe, however, that my case is a little different!"

The case history begins with an only child whose schooling in the early grades was the work of private tutoring. Then on to a private institute of learning, with a nation-wide reputation, from which Lois eventually emerged, a student with a brilliant reputation. Suddenly, from the loving parental environment, the young student was thrown upon the world with the problem ahead of earning her own living, and also caring for a mother, widowed practically over night. It was necessary that the mother remain on in the small town where she always had had her home, while Lois sought work in the nearest big city.

Lonesome Hours the Lot of the Sensitive Girl Alone in City.

"At this time," Lois confides, "I would have passed out if a man put his arms around my shoulders. I was modest, shy, and a good bit of a prude, too."

There was no difficulty, apparently, in landing a job. The work was what she liked, and the remuneration good. But there were many lonesome hours for this young woman, alone in a metropolis, whose companionship back home had been largely confined to the girls she always had known. Never popular with boys, her reputation as a scholar didn't help her, she surmises. Besides, she can see now that she was an uncomfortable idealist and prude, too uncomfortably so for boys to like her.

After the usual period of stimulation and new exciting interest of the big city, the spirit began to droop for human companionship. At that moment it was presented by a man already burdened with a wife, although living apart from her. For several years this had been the state of affairs between man and wife. There were children, for whom the man amply provided. The wife, from all accounts, had another heart interest. The husband, up until the time he met Lois, was not willing to permit a divorce. The divorce went through in time. The wife married her suitor. The children were given to the father The woman, in fact, willingly conceded them to him.

Perplexed Girl Temporarily Refuses Offer of Marriage.

This presented a complication for Lois. Always a girl who wanted to do the right thing, and fearful lest her lack of understanding of men would make her a difficult stepmother, she demurred on the marriage offer temporarily, suggested that things run along for a while until she felt better adjusted to the rôle. However, there was one among the man's acquaintances who had no compunctions whatever about taking the man with the stepchildren thrown in. And she went to work on Lois' prospect, and, before Lois knew what was happening, this other young woman had him signing on the dotted line. Then Lois' heartache began in earnest.

Twelve years ago this all happened. Lois turned to her work with a vengeance. She made an unusual success of it, in the meantime contributing to her mother's support and invalidism care in a handsome way. A gratification to the girl, but not enough to fill her life completely. Always that love-of-her-life figure stalked in her dreams. Recently the invalid parent passed on, leaving Lois utterly bereaved.

Hearing of Man Brings Girl to Look Him Up Once More.

Word had reached her circuitously that the man in her life and the second wife he chose were drifting in opposite ways. He was wealthy and indulgent with money, so that the wife's life became one ocean trip after another, one spa after another, with long stays on the Riveria. The man's sons, it was learned, had been packed off to schools and summer camps from the first year of their father's remarriage.

Lois, nursing a revenge against this interloper, deliberately planned a visit to the man's town, got in communication with him, and saw in him the old flame revived on sight of her, and she in turn, capitulating temporarily to his old charms. He was man enough to make no complaint about this second venture, but begged permission to see Lois at as frequent intervals as might be arranged.

Finds Years Have Brought About Change in Herself or in Man.

After starting the pot boiling all over again, now the young woman is in a state of mind as to whether she really wants to see the man or not. She thinks now she does not want to go on with him. The wife is a dangerous sort of person. The years have wrought a change in the man, or in herself, Lois explains.

Suez Canal a Waterway of Peace and War

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE was the first European to recognize the tremendous military importance of a ship canal between the Mediterranean and the Red seas. His plans for such a waterway, making possible a direct sea route from Europe to the east coast of Africa and the orient, inspired a French promoter, Ferdinand De Lesseps, to organize the company which built the Suez canal. It was opened in 1869.

The waterway, 100 miles long, is today, as it has been in the past, a vital necessity to a nation at war. In the last year or so Italy has spent upwards of $3,500,000 on canal tolls, and probably will spend twice that much more for the privilege of sending soldiers and supplies to East Africa and to bring them home again.

An international commercial syndicate built the canal at a cost of about $120,000,000. The canal is controled by a private company, predominantly French. The present value of a share is quoted at about $1,140. The dividend in 1934 was about $22.75. The par value of a share is $15. The British government holds seven-sixteenths of the outstanding shares.

De Lesseps was the French vice consul at Alexandria in 1854 when he obtained from the khedive of Egypt a concession to build the canal. The British interest was acquired in 1875 through the astute statesmanship of Disraeli, then prime minister.

Under the terms of the concession obtained by De Lesseps the Suez Canal company will retain control until 1968, when it will revert to the Egyptian government. Political and financial developments may alter the original terms, however.

Because ships flying the British flag are by far the heaviest users of the canal, and because the canal is a vital link in the chain of communications which holds together the British empire, Great Britain is popularly more closely associated with the canal than any other nation. Twenty-one of the 32 directors of the canal company are French, however

During the World war the military value of the canal proved to be immeasurable for the Allies, as it is so proving to be today for Italy

Stage History as Found in Burns Mantle's Yearbook

Picker of Ten Best Plays Is Fine Annalist

Sixteenth Volume Gives Complete Data on Play Production in U. S.

By Charles Collins.

BURNS MANTLE'S yearbook for the past theatrical season, recently published, is a better topic for today's article than anything the emaciated Chicago stage has to offer. It contains copious evidence that the American drama actually exists and prospers, although not in this region.

The main body of this valuable reference work is occupied with abridged but nevertheless satisfactory versions of the texts of Mr. Mantle's ten best plays of 1934-'35. They are: "Valley Forge," by Maxwell Anderson; "The Children's Hour," by Lillian Hellman; "The Petrified Forest," by Robert E. Sherwood; "The Old Maid," by Zoe Akins, based on a novel by Edith Wharton; "Accent on Youth," by Samuel Raphaelson; "Merrily We Roll Along," by George Kaufman and Moss Hart; "Awake and Sing," by Clifford Odets; "The Farmer Takes a Wife," by Frank B. Elser; "Lost Horizons," by John Hayden, and "The Distaff Side," by John Van Druten.

Films Take Four Out of Ten.

It is depressing to note that none of these plays have been given in Chicago in their original form, with or without their original casts. It is also one's painful duty to remark that probably only one will ever see the footlights in this city, except in the little theaters or the drama workshops of colleges. Two of them—"Accent on Youth" and "The Farmer Takes a Wife"—have been seen as motion pictures. Two others—"The Children's Hour" and "The Petrified Forest"—now are being filmed. One of them, "The Old Maid," now is on tour with its original company, and is booked for a Chicago engagement.

The book's value as a reference work, however, extends far beyond the 320 pages devoted to these plays. It also contains 209 pages of data for which the stage historians of the future will be deeply grateful. Analytic reviews of the year's activities, in focal points of the country, open the volume. Mr. Mantle himself deals with the subject in New York; THE TRIBUNE'S drama critic surveys Chicago; George C. Warren tells the San Francisco story, as drama editor of the Chronicle, and southern California is reported on by Philip K. Scheuer, assistant drama editor of the Los Angeles Times.

A Good Book to Settle Bets.

The appendices are a golconda of information. First, there is a section of biographical notes on the authors of Mr. Mantle's ten best plays. Then comes a highly valuable department—122 pages giving the complete statistics of the New York season, titles, casts, place of performance, number of performances and thumb-nail synopsis of plots. It tells the whole story in a compact way; here are the archives, ready for the use of any researcher. The people who telephone to newspaper offices to settle dinner-table bets about the drama should equip themselves with a full set of Mr. Mantle's yearbooks.

Then comes a neat little compilation of Broadway's all-time champions, so far as length of run is concerned. Every play that has had 500 or more continuous performances is given. The win-place-and-show entries are "Abie's Irish Rose" [2,532], "Lightnin'," [1,291] and "The Bat" [867]. The others, in order of precedence, are:

"The Ladder," "The First Year," "Seventh Heaven," "Peg O' My Heart," "East Is West," "Irene," "Tobacco Road," "A Trip to Chinatown," "Rain," "The Green Pastures," "Is Zat So," "The Student Prince," "Broadway," "Adonis," "Street Scene," "Kiki," "Blossom Time," "Show Boat," "The Show-Off," "Sally," "Strictly Dishonorable," "Good News," "The Music Master," "The Boomerang," "Blackbirds," "Sunny," "The Vagabond King," "The New Moon," "Shuffle Along," "Bird in Hand," and "Sailor, Beware."

Mantle's Career as Historiographer.

Other appendices contain the following: A list of the Pulitzer prize plays; a list of Mr. Mantle's "ten best" selections for previous years, beginning with the season of 1919-'20; a catalog of 460 prominent players, playwrights and impresarios, giving the places and dates of their birth; several pages on the necrology of the year, and a table of the names of 38 outstanding actors and actresses who have died in recent years.

This volume is the sixteenth annual publication of the series. The period from 1909 to 1919 is covered in another and similar volume. No writer, in all the annals of the theater, has performed a greater service as historiographer of the drama than Burns Mantle.

Cornell's "St. Joan."

Katharine Cornell has commissioned Jo Mielzinger to design the settings and costumes for her production of G. Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," which she will stage on tour in February. Mielzinger designed the settings and costumes for her productions of "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," "Romeo and Juliet," and "Flowers of the Forest."

SUE BEING COY

Here's young Sue Collins being mighty coy for herself. She plays a juvenile in "Two Sinners," which you can see at the State-Lake. The "sinners" referred to are Martha Sleeper and Otto Kruger.

Bouche Show as Continental Room Novelty

New Prima Donna on Chez Paree Bill; Claire Powell at Harry's.

NEXT Friday night patrons of the Continental room at the Stevens hotel will get their first glimpse of Albert Bouche's Villa Venice revue.

Most of the spectacle is futuristic in theme. The Bernard Brothers will offer a fantastic number. With the Duval sisters they do a number depicting events and mannerisms of all ages.

Mildred and Maurice offer a "Dance of Death." Rosita Ortega is an excellent Spanish dancer. Signor Napoli is the featured male singer and the Judith Ford dancers present modernistic novelties.

For the presentation of this forty minute spectacle Managing Director Otto K. Eitel has redecorated the Continental room. Seymour Simons and his orchestra, featuring Mary Jane Walsh, Norman Gast, Nelson Bitterman and Merritt Lamb, will provide music for the show and dancing.

The current show in the Continental room offers Baron and Blair; Rosini, magician; and Santschi and Buckley, dancers.

● Next Thursday will see the opening of a new holiday revue in the Empire room of the Palmer house. Veloz and Yolanda, entering the final ten weeks of their record breaking run, will be starred, and will remain until Jan. 9. Paul Gerrits, who performs on roller skates; Gali-Gali, oriental magician with new tricks, and "John Tio," a trained parrot, will be among the new entertainers. Forrest Yarnell, a singer, will make his western debut on the bill. The Abbott International dancers will have two new numbers.

● Anson Weeks and his orchestra returned to the Aragon ballroom last night. Among his entertainers are Ben Gage, Kay St. Germaine, Frankie Saputo, Peter Filling, and the Weeks Trio.

● Another Monte Carlo party is set for next Tuesday night in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel, with Horace Heidt and his orchestra in a special program.

● Thelma Leeds, who has "double register" voice, has been added to the Chez Paree show starring Leon Belasco and his orchestra and the three Radio Rogues, comedians. She has appeared at many New York night clubs, including the Versailles and the Club Montparnasse. After the conclusion of her Chez Paree engagement she will go to New York to start rehersals in her first musical show, "On Your Toes," a revue to be produced by the Schuberts. Her repertory includes "Paris in the Spring," "Tell Me That You Love Me Tonight," "Piccolino," and "I'm in the Mood for Love."

● The new show at Harry's New York cabaret features Claire Powell, a handsome dancer, and the three Taka Sisters, Japanese girls, offering a novelty in song and dance. Ray Wencil is the new master of ceremonies. Austin Mack and his Century Serenaders provide dance music.

● College night at the Blackhawk, every Friday, has taken on a new aspect. Beginning at midnight "Campus Cabaret" is called to order. The programs will feature singers, dancers and mimics from the fraternities at both Chicago and Northwestern universities, Prizes will be awarded.

Cedric and Arlinda, new Blackhawk dance duo, have met with success. This is the team's first appearance in Chicago.

● The success of "Gwynne," the magician, in the current floor show in the Terrace room of the Hotel Morrison has caused the indefinite extension of his engagement. Rosalean and Seville, the dance duo, will also be held over beyond their original engagement. They have introduced a new "Merry Widow Waltz," together with tangos, rumbas, fox trots and Spanish novelty dances. The King's Jesters present a new group of songs. Martha Raye has scored a hit. Toyo Sabe, Chinese girl acrobatic contortionist, is the other new addition to the show. Enric Madriguera and his orchestra furnish the music.

● George Olsen and his band, starring Ethel Shutta, remain at the College inn. The ice skating show has added Evelyn Chandler, famous figure skater.

"Tobacco Road."

The Detroit company of "Tobacco Road," recently closed by official action, began an engagement in the Masonic auditorium of Cleveland, O., last night.

Leginska's "Gale" Will Make Opera History in Chicago

Two Aspects Mark It as Epoch-Making

Woman Conducts World Premiere of Own Opus for First Time Here.

By Edward Barry.

FOR the first time in the history of opera in Chicago a woman is to conduct her own work. As if that were not interest enough, there is the added excitement of a world première.

The one act opera, "Gale," will be sung by the Chicago City Opera company in the Civic Opera house next Saturday evening and the composer, Ethel Leginska, will direct. John Charles Thomas will create the name part. Supporting him are Frank Forest, Julia Peters, and Helen Bartush.

This is the first hearing anywhere of Leginska's second opera. The composer was formerly conductor of the Woman's Symphony orchestra here, and is also favorably known as a pianist. She has played and conducted in many parts of the world.

"Gale" is a tragic tale of Cornwall, and the Cornish dialect makes its first appearance in opera in this work.

Frank Forest Will Sing Germont in "La Traviata."

Now to the Chicago City Opera company's complete schedule for the third week. The first repetition of the season is due Monday, when "Rosenkavalier" will be sung with the same opulent cast as yesterday afternoon. Frank Forest, an American tenor with an impressive European background, breaks a two and a half weeks' silence Tuesday when he sings the younger Germont in "La Traviata." He was the Faust the first night of the season, you remember, in Boito's "Mefistofele." The Lady of the Camellias will be Edith Mason, and John Charles Thomas sings the elder Germont. Cordon, Matyas, and Jencks are cast for the same evening.

"Turandot" is due for one of its rare performances Wednesday when Rosa Raisa, who created the rôle at La Scala in Milan, heads a list that includes Marion Claire, Armand Tokatyan, and Clement Laskowsky.

"Tannhauser" Will Be Given Saturday Afternoon.

Arrangements have been made with the music department of the board of education for a special Friday night performance of "Aida" with Rosa Raisa, Eleanor La Mance, John Pane-Gasser, Carlo Morelli, and Chase Baromeo. This is the first of the opera nights for pupils and teachers of the public schools and the parents of the pupils.

The City Opera company has promised only three German operas this season, and the third of these will be heard Saturday afternoon, when Sidney Rayner sings "Tannhauser." The Elizabeth is Grete Stueckgold. There may be repetitions later in the season of both "Lohrengrin" and "Tannhauser." The other German work, "Rosenkavalier," already is slated for its second performance.

At the end of Leginska's "Gale" Saturday evening, Jean Tennyson, Carlo Morelli, John Pane-Gasser, Giuseppe Cavadore, and Frederic Jencks join forces for the first "Pagliacci" of the year.

Numerous Interesting Concerts Scheduled for This Week.

The names that dominate today's schedule are Fritz Kreisler, Roland Hayes, and Ted Shawn. In addition there are other interesting, if less important, programs to be heard within the next few hours.

At three o'clock a young pianist named Mollie Opper appears in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building. She is courageous enough to include in her program the tremendous Sonata in C Minor, Opus 111, of Beethoven, a work which is seldom played here. She precedes it with a Respighi transcription of three ancient dances for the lute. Among the technical peaks she plans to scale are the F Minor Concert Etude of Liszt and Albeniz's "Triana."

Erika Thimey, a German dancer, comes to the Goodman tonight with her motion choir of seventy-five. She has her unusual "Executioner" on the bill, using percussion only for musical background, as well as the elaborate choreography she has worked out for Liszt's "Les Preludes."

Last Sunday this column carried the news of a young dentist who is able successfully to combine that profession with music. Today at 3:30 another versatile young man, William Blailock, head usher of Orchestra hall, will sing his second formal Chicago recital, appearing in Kimball hall in a program starting at 3:30.

Monday evening Jessie B. Hall presents another young pianist [Mollie Opper is under her management] in Curtiss hall. He is Malcolm M. Rowles, and he is planning on the Opus 26 Sonata of Beethoven as his principal offering. This is the one with the Funeral March, and the placid rondo.

That same evening Frank Parker, a diseur with clippings from cities on both sides of the Atlantic, appears at the Little Concert house, 5118 Blackstone avenue. He is assisted by Ruth Gordon, pianist.

On Wednesday afternoon Dr. Stock conducts the first in a series of six young people's concerts. The hour is 3:45 p. m. The piano soloist for the first concert is young Raymond Hanson of Evanston. He will play Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasie."

An event of interest to sentimentalists as well as musicians is the concert in the Auditorium on Tuesday by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The Auditorium formerly housed the Theodore Thomas orchestra, from which the present organization stems. Until Orchestra hall was built the audiences, which were the nuclei of those that crowd the newer building each Thursday and Friday now, would sometimes find themselves lost by reason of their smallness in the vast reaches of the Auditorium.

The reason for the orchestra returning to its old habitat for the one evening is the desire of Northwestern university to include such a concert in its "History and Enjoyment of Music" course. It will be the sixth of the series.

The program opens with the third of the "Leonora" overtures and features the Fifth Symphony of Tschaikowski. Two symphonic poems fill the remainder of the evening, Gliere's "Les Sirenes" and Liszt's "Les Preludes." There will be commentary preceding the concert, as is usual in the Northwestern series.

The Chicago Business Men's orchestra begins its fifteenth season with a concert next Friday at the New Trier High school in Winnetka. The director is George Dasch, and scores of professions and types of business are represented in the orchestra's personnel. The program is ambitious, and will include the Sixth Symphony of Tschaikowsky. The soloist is Marion McCreedy.

Next Sunday is not only the opening day of the local engagement of the Ballet Russe, but also the date of Rachmaninow's only Chicago recital of the season. He is playing the Thirty-two Variations in C Minor of Beethoven and the Chopin B Minor Sonata, as well as a dozen smaller things.

There should be much gossip about local music exchanged at the dinner of the High School Music Teachers' club Wednesday evening at the University club. The dinner is scheduled to begin at 6:15.

An unusual music note: Cavallo's Symphonic band, directed by the Peter A. Cavallos, father and son, is playing at the auto show in the International amphitheater this week. This is the first time the big exhibit has used music.

The concert version of "Tristan and Isolde" is due for its first performance Thursday night. Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will enlist the aid of a remarkable cast led by Lauritz Melchior and Dorothee Manski. This program will be repeated Friday afternoon, and the following Monday night, and Tuesday afternoon.

"THE MELODY LINGERS ON"

Presenting Miss Josephine Hutchinson. She has a featured role in "The Melody Lingers On." The picture's playing over at the United Artists.

Sale Prizes Souvenir from Gov. Horner

Chic Delighted with Approval of His Lincoln in "Perfect Tribute."

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Chic Sale is proudly displaying a souvenir of his recent trip to Springfield, Ill., when he went back as the guest of Gov. Henry Horner for a showing of his latest picture, "The Perfect Tribute." It is a tiny log cabin inscribed "To Chic Sale, whose portrayal has enabled us better to understand Lincoln." Gov. Horner, according to Sale, is a Lincoln fan and possesses several thousand books on the Great Emancipator. As the story of Sale's film is the inside tale of the famous Gettysburg address, Sale was most eager to see how the film would go in Lincoln's own home town, where there are still people living who remember Lincoln. "I knew if my picture went over there with those folks, it would be O. K.," says Sale.

"All my boyhood I knew men and women who had known Lincoln. I got my background for my impersonation that way. I did the character—the dialect, the looks—as I learned of them from these people. There's an old man back in Springfield by the name of Newman. He says Lincoln almost knocked him over one day when he came rushing into the store.

"It's hard for me to tell you what the folks back there said about the film. I feel like the fellow who boasted a lot one day in a store back home telling all about his war experience. An old town character looked at him with narrowed eyes as he went on and on, and finally, shifting his quid, released it with telling effect against the stove and remarked: 'Ya musta been there all by yerself.'"

Sale Captures Flavor of Middle West in Hollywood Home.

Sale manages amazingly to keep the flavor of his middle west boyhood in his Beverly Hills home. It's a little [that's what you think till you've walked through it] white house with long windows, green shutters, and a wide porch. The yard is full of fruit trees of the California sort, but otherwise it's as good an imitation as can be gotten of a suburban or rural Illinois yard.

Ruminating on the fruits of Illinois and California, Sale said: "I always have one sure fire test to see if a feller's really from the middle west—I ask him if he's ever seen a paw paw. A paw paw," he explained to a couple of Californians present, "is a middle west avocado." Sale vouches for the fact that a few weeks ago an old friend he hadn't seen in thirty years walked up and rang his doorbell because the house looked like the kind Chic Sale would have. The friend had no address but Beverly Hills to guide him.

Demands His Sleeping Quarters Be Exactly Like Hotel Room.

Inside the house there's the most amazing rigout ever devised for a man's comfort. "Since I've spent over twenty years touring on trains and living in hotels my idea of solid comfort is a hotel room with a good bed and private bath. My wife fixed it up for me, light over the bed, special hotel blankets, towels, water pitcher, clothes closet just so, everything just like a first class hotel," says he gleefully. The rest of the house is furnished with hand hooked rugs and American antiques looking like the interiors of the better class middle west homes of his boyhood.

His homespun sincerity goes into Sale's acting. He won't attempt a portrayal that he can't get the feel of. He once refused a good rôle, that of a man born and reared in Paris, because he couldn't figure how a man like that would think and feel. He plays his rôles by copying characters from life whom he has known and understood. "You have to be sympathetic, too; you can't mimic them sarcastically," he says. "Character acting is making up your mind, not your face.

Height of Stage Career Came in Fargo, N. D.

"I've been a musical comedy star for years—played in musical shows consecutively for eight years, in 'Doing Our Bit,' 'The Passing Show of 1917,' 'Gay Paree' for four years, 'Hello, Paris' and Ziegfeld's 'Midnight Frolic,' yet I can't sing or dance. Funny, isn't it? In the 'Frolic' we had Bert Williams, Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, W. C. Fields, Fannie Brice, and Ted Lewis. One time some of us sat down and figured that if we could get 'em all at salaries they earned in later years, that combination would cost $200,000 a week in salaries.

"The high spot of my stage career came in the little town of Fargo, N. D. I was with the 'Gay Paree' company. The show was doing well and we traveled in our own train. That train just waited till our show was over and we were ready and then took us to the next stop. We slept and ate aboard the train in style. No worries. We had two baggage cars and three sleepers for the whole company—things were going so well. In other shows I'd had so much responsibility I couldn't enjoy the work. But this night, in Fargo, as the big locomotive stood there puffing and whooshing in the snow and the company was going aboard after the show, I stood there and looked and said to myself: 'There she is; she can't move a wheel till I get aboard.' Yes, ma'am, that was a thrill."

[We live and learn! Never, till I saw this picture, did I know that there was a Maison de Masque in France. A house of correction for women where first offenders are permitted to mask their faces, during imprisonment, from an inquisitive and censorious world.]

This is a splendid program film. The title, unfortunately, suggests trash, but the story, from the pen of Warwick Deeping, is a thoughtful little human document, excellently acted and presented.

The two "sinners" are Capt. Vane, ex-convict, and Elsie Summerstone, governess.

Capt. Vane Finds Antidote for Loneliness in Governess.

Capt. Vane comes hopefully back to London after his release, hoping to take up his life where he had left off—but finds himself anathema to those who had once been friends. In the office of one old acquaintance who has remained loyal he meets a timid, old fashioned girl who has just been turned down for the job of secretary. Desperately lonely himself, he senses a similar need in her, but, when the door closes, believes she has gone out of his scheme of things forever. . . . However, that's not the way things work out. At a hotel in Nice they meet again. . . .

Capt. Vane has gone abroad to forget. Miss Summerstone has obtained a position as governess to the spoiled little daughter of a pretty, shrewish, common-as-dirt Mrs. Pym.

A strange, sad romance develops in the uncongenial atmosphere of the hotel. It is fraught with suspense and many unforeseen events raise boulder like difficulties in the paths of the lovers. But the end of the journey holds recompense and sends the observer away feeling that, from now on, all will be well for two extremely nice people and a small bit of femininity whose life has become soldered to theirs. . . .

Otto Kruger Appealing as the Sad Capt. Vane.

Otto Kruger gives a most appealing performance as Capt. Vane, who accepts his lot sadly, but without bitterness, and whose own suffering has taught him deep understanding and consideration for the needs of others.

Martha Sleeper is gentle, hesitant, well bred Elsie Summerstone, suggesting unplumbed depths of feeling and character.

Minnie Gombel plays the pretty hussy, Mrs. Pym, as the rôle should be played. Cora Sue Collins, as her pretty, violent, too sophisticated but, withal, lovable youngster, does a commendable piece of work. You'll approve, too—I think—of the other players.

"Two Sinners" both entertains and makes you think. [Does the idea please you?]

BitsaBOUTem.

HERMES PAN, dance director of RKO-Radio studios had quite a time convincing a number of young folks in Hollywood that everything was on the level when he went to public dance halls seeking couples to work in scenes in the musical film, "Follow the Fleet." When asked if they wanted to dance in a movie with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, these boys and girls usually answered "Nerts!" "Oh, yeah!" or "Applesauce!" They thought they were being ribbed by a practical joker, and it was some time before they were finally convinced that a job in the movies was really being offered them. . . . ERIC BLORE, the English comedian who has delighted film fans as the butler in a number of recent films, was discussing English motion pictures the other day. He believes British movies are improving, but it is difficult for him to understand their "bloody accent" any more. He thinks they "put more frosting" on their tongues than they used to.

Word has gotten around Columbia studio that the TIGER CAT that hangs around there is a bringer of luck to the owner of the dressing room where his royal highness decides to sleep. Most of the stars, including JEAN ARTHUR, RUTH CHATTERTON, ROCHELLE HUDSON, and EDITH FELLOWS, are leaving their doors open and placing catnip, cream or other choice tidbits about in hopes that they may inveigle him to enter. If he shows any favoritism at all it's usually toward little Edith Fellows, who has christened him Yiff Yiff. . . . WALTER CONNOLLY travels back and forth from Hollywood to New York more than any other star, but he is one actor who never has a vacation. When in New York he is either working in a stage play or doing radio work and while in Hollywood he is busy making a picture.

See you tomorrow!

Victorianism Wins a Victory on Broadway

"Pride and Prejudice," Exquisitely Staged, a High Point of Season.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The stage is set ideally in the west at the moment for the production of such a play as has been extracted from Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice." It should have been done in Chicago as an antidote for the "Tobacco Road" protest. Or in Detroit, where the same group of Georgia primitives have suddenly been discovered an immoral force making for the demoralization of a sensitively susceptible community. Then would the pointing with pride and satisfaction have become a happy pastime indeed. For "Pride and Prejudice" is such a sweet and clean Victorian romance as has not been adequately staged in this country in many years.

New York needs the contrast the play offers in stage respectability quite as much as do the western centers, but being quite satisfied with its accepted depravities New York is not open to conviction. Here we have become so accustomed to shocks they no longer register. Or possibly we rise superior to them or giggle our way out of them. This same "Tobacco Road" has not only been running more than a year on Broadway, where it is still playing to howling audiences, but last week its management placed an order for two tons of Georgia top soil to be shipped direct to the Forest theater and spread upon the stage to give the Lesters' dooryard local color. The dirt they have been using [exclusive of that contained in the dialog] came originally, I understand, from the truck gardens of Long Island, and most of it now is in the actors' hair. . . .

Bennet Family Is Reduced to Five.

New York's play reviewers have become quite ecstatic in their praise of "Pride and Prejudice." The dramatization is by Helen Jerome, an English lady of letters, and it clings closely to the Jane Austen style and manner. Its opening lines, as well as many that follow, are direct quotations from the Austen text.

The Bennet family has been reduced from seven to five. Two younger daughters, Mary and Kitty, have, as it were, been left at home. And happily, too. There are here engaged Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, Elizabeth, Jane, and Lydia. The transference of incident is limited, and the main plot is centered on the arrival of Mr. Bingley and Mr. Darcy at Hertfordshire and the frankly conducted campaign of Mrs. Bennet to marry two of her daughters to them.

"It is a truth universally acknowledged," as Miss Austen reports at the outset of her novel, "that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife."

Every Bennet Gets Her Man in the End.

So we have the gentle Jane all a-swoon over the first touch of Mr. Bingley's hand, and the prideful Elizabeth putting the swaggering and prejudiced Mr. Darcy successively in his place, though confessing in her secret heart a great longing for that unhappy young man.

Lydia, the flighty one, runs away with her soldier Wickham and is properly married only after considerable family pursuit, protest, and interference. The designing Mr. Bingley is rightfully humbled. The pompous Mr. Collins is properly squelched. The campaigning Mother Bennet is made happy by the success of her girls in the marital mart, and the eminently sane Mr. Bennet is content so long as everybody is happy.

Production, Casting Seem Inspired.

The manner rather than the matter of "Pride and Prejudice" is what is likely to make it one of the season's chief theater triumphs. The play has been exquisitely set by Jo Mielziner and the casting seems little less than inspired, so beautifully are the talents and personalities of the players joined.

The Adrianne Allen who played last season in "The Shining Hour" and the season before in "Cynara" is the Elizabeth. Helen Chandler is the love-starred Jane, Joan Tompkins the flirtatious Lydia. Lucile Watson and Percy Waram play the Bennets, and that upstanding young hero of "Journey's End," Colin Keith-Johnson, is the swaggering but successfully subjugated Darcy. The town's reception so far has been enthusiastic, which augurs well for a later tour and a creditable transference to the screen. I am hoping you will have a chance of enjoying one or the other.

"Let Freedom Ring" a Vigorous Strike Play.

Our second best this week is another strike play, one sprung from the abuses visited upon the southern mill hands, the "lint heads" of a story called "To Make My Bread" with which Grace Lumpkin won a Gorky prize. The play is renamed "Let Freedom Ring," and it was written by the Albert Bein whose "Little Ol' Boy" may be recalled."

"Let Freedom Ring" has a quality of earnest enthusiasm and a measure of intelligent restraint that most labor plays miss. It is deserving for that reason. It also invades new territories and establishes new economic backgrounds. The people engaged are a sturdy race of hill folk from the Carolina mountains, proud of their heritage and their families. Driven out of the hills by the lumber and land syndicates they hike to the mill towns and are engaged in groups at pitiful wages, taking the places of the town folk, whose living standards are a shade higher. A few years and the hill billies are starved and rebellious. One among them has become an organizer of unions. His younger brother, temporarily blinded by the bribes of capital, is opposed to him. Strikes come. The organizer is shot leading his people. The younger brother takes up labor's flag and marches on.

Actors' Intense Belief in Roles Vivifies Play.

This is a play of propaganda that for half its length has the body and appeal of good folk drama. Thereafter it grows a little tiresome in centering the attention exclusively on the conduct of the strike. However righteous the cause of labor, it loses dramatic value through repetitions.

The playing here is excellent, too. That valiant young pleader of struggling causes, Shepperd Strudwick, is the fighting advocate won over to labor's cause by Robert Williams, the organizer. Both are enthused and eloquent. Norma Chambers, of whom I know little, and Will Geer, of whom I know less, pick up the characters of a mother and a wise old grandpap and make much of them. When the play is one of conviction and the players strong in their belief in it, superior characterization comes naturally into expression. These young players are so enthused they are all ready to join the communist party.

Walpole's "Night in the House" a Weird Opus About Women.

A third contribution to our entertainment is another of those "boo" dramas made from a Hugh Walpole story. This, a weird opus called "Night in the House," is taken by Robert Ackney from the Walpole story "Three Old Ladies." It is, I think, lacking in such thrills as "Kind Lady" inspired, and misses the horror that "The Man with Red Hair" could not sell. They, too, stemmed from a Walpole base.

"Night in the House" reveals three old ladies living in a second-rate rooming house in Polchester, England. One is Mrs. Amorest, a normal, motherly soul. One is Miss Beringer, a neurotic, and one, Agatha Payne, a good deal of a witch. It is Mrs. Payne, embittered of life, possessed of a passion for beautiful things, who causes the trouble. She would despoil Mrs. Amorest of her faith in a roving son and of the financial support she is expecting from him. She would take from the nerve-shattered Miss Beringer her one possession, a piece of carved amber given her by her best friend.

But Even Three Fine Actors Can't Redeem Play.

To work her evil spells upon these two Mrs. Payne slinks in and out of their rooms, raps mysteriously upon their walls, fills them with prophecies of impending doom. She drives Miss Beringer into a heart attack and death, and is concentrating on Mrs. Amorest when the tale is told.

The three old ladies are forcefully acted by Josephine Hull as the motherly Mrs. Amorest, Mildred Natwick as the shattered Miss Beringer, and Nance O'Neill as the mumbling beldame, Agatha. But, for all their fine acting, I doubt if they will be able to save "Night in the House." A striking duplex set showing all three rooms belonging to the old ladies, and the communicating hall and stairway as well, copied by Aline Bernstein from an English original, is a feature of this production.

SHE IS A BLUE-EYED BRUNETTE

Thelma Leeds has been added to the entertainers in the current cabaret show at the Chez Paree. She is a singer with a "double register" voice; is black-haired and blue-eyed. After her engagement in this night club she will go to New York to appear in a new Broadway revue.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—[Special.]—A new play every night except Friday is Broadway's schedule for the new theatrical week. Here are the announcements:

"For Valor"—Opens Monday at the Empire. A comedy, by Martha Hedman and Henry Arthur House. George C. Tyler emerges from retirement to sponsor the production. In the cast are Frank Craven, June Walker, Beatrice Terry, Charles Dow Clark, and Thomas Coffin Cooke.

"Mother"—Opens Tuesday at the Civic Repertory. The Theater union begins its third season with a derivitive from Gorki's novel. The translation and adaptation are by Paul Peters. In the company are Helen Henry, John Boruff, Stanley G. Wood, Martin Wolfson, Millicent Green, and Hester Sondergaard.

"Satellite"—Opens Wednesday at the Bijou. In the cast are Stanley Smith, Noel Francis, Barbara Weeks, Joyce White and others; Kerry Shaw and Joseph Mitchell are the authors.

"Abide with Me"—Opens Thursday at the Ritz. Clare Boothe Brokaw wrote this drama about a young lady married to an unamiable drunkard. James Rennie, Earle Larimore, Cecilia Loftus, Barbara Robbins, Maria Ouspenskaya, Lee Patrick, and Allen Fagen are in the company.

"Stick in the Mud"—Opens Saturday at the 48th Street. Frederick Hazlitt Brennan is the author. The story is of a Mississippi captain living on a grounded hulk. Thomas Mitchell has the leading rôle; his associates include Sylvia Field, Bruce Macfarlane, Clare Woodbury, Geoffrey Bryant, and Maida Reade.

In New "Scandals."

Sheila Barrett, the night club singer and impersonator, will enter the cast of the new "Scandals." She inherits Lyda Roberti's rôle as a comedienne, chiefly in the sketches opposite Bert Lahr.

Take Care of That Cold! Or It Might Get You Down

Story of Man's Commonest Ailment

Costs Country a Billion a Year

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

TAKE care of that cold!

Uttered with little more concern than that which accompanies the mere passing of any common pleasantry, this trite advice always should be taken as an ominous warning. You've got to watch a cold.

True, most colds run their course, cause a bit of discomfort for a few days, then vanish and are forgotten. But now and then a cold—especially one that is disregarded—develops a serious aspect. With few exceptions all cases of pneumonia, one of the most highly fatal of diseases, are preceded by colds.

It is not the individual's own personal cold, however, with its brief days of sniffles, snuffles, and coughs, that counts a great deal in the vast pageant of human experience. It is the mass effect of all these individual colds lumped together that makes the cold a costly affliction—not even considering those which develop into grave illnesses.

It is generally accepted, although there are no complete statistics on the subject, that colds cause a greater loss of occupational time than any other ailment. In other words, more persons lose more days from work as the result of colds than for any other reason. Estimates based upon reliable figures collected by the Public Health Service and various industrial and commercial groups show that most persons in the United States have two or three colds a year, that among workers alone the average is as high as three to seven colds a year, and that the average employed person in this country loses from one to three days a year because of colds.

≋

Among college students, a group somewhat indifferent to indispositions, the average of colds a year is more than three for each. Among army officers and their families, a group surrounded by health safeguards, the average of colds annually for each person is considerably less than among college students. In a ten-year health survey made among employés of the Edison Electric Illuminating company of Boston it was found that respiratory illnesses accounted for 47 per cent of all ailments causing loss of time from work, and that colds constituted 71 per cent of all the respiratory diseases. Time lost per man in this company came to almost three days a year.

Statisticians have worked out from figures available on the subject of occupational losses of time due to colds that industry in the United States annually is set back 90 million days at a total cost of about 450 million dollars. This total is based upon time losses of 42 million workers. But this all is only part of the dire story of economic waste. It does not include the cost of medical care, nursing, and medicines. The total figure on money lost as the result of colds is placed at from one billion to one and a half billion dollars. Perhaps it is inaccurate to classify all of this tremendous expenditure in dollars as loss, however, although the medical men, who collect a sizable proportion in fees for treating colds, call it just that.

The foregoing paragraphs are placed ahead of the definition of a cold for the simple reason that they are far more important to the layman than the identification and description of an ailment to which he plays host frequently year after year from the cradle to the grave.

For the benefit of that unique person who never has had a common cold:

> The common cold is an acute catarrhal inflammation of the upper respiratory tract, of undetermined etiology (assignment of cause). The usual synonyms are acute coryza and acute catarrhal fever. Frequently the disease is termed acute rhinitis, acute pharyngitis, acute laryngitis, or tracheitis.

This is the definition given by Dr. Alphonse Raymond Dochez, considered one of the leading authorities in the United States on the subject of colds. For twenty-five years or more he has concentrated on their study.

It will be noted in his definition that he made it clear that the causative agent of the common cold is virtually unknown. This is the mystery about this commonest of ailments. Every physician, every bacteriologist, and every layman has his theory as to what causes colds, but to date there is no one who can put his finger upon this or that and definitly say, "Here is the cause." There was a time when people attributed colds to damp churches, night air, and the mists that rise above low ground in the morning and evening. There is no dearth of ideas even today concerning the reason for colds. Not a few of these are supported by evidence. It is a known fact, for instance, that colds are more likely to attack persons who have suffered exposure, who have lost much sleep, who are anemic, or who are in a general run-down condition. A drenching from the rain accompanied by chilling is likely to bring one down with a cold. Yet many have been exposed in this manner without taking down with the malady. On the other hand, one may protect himself in every known manner from all so-called causes and yet develop a full-bodied sneeze and cough, with all other attendant discomforts.

Obviously, as scientists have proved, exposure alone is not the causative agent. It only leads to a condition that makes the subject probably more susceptible to a cold than he otherwise would be. Exposure merely prepares the ground for the invasion.

≋

There are those among not only the laity but also the medical profession who hold that colds are brought on by an acid condition in the body. There has been shown striking evidence to support this theory, yet again here it is not the ailment but more likely the susceptibility to the ailment that is caused by the condition. A lack of certain vitamins, particularly vitamin A, is given by some as the reason for colds. It is known that certain substances containing vitamin A, such as cod liver oil and other fish oils, give a measure of protection. But this protection is not absolutely certain. Vitamin A, without dispute, strengthens the system so that it can more successfully resist colds. Going on to still another theory, there are certain observers who contend that the illness is a result of breathing polluted air. They probably are more nearly correct than some of the others, as will be brought out later. They believe that dust and dirt, and incidentally germs, inhaled into the nose and throat, create the inflamed condition known as the common cold. It has been proved conclusively that a condition identical to a cold can be brought on by inhaling certain kinds of dusts or powders or certain irritating gases. In industrial plants where men work in polluted air such as this many are known to be bothered with chronic conditions that have all the symptoms of colds.

However important or unimportant the theories just described may be, the case of humanity versus the common cold has simmered down to the one principal line of thought that colds are caused by what the ordinary man terms "bugs" and what the scientific man calls microorganisms. In nasal secretions from one suffering from a cold are found organisms such as streptococcus, staphylococcus, pneumococcus, influenza bacillus, and others. These minute bacteria also are found in healthy noses and throats, although they often show a marked increase in numbers during the progress of a cold. Scientists generally assign to these microörganisms, which are plainly visible under the microscope and with the natures of which the expert bacteriologist is familiar, a rôle as secondary causes of many a cold. They in themselves, therefore, are not the microscopic culprits guilty in this widespread offense of nature against mankind, but rather the accomplices. For the public enemy No. 1, the real offender in the case, scientists now have put themselves upon the trail of a mysterious something that to date they never have isolated or seen. Maybe the starting factor of a cold rests with a filterable virus, a something from which everything microscopically visible has been removed. Maybe it is an ultramicroscopic organism or a group of ultramicroscopic organisms. The search goes on. Possibly some day science can definitly say just what causes a cold. When that day comes it may be relatively easy to conquer colds, abolish with some swift medical magic the ailment that annually costs this country more than a billion dollars and annually develops into graver diseases that take a toll of thousands of lives.

Supporting the theory that microorganisms such as those named in the preceding paragraph may be only the inciting or secondary cause of colds, it is not uncommon, according to Dr. Dochez, to find apparently sterile nasal excretions in some cases of coryza (colds).

"The presence of an acute inflammation of mucous membranes with no demonstrable microörganism is, in fact," writes Dr. Dochez, "one of the great mysteries of the common cold. If the disease in these instances is due to ordinary bacteria we must assume that the organisms are in the early stages beneath the surface of the tissues. . . ."

≋

That final statement has opened the way to considerable speculation among medico-scientists. They appreciate the possibility that the organism that causes colds may be one that can burrow down into the tissues to such a depth that it cannot be discovered through the usual method of examination—that is, by the removal for observation of secretions from the inflamed area. It has been demonstrated in experiments that apparently sterile nasal excretions, transplanted from a person suffering from a cold to a healthy, normal person, can cause a cold in the normal person. A striking bit of evidence in the argument that colds are caused by minute organisms, something in the same manner that many other diseases are caused, is that which has been brought back from the Arctic circle, where Eskimos throughout the long, dark winter are free from colds and contract them only when the ships arrive in the spring from the south, bearing germs from a land where colds ever are present.

Colds can be roughly divided into two general classes, sporadic and epidemic. The sporadic kind we have with us all the time, although they generally are more frequent in cold weather than in warm. From early autumn until late spring is the season for colds, if they can be said to have a season. This season usually is marked by three peaks of disease frequency, one coming in the fall, when children flock back to school, meet each other in large numbers in confined spaces, and cough and sneeze into each other's faces (a point supporting the widely accepted belief that colds are infectious); one coming later in the autumn, when radiators are turned on and stoves are fired up and the air within the home becomes hot and dry (a point supporting the also widely accepted belief that dry air increases the susceptibility to colds); and one coming late in the spring, when man's resistance is at a low stage after long confinement and lack of exercise in the winter, and when germs are on the rampage (a point supporting the generally accepted opinion that colds are commonest when resistance is lowest).

The epidemic cold is one that, as the name indicates, sweeps a community. It may hit at any time of the year, although, as in the case of the sporadic cold, it is more likely to appear in the cold than in the warm months. Epidemic colds travel swiftly from one locality to another. Those that are epidemic in New York this week may be epidemic in Chicago next week. There is the suggestion at least that epidemic colds may be a bit different from sporadic colds. In other words, they may be caused by a slightly different "bug" than the one causing sporadic colds; or, if it is the same "bug" that causes both types, it manifests itself in one type in a slightly different way than in the other. Ordinary sporadic colds as a general rule do not become epidemic. Fever commonly accompanies an epidemic cold, and it may develop in a sporadic cold that is neglected.

≋

Both types of colds are infectious to a greater or lesser degree, the epidemic kind apparently spreading more surely and more swiftly than the sporadic. When such an epidemic swoops down upon a community there always are some who contract the ailment and others who do not, the percentage of those becoming ill depending, of course, largely upon the degree of infectiousness and upon the resistance among the persons exposed. Experience has shown that a cold is most infectious when one is first taken down with it. And that usually is the time that the afflicted person does not stay at home, but goes to his office, school, workshop, or store to spread the disease among others.

As pointed out in Dr. Dochez's definition and as shown in the accompanying drawing, colds are given a variety of names, depending upon the part of the body affected. Thus rhinitis is a nose cold, laryngitis a cold of the larynx, and tonsilitis a cold affecting the tonsils. From these and the other forms of colds indicated in the drawing it is only a short, quick step to graver ailments, those indicated in the drawing as complications. A cold has been likened to a harrow that prepares the field for the seeds (germs) of pneumonia. This often fatal illness follows frequently on the heels of a cold. Mastoiditis, chronic sinus infections, any one or more of an imposing array of dangerous diseases, are brought on by neglect of a common cold.

There is considerable uncertainty as to the relationship between the common cold and influenza. Some authorities contend that influenza is merely an aggravated type of epidemic cold, but the main bulk of opinion holds that the two ailments are distinctly separate, although many of the symptoms are the same. It seems plausible to assume, as many scientists have, that the organism causing influenza is a member of the same general group as that causing the common cold. If it is the same organism that causes both diseases, it has passed into another stage of its cycle and is far more dangerous when it manifests itself in influenza than when it appears in the ordinary cold. This subject of the relationship between colds and influenza is one that cannot be speculated upon too freely. There still is so much to be learned about it. It is a fact, though, that many of our so-called cases of "flu" are nothing more than colds. It has been the tendency since the influenza pandemic of war times to call virtually every cold that is accompanied by fever a case of "flu."

On the subject of treatment there is even greater difference of opinion than on the possible cause of the ailment. It would be rare to find a group of physicians in which all agreed as to the correct treatment of the illness, although there are certain accepted and standardized practices which are approved by virtually all. For one thing, almost any doctor will tell you that the best treatment for cold is rest, preferably in bed, where you cannot become chilled. That—if you go to bed promptly when first symptoms are detected—gives you your best chance to throw off the affliction swiftly. There also is less danger of complications, and the plan also protects many others with whom you might come in contact if you continued to roam about, a host to menacing "bugs." In treating a cold a large proportion of physicians recommend a liquid, or at least a soft, diet—and a considerably curtailed one at that. Plenty of water is considered beneficial, as is also a certain quantity of fruit juices.

As to what medicines to take internally, what gargles to use, what nose sprays to resort to, if any, and how in general to "break up" your cold speedily, are subjects upon which medical opinions are wide and varied. There can be little written here on the matter without stirring up everyone's family physician. If you have a good doctor—and doubtless you have, for if you could not trust your doctor you would employ another one—put yourself in his hands completely when you catch a cold. Even at his worst he knows more about doctoring a cold than you do, and it is not within reason that he would give you anything dangerous to your system. If you try to prescribe for yourself the odds are against you. The chances are too great to take. Health is a precious commodity. Millions are spent annually on thousands of so-called cures for colds. If there could be perfected or discovered a sure-fire cure, better than all other remedies, there naturally then would not be thousands of "cures." The fact that there are so many "guaranteed" remedies available to the sufferer who does not wish to consult a physician is proof enough that none of them is sure-fire.

≋

Some doctors prescribe a cathartic in the early stages of a cold. Others do not wish to rid the alimentary tract of certain protective fluids that are expelled when a harsh laxative is employed. They advise a cathartic only if the patient is constipated. Some others favor this or that type of gargle, while others prefer nothing more than washing out of the throat with salt solution, in the belief that the best a gargle can do is clean the mucous membrane.

Drugs commonly prescribed a few years ago to dry up excessive mucous discharges of a head cold now are frowned upon by many doctors, who believe the drugs do more harm than good. After all, mucous excretions are nature's own remedy.

Of cold vaccines much has been written and widely divided are the opinions on the subject. The difference between autogenous and stock vaccines, their dosage and method of inoculation, as well as many other interesting aspects of the subject, cannot be discussed in an article such as this. In general autogenous vaccines are prepared from microorganisms from the throat of the patient, while stock vaccines are prepared from bacterial cultures of organisms found most commonly in association with colds. Some of the leading authorities have reported highly satisfactory results with vaccine administered to persons with low resistance to colds. Such an authority is Dr. Russell L. Cecil, who recommended the use of stock vaccine to protect against cold in an address on this subject before the Chicago Medical society about a year ago. Many large commercial and industrial organizations protect their employés in this manner.

Dr. Howard B. Carroll, associate in medicine of Northwestern university and Passavant Memorial hospital, with whose advice and generous assistance this article was prepared, is favorably impressed with the results he has observed with the use of stock vaccines in prophylaxis against colds. On the contrary, Dr. Arlie V. Bock, professor of hygiene of Harvard university, has issued a report on the results of a survey made by several bacteriologists, pathologists, and health experts in which it was stated that although the occasional individual seemed to benefit from inoculations, there was little scientific evidence at present in favor of anti-cold inoculations with stock vaccine, and that their widespread use has occasionally produced disastrous and even fatal results.

To tell the story of colds would require a ponderous book, and that which science has yet to discover about this malady would make another good-sized volume.

Negroes Valiant in Battle

World War Record Is Fine

By WALTER TROHAN

Washington, D. C.

IN THE laconic citations of the war department for extraordinary heroism in action is abundant testimony that colored troops were as courageous as any who shouldered a gun in the World war.

The records give an imperishable answer to those who recognized the Negro soldiers as the most cheerful of troops but questioned their ability as fighters.

In the early days of the war it was feared by some that the colored warrior would not stand up well against a bayonet charge or against riveting machine guns or where earth was rocked by shot and shell.

This view was found to be superficial when the first legions bearing the bison shoulder insignia of colored troops went into action. It was then learned that under his ready grin the Negro soldier had the qualities of a fighter—coolness, patience, steadfastness, and courage.

Consider the saga of Sergt. Bill Butler, a Salisbury, Md., boy, who won the distinguished service cross and the decoration of the Legion of Honor. Bill was in Company L of the 369th infantry—"the Old Fifteenth" of the New York National Guard. The brief war department citation reads:

"Butler, William. Sergeant, Company L, 369th infantry, 93d division.

"He broke up a German raiding party which had succeeded in entering our trenches and capturing some of our men. With an automatic rifle he killed four of the raiding party and captured or put to flight the remainder of the invaders."

Only that and nothing more. There in the cold records Bill's exploit loses all of the fire it has when told by his comrades in arms.

It was on the night of Aug. 12, 1918, near Maison de Champagne. Sergeant Bill was occupying a lone forward position, with an automatic rifle clenched in tight hands. Doubtless, after the manner of his race, he was musing on the zest of fried chicken as against "corned willie." Bill is silent on his thoughts of the moment.

A German raiding party rushed trenches to the right of Butler, which were occupied by white troops. After firing a few shots the Germans took to their trench knives and made murderous use of the short weapons. They captured a lieutenant and five privates. With their prisoners the Germans began making their way back to their lines.

⁂

Butler was aware of the raid, but had orders to hold fast in his post. When he saw the Germans were making their course toward his position he went into action. At deadly range he swept the raiding party with a stream of lead. Several of the raiders were killed.

Then Butler went forth and took the German lieutenant, the commander, a prisoner, along with five other members of the party. He released the six white American prisoners and brought them to the American lines with his captives.

Another instance of Negro heroism is contained in the story of Private Elmer McCowin of Company K in the same regiment—a company commanded by Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr., Republican representative from President Roosevelt's home district. His D. S. C. citation reads:

"While passing through a swamp, where most of his platoon was wounded, Private McCowin dressed the wounds of several of his comrades and, after reaching the shelter of a hill beyond, returned repeatedly and assisted many of his comrades to a place of safety. He also carried messages through shell and machine gun fire after being severely gassed."

Ripon swamp was a shell and machine gun swept bit of hell on Sept. 26, 1918. Of 58 men who went into a strip of the swamp only eight came out whole. McCowin not only dressed the wounds of many of his comrades cut brought twelve to comparative safety.

But listen to his own story:

"The captain [Representative Fish] asked me to carry dispatches. The Germans pumped machine gun bullets at me all the way. But I made the trip out and back safely.

The 369th regiment in rest billets at Maffrecourt, France. Henry Johnson, with his famous smile, is in the right foreground.

(U. S. Army photo.)

Then I was sent out again. As I started with the message the captain yelled to bring him back a can of coffee. He was joking, but I didn't know it at the time.

"Being a foot messenger, I had some job ducking those German bullets. Those chunks of lead seemed very sociable, but I didn't care to meet up with them, so I kept right on traveling in high gear.

"On the way back it seemed the whole war turned on me. One bullet went through my trousers, and it made me hop, step, and jump mighty lively. I saw a shell hole six feet deep. Take it from me, I dented it another six feet when I dived into it. In my fist I held the captain's can of coffee.

"When I climbed out of the shell hole and started running again a bullet clipped a hole in the can and the coffee started to spill. But I turned around, stopped a second, looked the kaiser in the face, and held up the can of coffee, with my finger plugging up the hole, just to show the Germans that they were fooled. Then another bullet hit the can and another finger had to act as a stopper.

Capt. John H. Patton, regimental adjutant, Eighth Illinois infantry, who was awarded the French croix de guerre for meritorious service.

"It must have been good luck that saved my life, because bullets were picking at my clothes and so many hit the can that at the end all my fingers were hugging it to keep the coffee in. I jumped into shell holes, wriggled along the ground, and got back safe. And what do you think? When I got back into our own trenches I stumbled and spilled the coffee!"

Representative Fish confirms the story. He adds that a half hour later McCowin went back into no man's land to bring back more wounded until he was badly gassed. Even then he refused to go to the rear and went out again for a wounded soldier. All this under fire. Elmer, a Richmond boy, now lives in New York.

Two privates in Company C of the 369th were the first American soldiers, white or black, to receive the French croix de guerre. They were Private Henry Johnson of Albany and Private Needham Roberts of Trenton, N. J.

Early in May of 1918 the regiment was brigaded with French troops and put in charge of a long sector of front-line trenches. One night Roberts and Johnson were on guard together at a small outpost near the German lines.

The American general staf had learned some time before from prisoners that the German high command had heard of the presence of Negro troops in the sector. On the night Roberts and Johnson were at their post the enemy sent out a raiding party, whose members probably were told the colored troops would be easy prey.

There were from twelve to twenty Germans in the party that swooped down on the two Negroes. Under the rumbling of cannon and the intermittent bursts of machine guns the raiders were able to make a surprise attack on the outpost.

⁂

At the beginning Johnson was wounded three times and Roberts twice. In spite of their wounds the two waited coolly for the Germans to renew the assault. When the enemy came again Johnson opened fire with his rifle and Roberts, from a helpless position on the ground, tossed grenades as though he were pegging baseballs.

The raiding party came on in spite of the heavy damage done their ranks. In the hand-to-hand encounter which followed Roberts and Johnson were hampered by their wounds. When Johnson ran out of cartridges he swung his rifle by the barrel and knocked over a German.

The enemy then rushed in and seized Roberts. Two of their number began carrying him to their lines. Johnson drew his bolo—the trench weapon with the edge of a razor, the weight of a cleaver, and the point of a butcher knife.

He rushed to the rescue of Roberts. Fighting desperately, he swung on the head of a German who was throttling his comrade and slashed at the German holding Roberts' feet. The latter German evidently was the leader of the party, for when he fell the few remaining enemy fled.

As he was struck the leader said, "O, the —— —— —— got me," and died. He undoubtedly was a German who had returned from America to fight for the fatherland.

Once released, Roberts resumed the throwing of grenades, and Johnson followed the retreating enemy with rifle fire. The two made their way to the American lines. At dawn an American patrol picked up the paraphernalia dropped by the enemy and followed a trail of blood left by the raiders almost to the German lines.

The courage of these four men demonstrates why the 369th never lost a man captured, never lost a trench, and never yielded a foot of ground. It typifies the courage of the 400,000 Negro soldiers in the American army.

Chicago's Eighth Illinois infantry (which became the 370th regiment during the World war) also won high distinction for its service in France. In all it was awarded 71 war crosses with special citations for valor and 21 distinguished service crosses. Many of the members of the regiment were veterans of the Spanish-American war and of the campaign of 1916 on the Mexican border.

⁂

Limitations of space permit the mention of only a few of the men of this outfit who especially distinguished themselves. Among them were Capt. John H. Patton, Corporal Emil Laurent, Sergt. Matthew Jenkins, Capt. Chester Sanders, Lieuts. Harvey J. Taylor, Elmer D. Maxwell, Samuel S. Gordon, and William J. Warfield, Capt. James H. Smith, and Sergt. Norman Henry.

Following the armistice the French General Vincendon, commander of the 59th division of the French Tenth army, sent a communication to the officers and men of the command in which he said: "The 370th regiment has contributed largely to the success of the 59th division."

ROBERT BROWNING was born in Camberwell, London, May 7, 1812. When he was 12 years old he completed a volume of poetry entitled "Incondita," for which a publisher was sought in vain. He was sent to school when he was 14, but quit two years later. Much of his knowledge was acquired through the books in his father's extensive library. Among his earlier poems were "Pauline," "Paracelsus," and "Sordello." He wrote plays which were produced in London and a series of pamphlets called "Bells and Pomegranates," the first of which contained the well known "Pippa Passes." In 1868-1869 there appeared, in four volumes, Browning's masterpiece, "The Ring and the Book." The poet died Dec. 12, 1889.

HOW THEY BROUGHT THE GOOD NEWS FROM GHENT TO AIX

I sprang to the stirrup, and Joris, and he;
I galloped, Dirck galloped, we galloped all three;
"Good speed! " cried the watch, as the gate bolts undrew;
"Speed! " echoed the wall to us galloping through;
Behind shut the postern, the lights sank to rest,
And into the midnight we galloped abreast.

Not a word to each other; we kept the great pace
Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place;
I turned in my saddle and made its girths tight,
Then shortened each stirrup, and set the pique right,
Rebuckled the cheek strap, chain-slacked the bit,
Nor galloped less steadily Roland a whit.

'Twas moonset at starting; but while we drew near Lokeren, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear;
At Boom a great yellow star came out to see;
At Duffeld 'twas morning as plain as could be;
And from Mecheln church steeple we heard the half chime,
So Joris broke silence with, "Yet there is time! "

At Aershot, up leaped of a sudden the sun,
And against him the cattle stood black every one,
To stare through the mist at us galloping past,
And I saw my stout galloper Roland at last,
With resolute shoulders, each butting away
The haze, as some bluff river headland its spray:

And his low head and crest, just one sharp ear bent back
For my voice, and the other pricked out on his track;
And one eye's black intelligence,—ever that glance
O'er its white edge at me, his own master, askance!
And the thick, heavy spume-flakes which aye and anon
His fierce lips shook upwards in galloping on.

By Hasselt, Dirck groaned; and cried Joris, "Stay spur!
Your Roos galloped bravely, the fault's not in her,
We'll remember at Aix"—for one heard the quick wheeze
Of her chest, saw the stretched neck and staggering knees,
And sunk tail, and horrible heave of the flank,
As down on her haunches she shuddered and sank.

So we were galloping, Joris and I,
Past Looz and past Tongres, no cloud in the sky;
The broad sun above laughed with a pitiless laugh,
'Neath our feet broke the brittle bright stubble like chaff;
Till over by Dalhem a dome spire sprang white,
And "Gallop," gasped Joris, "for Aix is in sight! "

"How they'll greet us!"—and all in a moment his roan
Rolled neck and croup over, lay dead as a stone;
And there was my Roland to bear the whole weight
Of the news which alone could save Aix from her fate,
With his nostrils like pits full of blood to the brim,
And with circles of red for his eye-sockets' rim.

Then I cast loose my buffcoat, each holster let fall,
Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all,
Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted his ear,
Called my Roland his pet name, my horse without peer;
Clapped my hands, laughed and sang, any noise, bad or good,
Till at length into Aix Roland galloped and stood.

And all I remember is—friends flocking 'round
As I sat with his head 'twixt my knees on the ground;
And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine
As I poured down his throat our last measure of wine,
Which (the burgesses voted by common consent)
Was no more than his due who brought good news from Ghent.

MAIDEN VOYAGES OF THE S.S. JOSEFA AND THE S.S. ANTONIO, TWO AMERICAN BUILT STEAMSHIPS, WHICH FOR A SHORT PERIOD FLEW THE SPANISH FLAG

ROUTE OF JOSEFA ——

ROUTE OF ANTONIO —·—

By HARRY A. LAIRD

(Trafic Manager, Chicago Tribune.)

HAS an American ship ever been constructed for foreign merchant service—to sail under the flag of another nation? Not within recent years, would be the natural reply. We are too familiar with the demands of shipping interests for construction subsidies to enable them to meet the lower costs of material and labor prevailing in European yards. Yet no more than fifteen years ago two vessels were built in a Great Lakes yard, sold to a Spanish firm, and transferred to the flag of Spain.

In 1920, anticipating a demand for modern tonnage and without prior orders, the McDougall Duluth Shipbuilding company had laid the keels of five vessels to be constructed for general cargo purposes. With work barely under way, three of the ships were immediately disposed of. They were completed as molasses tankers to be operated between Cuba and United States Atlantic seaboard points. Their design proved the ingenuity of the American builders. The cargo hold was divided into four sections, any two of which would give the vessel a capacity load of bulk molasses. On the return trip the other two compartments were available for general merchandise. This sale appeared to exhaust the American demand.

⁂

But conditions abroad were different. World shipping was at a low ebb. Demands on British and other foreign yards held prices as high as $170 a dead-weight ton. Within this range the Duluth yard found that it could compete, and commenced to scan the overseas market for buyers. About this time there arrived in the United States a certain Belgian broker, commissioned by a Spanish shipping firm to buy two boats to be operated in South American service. With no price differential to influence them, his principals had specified American boats. With no further information, we can merely conclude that they were impressed with a certain individuality and ingenuity in things of American construction.

Luckily, the paths of the Duluth shipbuilder and the Belgian broker crossed. While the latter had been looking for completed ships, the proposition offered by the McDougall company was so attractive that terms of sale were quickly decided. Immediate transfer to the Spanish flag seemed imminent, but consummation of the sale was destined to travel a thorny path.

The first complication appeared in the form of the 1920 Cuban crash, which so weakened the purchaser's credit that the complete cash transfer was impossible. To meet this contingency the purchaser produced notes which a certain acceptable Spanish bank agreed by cable to guarantee. That cleared the way for the moment, and a Spanish crew was sent to Duluth to take the first vessel abroad.

A skeleton American crew, headed by a hard-boiled Lake Superior tug captain, piloted the ship down the lakes and St. Lawrence river to Montreal, where a cargo of grain for Genoa was taken aboard. Then a real entanglement appeared. The combination of an American supercargo seeking clearance of an American-flag vessel, manned by a Spanish crew, from a Canadian port to an Italian destination, called forth so many yards of red tape as to thoroughly enmesh the authorities. For a time it looked as though it could not be untangled.

Finally clearing Montreal in spite of these difficulties, the vessel crossed the Atlantic on schedule, but on arrival in the Mediterranean the foremastmen discovered that they were bound for Genoa and not for their native Barcelona. They mutinied, not with a show of force, but with the far more effective method of filling the fresh-water tanks with salt water, thus forcing the vessel to port at Barcelona. Then a further cause for dispute was announced. The sailors had been working under the American flag and were determined to collect the much higher American scale of wages from the captain. He appealed to the Spanish authorities for protection, while the crew marched in a body first to the American consulate and then to the port authorities, the entire incident finally resulting in a riot during which at least five heads were broken. In the meantime the vessel lay at anchor in the harbor with its one-man crew—our Duluth tug captain.

Events soon brought the builders to Madrid, where they were politely informed that "circumstances had changed" to such an extent that the bank could no longer guarantee the notes. Appeals to the American ambassador were of little avail—he was too busy with social engagements, and his staf spoke little English—the doorkeeper none at all.

Two months of negotiations followed, during which the builders learned several things about international diplomacy. First they discovered that each principal in a controversy must employ his own interpreter as a check against too liberal translations in favor of an employer. They further found that officials are always available to make surveys that will produce any result desired by the highest bidder and that there is a good old Spanish custom of "greasing the palm" for almost any service. Nevertheless two mortgages, loaded down with exactly one and one-half pounds of sealing wax, were finally produced to replace the notes—negotiated by a dapper little Spanish attorney who could double for Charlie Chaplin at his best. The vessel was named the Josefa and transferred to the flag of Spain.

Meanwhile the second ship, which had been named the Antonio, had been chartered to carry a cargo of pulpwood from a St. Lawrence river port to Baltimore, where it was rechartered to load coal for Barcelona. By the time the boat had completed these two voyages, terms of sale had been completed and on its arrival at Barcelona the red and gold of Spain immediately replaced the Stars and Stripes.

But payments on mortgages must be met—or at least that was the custom in those days. Also ships must visit foreign ports if they are to produce profits for their owners. The time came when the purchasers lacked the wherewithal to cover obligations, and the holders of the defaulted securities finally overtook the ships far from Spanish waters. They repossessed them to write finis to the story of the only known transfer of American-built vessels to the Spanish flag.

and Irritate Bladder

Flush Them Out for 35 Cents

Go to your druggist today and get this safe, swift and harmless diuretic and stimulant—ask for Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules and start at once to flush kidneys and waste matter saturated with acids and poisons.

That's the way to bring about healthy kidney activity and stop that bladder irritation which often causes scanty passage with smarting and burning as well as restless nights.

Remember, the kidneys often need flushing as well as the bowels, and some symptoms of kidney weakness are: Getting up once or twice during the night—puffy eyes—cramps in leg—backache and moist palms.

But be sure and get GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—the price is small (35 cents), the good results will fulfill your expectations.

Natural Gas Wastage Is Huge

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

EVERY day the oil fields of this country yield about fifty billion cubic feet of natural gas. This is perhaps the chief by-product of the petroleum industry and is frequently a highly undesirable one, since its appearance sometimes means that a particular well will produce no oil.

A very small amount of it is used as a chemical raw material. Some of it is piped to cities or to power plants, where it is used as a fuel. Considerable quantities are burned in a wasteful manner to produce lampblack. But the greater part of it is simply blown into the air or piped a short distance from the well and burned to get rid of it.

It always has been a source of regret to thriftily inclined engineers and chemists that such a potentially valuable natural resource should be squandered so recklessly. But for a long time there seemed to be nothing else to do with it. It is an excellent fuel, but unfortunately gas wells usually are located at some distance from large cities or industrial centers, and the cost of piping it a long way tended to make it more expensive to the distant consumer than other fuels.

A spectacular example of the way in which valuable petroleum products may be wasted. Gas and oil well ablaze. (International Newsreel photo.)

Moreover, for a long time no use was made of natural gas as a raw material for chemical industry. At first thought it would appear to be an ideal starting material for organic chemicals, since it consists almost entirely of hydrocarbons (compounds of carbon and hydrogen), the same as does coal tar. However, petroleum hydrocarbons differ greatly from those of coal tar, being much more difficult to separate from each other and also more difficult to convert into useful derivatives.

For this reason, and also because of the relative scarcity of petroleum in western Europe, where the pioneer work in organic chemistry was carried out, the problem of utilizing natural gas and oil for synthetic purposes was neglected for a long time. Since the war, however, this particular field has seen a great amount of successful research, in which American chemists have played a large part.

* * *

Natural gas does not differ fundamentally from petroleum, but is simply the more volatile portion of it. The individual hydrocarbons present in both the gas and the oil differ in the number of carbon atoms they contain; and the more carbon atoms they have, the higher their boiling points. Accordingly natural gas consists of those hydrocarbons having the fewest carbon atoms, namely, methane (CH_4), boiling at -259 degrees F.; ethane (C_2H_6), boiling at -127 degrees; propane (C_3H_8), boiling at -44 degrees; and butane (C_4H_{10}), boiling at about 30 degrees.

The higher ones are all liquids or solids at ordinary temperatures. A mixture of the more volatile liquid ones is known as gasoline. Ascending the scale of boiling points, we have successively kerosene, gas oil, lubricating oil, and paraffin.

Gasoline is by far the most valuable of the petroleum products. Its superiority to the others as an automobile fuel depends not on any peculiar chemical property, but rather on its boiling range. It is volatile enough to vaporize in the carburetor, but not so volatile that it boils out of the gas tank.

Now, petroleum does not contain a very large amount of gasoline. Obviously, it would be a good thing if the heavier molecules of the higher-boiling liquids could be broken down to the size of those of gasoline, or if the small molecules comprising the gas could be stuck together. The former process, known as cracking, has been in actual use for more than a score of years and at present produces nearly half of our gasoline.

* * *

The process of cracking may be described briefly and with moderate accuracy as follows: One of the higher-boiling petroleum fractions, usually gas oil, is heated to an extremely high temperature under pressure. The effect of this is to weaken the bonds that hold the atoms together. While the oil is still hot the high pressure is released. The resulting expansion causes the large molecules literally to fly apart, forming molecules the size of those of gasoline.

However, by no means all of the cracked oil is turned into gasoline by the process. Such accuracy of human control is scarcely possible where such violent forces are used. Some of the oil is unchanged. Some of the molecules, instead of breaking down, combine with each other to form high-boiling, tarry oils. Some are broken down too far, forming gaseous products similar to natural gas. Some are broken down completely into their elements, carbon and hydrogen.

The gases that are produced by the cracking process differ somewhat in composition from natural gas. The latter consists largely of methane, while the former contain relatively larger proportions of the other three higher-boiling constituents, ethane, propane, and butane.

In the early days of cracking petroleum these refinery gases were either used as fuel at the refinery or else piped into the nearest open field and burned. Within recent years engineers have worked out methods of utilizing this gas as a source of a number of valuable products. It will be noticed above that propane and butane have boiling points that are relatively close to ordinary temperatures. This means that while they are gases under usual conditions they may be liquefied by subjecting them to easily attainable pressures and stored up in this form in steel cylinders. Thus industry now has available a fuel that combines the convenience of transportation and storage of liquids with the ease of utilization of gases.

Then, too, there have been developed several other uses for the pure compound. The boiling point of butane, at approximately the temperature of ice water, suggests that it might make a good refrigerant. It has received some application in this field, and, like so many other things, has its good points and its faults. It is one of the cheapest refrigerants available, but, being an excellent fuel, it possesses a definite fire hazard in case of accident.

* * *

An interesting use has recently been found for propane. The old-time refinery methods of preparing lubricating oils resulted in a product that contained considerable amounts of paraffin wax, which interferes with the proper functioning of an oil. A number of methods have been devised for removing this impurity, one of which consists of thinning the impure lubricant with a volatile solvent which readily dissolves the oil but in which the wax has only a limited solubility. The solution is then cooled to a low temperature and the wax crystalizes out and is removed, after which the solvent is evaporated from the oil.

Liquid propane appears to be particularly well suited as a solvent for this process. It not only has the right solvent properties and volatility but, because of its low boiling point, it can at the same time act as a refrigerant to cool the oil to the necessary temperature.

Within the last year a number of oil companies have been working on a process of converting refinery or natural gas into gasoline. The type of chemical reaction involved is polymerization, a little known word that may be expected to become increasingly familiar to readers of advertisments.

Polymerization may be briefly defined as the conversion of small molecules into larger ones. In short, it is just the opposite of cracking. The gas is subjected to high temperature and pressure in the presence of a carefully chosen mineral catalyst which speeds up the reaction. The combined effect of temperature and catalyst weakens the interatomic bonds to the point where the atoms start rearranging themselves. The high pressure produces the opposite effect from the lowered pressure used in cracking; that is, it seems to pack the molecules together, causing them to combine into larger ones. As in the case of cracking, by no means all of the starting material is converted into gasoline. Some of it is polymerized too far, some of it is unchanged, and some is broken down into even more volatile gases.

Polymerization may be expected to aid in conserving the nation's oil supply, since it increases the amount of gasoline obtainable from a given amount of crude petroleum. As one might suppose, however, there also is a less impersonal advantage involved. Both polymerized and cracked gasoline differ from that distilled directly from crude oil in that they possess much higher anti-knock value.

The high-powered motors of today require gasoline of high anti-knock value. Cracked or polymerized gasoline can supply this property to ordinary straight-run gasoline, which is frequently somewhat lacking in it. For this reason, and not because of any shortage of crude oil, we may expect to see steadily increasing use of not only the cracked gasoline but also of the newly developed polymerized product.

Modern high-compression gas engines require anti-knock gasoline. This is supplied in part by cracking and polymerization processes. (Associated Press photo.)

Chicago "Goes to the Dogs" This Week

CHICAGO will "go to the dogs" this week, with the big Western Specialty show scheduled to open in the Coliseum next Saturday morning. Specialty clubs are hustling around this week making final preparations for this event. Hundreds of fine-appearing show dogs are being touched up by owners and handlers in order to be ready for the judges. And scores of boys and girls are going through a routine of training with their dogs in order to make a good showing in the children's classes. The Tribune will award silver trophies to the boys and girls who show the most ability in handling their dogs, in the opinion of Ireene Wicker and C. E. Harbison, the judges. All in all this week leading up to the show truly is dog week in Chicagoland.

To those who have wanted to buy a dog for the home this week may help solve that problem, because one of the best ways to decide on which breed you would like to own is to go to a dog show, see the various breeds, talk with dog owners, kennel managers, and professional handlers, and absorb all the information about breeds that you can. At this show you will not be able to see all of the 101 recognized breeds, but you may see twenty of the most popular breeds, inasmuch as twenty specialty clubs are included in the show.

At this show there will be toy breeds for the dog fancier to look over. Several breeds of sporting dogs, like the setters, springers, and cockers, also will be there in numbers, as well as some of the working breeds, terriers, and the nonsporting dogs. There also will be one breed of hound in the show—dachshunds.

* * *

This department urges prospective visitors to do things at the show. First, if you own a terrier or other breed that ought to be trimmed and properly groomed from time to time, be sure to take fifteen or twenty minutes at the show to watch some of the handlers get dogs ready for the ring. These men can teach all of us a lot of tricks in making a dog look spick and span.

For example, by watching a handler getting a wire-haired terrier ready, and noting how the dog has been trimmed up on the head, shoulders, back, and other parts of the body, one gets a good idea of how grooming makes a dog approach what is known as the "ideal of the breed." Some of the breeds must get a "haircut" to look neat and well groomed. At the show you will see dogs that have the correct "haircuts" to make them look their very best.

If these handlers aren't too busy they will tell you how they have trimmed the coat of the terrier so that it has a nice, flat, straight back. They will point out how they comb out the hair on the legs of the little terriers, how they trim the top of the head closely, and how then they comb out the dog's whiskers. These are tricks of grooming that the average dog owner can learn. Knowledge of them makes it possible for the owner to keep his pet looking its best. Another thing to look out for is the use of chalk as a cleaning and whitening agent for dogs that are mostly white.

The second thing we suggest to prospective show visitors is to take a little time to learn how the judging is done. To know the difference between the puppy class and the novice class, and what the meaning of limit class is, adds to one's enjoyment of any dog show.

* * *

Here is a brief outline of the classes at the forthcoming show and their meaning:

Puppy class—Only dogs which are between six and twelve months of age compete in this class.

Novice—Open only to dogs which have never won a first prize in any dog show.

American-bred—Open only to dogs whelped in this country.

Limit—Open to all dogs which have not reached a championship.

Open—Any dog, champion or not, may compete in this class.

In any dog show the male dogs compete against the other male dogs in the basic classes and female dogs against other female dogs.

After the judging has been completed in these classes the winning male dogs in each class are put in the ring together and the class winner is named. The same procedure is followed with the females, after which the winning female is put in the ring with the best male to decide the "best of winners" award. In order to determine the "best of breed" award the dog which was named best of winners is matched against any "specials" which are entered in the show, and the winner gets the highest prize in the specialty show. Specials are champion dogs which did not compete in any of the preliminary classes.

Several of the clubs will have other classes, including a class for local dogs and a "bred by exhibitor" class. The club can set its own limit for local dogs. Some of the clubs may limit this class to dogs owned by residents of Chicago, to dogs owned within a radius of 50 miles of Chicago, or the limit may even be 100 miles from Chicago.

The bred by exhibitor class is just what its name implies.

The children's handling classes are recommended as an interesting feature of the show. Nine of the twenty clubs will have their own handling classes, and all of the clubs will coöperate in holding an open class in which the children will come into the ring with various breeds of dogs. There will be no children in the show more than 16 years of age, and many of them will be only 7 or 8 years old.

The Tribune, as previously mentioned, is awarding silver trophies in these children's events.

DOG NOTES

The Coliseum dog show coming late in November serves to remind all dog owners that winter is at hand, and this season brings several dog problems for the average owner. First is the question of bathing a dog. Cold weather also brings up the question of sleeping quarters, exercise, and feeding.

Lowering temperatures tell us that it is time to cut down on the number of baths for a dog. In cold weather your dog needs the natural oil that nature gives his coat and skin, so it's a good idea not to overdo the soap-and-water schedule for your pup.

Brushing and combing the dog every day is better than bathing him every week. Of course, the dog may get so dirty that a bath is necessary at times during the winter, but it is safe to say that the average dog owner uses far too much soap and warm water on his dog during the winter.

The combination that we have used for our dogs every winter consists of plenty of brushing and combing, cedar shavings for the dog's bed, so that he has a fresh, clean, wholesome odor all winter, and a few drops of pine oil on the brush to make doubly sure that this fragrant odor always is present. We have had spaniels that were clean, in good condition (skin and coat) all winter with not more than two or three baths from November to March. They slept outside in unheated kennels, grew beautiful coats, and behaved like huskies in snow and cold weather. Of course, this procedure is not for the average home dog which stays indoors most of the time. Short-coated dogs especially cannot stand cold sleeping quarters like long-haired, active, outdoor dogs. Even these dogs, however, will be better off if bathed less and brushed more during the winter.

Start Pacific Mail Flight Nov. 22

By WAYNE THOMIS

FIVE days from today an all-American air trade route to the orient will open with Pan American Airways' flight from Alameda, Cal., to Manila, P. I., with the first cargo of air mail. This event, preceding by weeks the opening of passenger and express service over the same air bridge, bids fair to change the world's money currents.

With the inauguration of this magnificently conceived and achieved air route the United States will be placed in an advantageous position as regards trade with the orient, which annually purchases four to six billion dollars' worth of occidental goods. From the west the oriental peoples can turn their faces eastward toward the United States, their neighbor nearest in time and therefore nearest in space as space is measured in the modern world.

The inaugural flight with mail over this airway, which was established like magic in four months during the summer, when the results of four years of work suddenly were set up for the world to see, is scheduled to be made in Pan American Airways' newest and largest flying boat, the Martin 130, now christened the China Clipper. This liner, largest airplane yet developed in America, has just completed a series of shakedown cruises during which 6,000 miles were flown over the Caribbean.

It now is en route by air from Miami, Pan American's Atlantic ocean depot, to Alameda, where it will be put through a last-minute grooming before Nov. 22. The China Clipper will be commanded on the inaugural voyage by Capt. Edwin Musick, who led the pioneering flights over the transoceanic route in the Sikorsky S-42 Pan American Clipper.

Pan American's engineers and operations authorities feel that the whole organization is ready for the severe tests which scheduled operations over the world's widest ocean will impose. Equipment of every sort—a large portion of it, notably the radio, developed especially to meet the conditions of long-range over-water flights, where the destinations, mere dots of land, must be "hit on the nose" by superaccurate navigation—has passed all tests.

Nevertheless it was decided to limit cargoes to mail for the first sixty days at least. This decision reflects the care with which every details of the 8,161-mile airway has been considered. It is felt that under actual operating conditions, where flights must go through all except impossible flying weather, difficulties hitherto unperceived will crop up. These must be solved before human cargoes are carried.

≈

The giant Martin boat in which the inaugural flight is to be made is one of three sister ships built by Glenn L. Martin of Baltimore. The China Clipper was the first finished and passed in acceptance tests, but the other two are to be delivered within a few days, giving Pan American a reserve of two air liners with which to meet contingencies.

All three of the big boats will have a gross weight of 51,000 pounds, or 25½ tons, each. Their empty weights will be 23,100 pounds when fitted as mail ships only, but this will be increased by interior fittings and furnishings to 28,216 pounds when they are equipped as passenger boats. The useful load for passenger service will be 22,784 pounds, or a load of 18 passengers, two tons of mail, and fuel for a nonstop voyage of 3,210 miles.

Pan American Airways' island chain air route. The depots shown were established in record time by a specially trained crew last summer.

This means that the Martin will carry a 30 per cent fuel reserve on the 2,098-mile flights from Alameda to Honolulu, the longest jump on the island chain route. The Honolulu station will be at Pearl Harbor on the island of Oahu. The other links in the chain and the distances between each are respectively: Midway Island, 1,300 northwest of Oahu; Wake Island, 1,100 southwest of Midway; Guam, 1,500 still to the west; Manila, 1,523 miles more; and the final short stage of 640 miles from Manila to Canton.

On the shorter jumps passenger accommodations for from 30 to 40 persons will be available, since as the range decreases the fuel load can be replaced by pay load.

Dimensions of the boats are: Wings, 130 feet in span, 20⅛ feet in chord; over-all length of fuselage, 89 feet 6 inches; over-all height, 24 feet. The wing loading is 22 pounds to the square foot, a high loading which should make for comfortable riding in rough weather.

The power plants are four twin-row Wasp engines rated at 800 horsepower each, and they drive constant-speed propellers fitted with brakes. These motors drive the big ship 179 miles an hour top speed and will cruise it at 157 miles an hour. Actual operating speeds probably will be based upon 150 miles an hour cruising speeds.

≈

The flight to begin next Friday will have as its destination Manila rather than Canton. Due to the pressure put on China by England, France, Japan, the Dutch, and the German state-subsidized and diplomatically supported air lines, the Chinese have decided to admit no foreign-owned lines to the country.

This difficulty was surmounted by Pan American's commercial diplomats, who arranged with Chinese National Airways, which is owned by the Chinese but is operated by Pan American Airways, holders of a substantial block of the stock, to fly the short Canton-Manila jump.

Although no details of this arrangement have been announced, observers are convinced that Pan American will lease or sell China National Airways two or perhaps three of the Sikorsky S-42 Clipper ships, which are 19-ton boats, capable of carrying an enormous pay load over the relatively short sea stage from Manila to Canton. These then will be operated by specially trained Pan American crews.

In the beginning operations on the trans-Pacific line will be limited to one night flight, takeoff at dusk from Alameda and landing at Honolulu after dawn. All other flights will be made by day, and the one weekly schedule will be completed in seven days. Later day and night flights will be made over the whole route, with schedule time from Alameda to Canton of 60 hours. The best any of the European air lines can do on the all-land routes to Canton is eleven days.

Argentina, U. S. to Play by Radio

By ELY CULBERTSON

LATE this month a contract bridge match will be played between an American team and a team from Argentina. It makes me very happy to announce this match, for it is a step toward the fulfilment of one of my fondest ambitions. I believe that for the cementing of friendship and a fuller understanding between the bridge players of the world nothing is more beneficial than for American teams to compete with the bridge players of other countries. The coming American-Argentine match will be a step in the right direction.

It has been difficult to arrange such matches heretofore. Every year an American team plays a European team [in the last two years it has been an English team] for the Charles M. Schwab challenge trophy. Otherwise it has been difficult to arrange international matches, for a team-of-four contest is desirable in order that there may be a true test of skill, and how often can four champion players, worthy of representing their country, spare the time and the money to journey to a foreign country for a bridge tournament? But science has come to our aid. We shall play by radio!

By the use of short-wave radio transmission, American players can sit at the bridge table in this country, and Argentine players will sit at the bridge table in their own country. They will hear each other bid as though they were in the same room. No time will be wasted, for as each player puts his card on the table he will call its name, and his opponents, four thousand miles away, will know exactly what he has played.

All the world can listen in on the match—and this in itself is a great advancement, for at most big bridge tournaments spectators are barred and students of the game do not have the opportunity of learning from the champions. The American-Argentine match will be broadcast by station W2XAF. The announcer will read the hands as they are dealt, so that the millions of kibitzers will know what everyone holds. Of course, the players themselves may not listen to his announcements, for they must not know what cards their partners and opponents hold. But after the public has been informed they will take their places at the table and proceed to play bridge.

≈

The plan of bridge games by radio has been carefully tested by station W2XAF. Not long ago it had a game played by amateur radio operators in four countries thousands of miles apart. An American player had a partner in Australia! Together they played contract bridge against a man in Europe and a man in South America. They could hear each other bid and play; they carried on conversations, post-mortems, and all other pleasant social amenities of bridge players, just as though they had been assembled around the same table.

Those who hear this contest by air can look forward to first-class championship bridge. The Argentine team represents the Jocky club of Buenos Aires, the leading bridge-playing club in that great country. The Argentine team will be chosen from Leon Casabal, captain. Adolfo Gabarret, Alfredo Navarro, John Fischer, and Hector Cramer, representing the best bridge talent in Buenos Aires.

The American team, representing the Crockford's clubs of New York and Chicago, will include my wife, Josephine Culbertson, who has a championship record exceeded by no man; Sidney Lenz, who will be remembered as my antagonist in the famous "battle of the century" in 1932; Theodore Lightner and Albert Morehead, who with Mrs. Culbertson and myself were members of the team which won the Schwab trophy last year; Walter Malowan and Richard L. Frey, both winners of many American championship tournaments. (Mr. Frey was the country's leading tournament player last year), and myself. Of course, only four members of each team can play at the same time.

It would be a waste of time to deal the cards at the table just before starting to play, for then the players would have to wait while the announcer in one country told the announcer in the other country what cards had been dealt. Dealing committees have therefore been named in both countries. In the United States the committee consists of Walter Beinecke, Harold S. Vanderbilt, and Waldemar von Zedtwitz. These are all great players, but, of course, their position on the dealing committee makes it impossible for them to be members of the team, for they will know in advance what cards every player will hold. In Buenos Aires the dealing committee is W. A. Gardiner, Florencio Lozano, and Pablo Morano.

The match must be played no later than this month, for the seasons in Argentina are exactly the opposite of the seasons in this country, and our winter is their summer. In December, while we are shivering with the cold, it becomes so hot in Argentina that they cannot play bridge, but must rush away to the seashore and escape from the heat.

I invite you all to "attend" this match by radio and in effect to sit beside me at the bridge table while I bid and play.

≈

The holdup play is well known to those who play no-trump contracts well. With the ace or some other commanding card in the suit which the opponents open, the declarer refuses to take the first lead, and perhaps subsequent leads, of their suit. By the time he finally takes his ace one of his opponents has no more cards of that suit and cannot lead it later.

The holdup play serves more than one purpose. In some of its most valuable forms it often goes unrecognized by average players. One of its frequent uses is shown in the following deal:

	♠ A 5 2 ♥ A J 10 7 4 ♦ A Q 6 ♣ 5 4
♠ J 9 ♥ K 9 ♦ J 5 4 ♣ K97632	N. W. E. S.	♠ Q 7 4 ♥ Q 6 3 ♦ K 9 8 7 ♣ Q J 8
	♠ K 10 8 6 3 ♥ 8 5 2 ♦ 10 3 2 ♣ A 10

The bidding [North-South vulnerable]:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♣*	Double
2 ♣	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠ [final bid]

Opening lead, club 6 by West.

South won the first trick with the club ace, and in doing so figuratively cut his own throat. Even though his second play was properly a heart, by which play he began the setting up of the heart suit while retaining a trump entry to his own hand, his doom was sealed. West could not be kept out of the lead with his club king after East won the queen of hearts. When West got the lead he led a diamond through dummy's ace-queen. East later got the lead with the queen of spades, and his king of diamonds was the setting trick.

What a difference there would have been if South had used the holdup play on the very first trick! West would never have regained the lead, and East naturally could not lead diamonds from his king. Dummy's hearts could have been established and South could have thrown away his two losing diamonds, making his contract easily.

Bridge Problem

South plays the deal here at a contract of four spades; by excellent play he comes very close to making his contract, but brilliant defense by West thwarts him.

The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Double	Redouble	2 ♦
Pass	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠ (final bid)

West opened the king of hearts, then took the ace and led a third heart. How should South play the hand, and how should West defend? The solution below.

SOLUTION: After West takes the king and ace of hearts, dummy wins the heart queen. South draws three rounds of trumps, then takes the ace and king of diamonds. On these West throws away the diamond queen and jack, leaving himself with the nine. Otherwise he would have to win the third round of diamonds and lead a club to South's ten-ace. By throwing his high diamonds West allows East to get the lead with the ten of diamonds and lead a club through South's king-jack. South loses two hearts, one diamond, and one club and goes down one.

Questions and Answers

Question: What is a "cue bid"?

Answer: In bridge parlance a cue bid is a bid which does not show a biddable suit but does show the ace of the suit, or sometimes a void. It was given this name, I believe, by Sidney Lenz. The most effective cue bid is a bid in a suit the opponents have bid, for partner cannot but realize that the cue bid is meant only to show an ace or a void. Cue bids in suits the opponents have not bid are sometimes dangerous, for partner may think that they are meant to show genuine biddable suits and, misreading the bidder's purpose, may raise that suit to a game or a slam.

Question: When playing progressive bridge, not rubbers, how is vulnerability determined?

Answer: In progressive bridge exactly four deals are played to each round. The first deal, no one is vulnerable; the second and third deals, only the dealer's side is vulnerable; the fourth deal, everyone is vulnerable. If a hand is passed out it is not redealt; the deal passes to the next player and the vulnerability conditions change as though the previous hand had been played.

To End Annoying Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up winter coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and tastes fine.

This home mixture soothes the irritated throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the phlegm and eases the soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Kidneys Must Purify Blood

To Bring Vitality, Clear Skin and Youthful Looks

Women Need Help More Often Than Men

The only way your body can clean out Acids and poisonous wastes from your blood, is through 9 million tiny, delicate Kidney tubes or filters. If, because of functional troubles, your Kidneys get tired or slow down in their work, these poisons remain in the system and make your eyes look dull and your skin coarse and dry, and at the same time you find yourself all Tired-Out, Nervous, and unable to keep up with the speed of modern life.

Functional Kidney troubles also may cause much more serious and disagreeable symptoms, such as Getting Up Nights, Leg Pains, Backache, Circles Under Eyes, Dizziness, Rheumatic Pains, Acidity, Burning, Smarting, and Itching.

Any Doctor can tell you that the speed of modern life and present day foods throw an extra heavy load on the Kidneys, and that most people need help from time to time if they are to feel their best and preserve their youthful appearance. Fortunately, for sufferers, it is easy to help functional Kidney Troubles with the Doctor's guaranteed prescription Cystex, which now is available at all drug stores under a positive guarantee to satisfy completely or cost nothing.

Doctors Praise Cystex

Doctor T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist, of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any Doctor will recommend it for its definite benefit in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless." And Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, another widely known Physician and Medical Examiner, of San Francisco, recently said: "Since the Kidneys purify the blood, the poisons collect in these organs and must be promptly flushed from the system, otherwise they re-enter the blood stream and create a toxic condition. I can truthfully recommend the use of Cystex."

World-Wide Success

Cystex is not an experiment, but is a proven success in 31 different countries throughout the world. It is prepared with scientific accuracy in accordance with the strict and rigid standards of the United States Dispensatory and the United States Pharmacopoeia, and being designed especially to act in the Kidneys and Bladder is swift and safe in action. Most users report a remarkable improvement in 48 hours and complete satisfaction in 8 days.

Guaranteed To Work

Because of its unusual success, Cystex is offered under an unlimited guarantee to do the work to your complete satisfaction in 8 days, or money back on return of empty package. Under this unlimited guarantee you can put Cystex to the test and see exactly what it can do in your particular case. You must feel younger, stronger, and better than you have in a long time—you must feel that Cystex has done the work to your complete satisfaction or you merely return the empty package and it costs you nothing. You are the sole judge of your own satisfaction. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at druggists, and as the guarantee protects you fully, you should not take chances with cheap, inferior, or irritating drugs, or delay. Ask your druggist for guaranteed Cystex (pronounced Siss-Tex) today.

THE DIARY OF A MAIDEN

Secret Bride of John Paul Jones

IN THE COURT OF

CATHERINE THE GREAT

Translated from the Russian by Ivan Narodny
Adapted by Margarita Orlov and Louise Bargelt

THE STORY TO DATE

Herewith is presented the eighth instalment of the intimate diary of Princess Anna Kourakina, maid of honor at the court of Catherine the Great of Russia and secret bride of the American naval hero, John Paul Jones. In the preceding chapters Princess Anna has told of her amazing and often terrifying experiences at the licentious court of Catherine and later at the court of Marie Antoinette in Paris. It is in Paris that the princess first meets the brave hero of the seas, Paul Jones. She has been sent to Paris to persuade the naval commander to fight for Catherine in the Black sea. The princess and John Paul fall deeply in love, and one of the greatest romances of all times begins. In last week's instalment she tells of her quite appalling experience with a French docteur and supposedly holy savant in his cabinet secret at St. Germain-en-Laye. Like Rasputin of Russia, the docteur seems to have been on intimate terms with many of the aristocrats of France, including even the fair Queen Marie. The princess escapes, however, rescued by the daring John Paul.

This amazing document, which was buried for nearly 150 years in the archives of Catherine the Great, came to light during the Russian revolution. The diary did not make its way to this country until after the death of Baroness Helmy Weisserich, last known descendant of Princess Anna and John Paul Jones, whose secret marriage yielded the heritage of a son.

Italics appearing in diary text are the editors' explanatory notes.

INSTALMENT VIII.

Paris, Jan. 8, 1788.

WHEN Commodore Jones and I return from St. Germain-en-Laye, I find a letter for me from her Imperial Majesty.

She suggests that I come back to St. Petersburg at once! She misses me! She has never realized how invaluable my services are to her. I have made myself so helpful she cannot get along without me. She wants me to finish up my affairs and leave immediately.

She hopes I have acquired some fine art treasures, that I have persuaded John Paul Jones to enlist on Russia's side, and that I have discovered in the Marquis de La Fayette a great dictator for France. But whether or not I have accomplished these things—she wants me to come back.

She adds that I may visit Tver on my return trip and spend a few nights with my parents. But in a postscript she repeats her instructions to hurry!

She is planning an elaborate Bacchanalian entertainment for some two hundred nobles from the provinces. She needs a generous subscription of money from them, and will prepare a royal program for their diversion. The finale of a three-day celebration will be the "ballet of the virgins." Each noble is to be presented to a fair maiden as his vis-à-vis.

I am to assist the empress in making this saturnalian carousal a huge success!

I crush the letter in my hands.

"That is Russia," I say slowly. "That is the Russia to which I am returning."

⁂

Paris, Jan. 9, 1788.

I am leaving Paris tonight.

I have recalled my invitations for the large reception I was planning to give the end of the week. Baroness Simolin is helping me all she can.

I have such a pleasant surprise this afternoon.

The commodore and I have just finished luncheon, when Count Fersen is announced—and the Countess Von Osten!

I glance quickly at John Paul. This must be the queen! She comes incognito, I remember. It is safer and exposes her less to the likelihood of insults from the crowds at the street corners.

They stay for nearly an hour. It is a visit I shall never forget, but cherish as a memento of a beautiful queen in one of her most captivating moods.

She is not melancholy, as when I first saw her, nor broken with terror as when she last visited me. Just very sweet and utterly appealing.

She brings me a diamond and ruby pendant. It was a present to her when she was crowned. She wants me to keep it in memory of her and to think of her always, no matter what happens, with kindness and sympathy. She hopes I will refrain from repeating to the empress the story of her cowardice and the crimson beads!

As they leave the count asks me to write often to Queen Marie.

"Perhaps she can visit your court in a few months if conditions do not improve here. Empress Catherine will invite her, I am sure, if you are able to make her understand the painful atmosphere of a hostile city."

He adds, under his breath, as the queen goes out:

"She is happier today than she has been for a long time!"

Marie Antoinette is never to go on this journey to Russia, which Count Fersen so fondly plans. Not many more "happy" moments will she have, this ill starred Marie, who began life as a petted darling in Peterhof palace, wore a crown before she was twenty, and whose greatest fault perhaps was that she failed to question until too late, either the value or the evanescence of the gifts which fate bestowed. Not so many moons now before she will be snatched from the heights of worldly fortune to find her home in a prison instead of a thousand windowed palace. A torturing, terrible trip lies ahead of her, though she knows it not. She will descend from a throne down to a scaffold, ride in a tumbril instead of a chariot.

⁂

Later.

It won't be long now—and I shall put Paris behind me.

My coaches are waiting outside. Everything is packed.

Baroness Simolin has been a marvel of efficiency. She has had men working for twenty-four hours packing my belongings.

She urges me to take the journey slowly.

I am expecting John Paul any moment now. He is driving with me to the outskirts of Paris and will return on horseback!

O, my adored—it will be hard to say good-by!

⁂

Tver, Russia, Feb. 16, 1788.

I am back in the home of my girlhood tonight, and Paris is only a memory!

Everything is quite unchanged. Yet why should it be any different in a few short months? It is less than a year since I left here. Do I expect the change in myself to be reflected in Tver's piles of masonry?

The gaunt old fortress, the great cathedral where I pause to make a prayer for my distant lover, the ice-bound Volga, longing to be released for its journey to the Caspian sea, my own palace home—all are waiting to bid me welcome, as if it were only yesterday that I went away.

My father takes me in his arms and studies me with grave, deep affection. He has aged these last months and is almost feeble.

"You look the same, my girl, as when you left us. But are you? Have you kept the faith?"

I knew this would be his first question! Dear father!

I answer him truthfully . . . I have lived up to the standards he taught me. The court has not changed me.

Tears run down my mother's face as she embraces me. She has suffered, too, letting me go so far. Both she and my father know something, at least, of Petersburg under our empress.

A letter is waiting for me from Paris. I open it excitedly. It is from John Paul. He is leaving Paris shortly for Copenhagen. He will take the shortest route to Russia. From Stockholm he goes to the seaport of Gresholm and expects to obtain two boats to cross the Baltic to the Gulf of Finland—waves and ice permitting.

The letter drops from my hand. O, he does not know our Russian country. Such a trip is madness. He can never cross the ice-ridden Baltic at this season.

I hand it to my father to read, telling him that it is from Commodore John Paul Jones, whose services I have secured for her imperial majesty.

My father reads it and frowns. "What sort of a madman is this?" he cries. "Planning to risk the Baltic this time of year?"

"No madman," I reply, trying desperately to keep back my tears. "He is the most daring navigator the seas have ever seen!"

My father's eyes soften in a comprehensive flash. He pats my shoulder affectionately. "If he is that sort, he will win, Anna, and there is no need for you to worry. Dry your tears. Fear helps no one. To the brave of heart nothing is impossible. Tell us more about your daring friend."

Soon they hear the whole story of my stay in Paris, and smile tolerantly as I exalt John Paul above mortal men.

When I finish my mother murmurs that her dearest hope for me has been gratified. A true and worthy love has enfolded my life.

"Then you are betrothed?" questions my father.

"Yes—and no! We admit we love each other, and that some day we shall marry. But I was in Paris on purely official business—to win the commodore for her imperial majesty's fleet. I felt as if it were almost disloyal for us to talk of love."

"I can't see that. Affairs of love and of state are poles apart. That is unless—" my father hesitates, and his eyes darken, "unless by chance the empress sent you to bring her back a lover, not a naval commander. Is that the case?"

I close my eyes to shut out the picture of many things. "I don't know."

"Does Commodore Jones fear the same thing, Anna?"

"O, no, he does not understand. He is an American. A European might sense the situation more keenly."

"Then you do admit—such a situation may arise?"

"It is possible, of course—I cannot say," I answer quickly. If he would only talk of something else. He cannot know what torture even the thought of all this is to me!

But my father asks one more question.

"And supposing the situation should arise?"

I am silent and my mother answers for me. "The commodore will meet it in some way," she answers firmly. "All that lies in the hands of God."

My father is obviously depressed, and we cannot cheer him. He returns to the subject again and again. He is as well informed on the conditions in the empress' navy as on affairs at court.

"I can only see disaster for your John Paul Jones, Anna. Scarlet Nassau, a villain and a traitor, is already on the fleet. There are many English officers, besides, who will have no love for Jones after the beating he gave England. And then there is the empress." He pauses. "You should have been cleverer, my girl. Why did you persuade him to come?"

"Probably because I was loyal to my mission and unthinking of the consequences which you picture so vividly."

"And because you love him so much you cannot contemplate life apart from him?"

"You are right, father. I do love him—that much."

I have had a rapturous welcome from everyone. Prince Naryshkin kissed me on both cheeks with more affection than I have ever seen this vivacious but sophisticated and emotion-sated courtier show.

He turns away and my mother and I are alone.

She changes the subject and talks restfully of herself, our friends, of the small events which have taken place since I have been away.

It is not until later in the evening that I tell them of my life at court. Not of my first dreadful days at the palace, but of life later on, after the empress has made me her friend. I dwell on her great kindness and indulgence towards me, and stress the fact that although I differ with her in matters of morals, she has always been most considerate of me. She allows me to live my own life and calls me her Vestal Virgin.

"When did you become her confidential secretary?" my mother inquires. It is plain she is very proud of me.

"Before I went to Paris." I do not mention how the empress despaired of making me a light-of-love at the imperial court, and assigned to me other duties when I refused to play the original rôle she had planned.

I regret already that I have told my parents so much of the situation around Commodore Jones. It will all be such a terrible harassment to them—and they can do nothing, nothing at all!

⁂

Tver, Russia, Feb. 18, 1788.

My visit home is at an end. I am starting on my trip to St. Petersburg tonight.

An old priest and life-long friend of our family is going back with me. Father has evidently conferred at length with him and comes to me with a plan.

He is determined that Father Sergius shall accompany me to the imperial palace. Then when Commodore Jones arrives we can be married privately. Afterwards, when his military duties are over, we can leave Russia.

That is our own dream, too! How often have we discussed it in Paris! God grant that it come true.

⁂

St. Petersburg, March 1, 1788.

I am back again at the court of her imperial majesty.

A quite elegant little stone palace, only a few versts from the empress, has been fitted up for me. My official quarters are also here, and Father Sergius is living with me. I have my own personal staf and one of the best cooks from the imperial palace!

The stage is slowly being set for the arrival of my John Paul.

I have delivered a full report of my journey, together with letters, documents and gifts, to Count Sheremetieff, who will present them to Empress Catherine.

I have had a rapturous welcome from everyone. Prince Naryshkin kissed me on both cheeks with more affection than I have ever seen this vivacious but sophisticated and emotion-sated courtier show. "You are a bright light, Anna Mihailovna, in the shadows of our dark and pagan court. Don't ever leave us for so long again. We are in the gloom without you!"

I am conscious of a vast difference between the French court and our Russian palaces. Or is it only the immeasurable gulf between the two reigning women, Empress Catherine and Queen Marie?

Catherine has primitive force, a capacity for a gamut of fierce emotions, and is ruthless and imperious, where the French queen is petulant. Catherine wields a whip when her whims are crossed, and draws a sword when she senses danger. Marie rails and weeps and stamps her pretty foot.

Catherine's vision embraces the known world, while Marie scarcely sees beyond the confines of her own parks and gardens. Catherine is building institutions and culture, sciences and arts, from the genius of the whole world. There is no one acclaimed on earth, from China to new born America, to whom she does not send envoys, that they may bring her back the man, or something of his work.

If her physical passions are violent, they are matched by that equally overwhelming urge for the cultivating and refining of her own people.

Marie Antoinette, I remind myself, is not the ruler of France, only the wife of a king. But had Catherine married Louis the 16th, she would long ere this have been the "king." Where Louis would be, one can only guess!

My sympathy, as always, since my first day at the Little Trianon, goes out to Queen Marie. I have never in my life felt so sorry for any one.

For Empress Catherine, sympathy is neither wanted nor needed. There is vast admiration in my heart for this recognized commander-in-chief of Russia's destiny, but also a little fear. This fear never leaves me, night or day!

I meet the empress in a few minutes now. I am dressed elaborately, that I may be pleasing to her eyes. Prince Naryshkin tells me that I am wearing a new look since my return. That my eyes glow as if the world were mine!

A chamberlain will call for me shortly to escort me with due formality to the boudoir of her imperial majesty.

⁂

Later.

The empress is delighted with all that I have accomplished.

"I have read your documents and inspected your art treasures. Your real master stroke, however, is Commodore Jones' petition to enter my services. Baron Simolin writes you exerted a much needed influence here. I have already appointed the commodore rear admiral of my Black sea fleet, and acceded to the conditions stipulated in his formal request." Her smile is shrewd. "That American genius, I must own, reaches for the moon, when he insists on an undivided command!"

"He is accustomed to giving orders, not taking them, your imperial majesty!"

"I have yielded him that point. What is he like, little princess? Will I enjoy him?"

I grow cautious. Not too enthusiastic, O heart of mine!

I describe the commodore, the charm of his manner, his grace and polish. She will find him very different from most European men. He is straightforward, frank, without guile or diplomacy. He is a new type at this court.

"That sounds good. I am unutterably bored with the men around me. I want the devotion of a real hero."

My heart sinks, but I study a paper in my lap with apparent unconcern.

"And you, princess, did you fall in love with him?"

I am expecting this question and am fortified against it.

"You sent me as an official and an envoy. That is the part I have played with him. Your orders did not state that I fall a victim to his wiles."

She studies me thoughtfully. "You are lovely, Anna. Your eyes shine, you have perfect poise and a rare ease of manner. Was the commodore unmoved by your beauty?"

Again I have my answer carefully prepared.

"I think, your imperial majesty, that there is another woman already in his life. She is a Parisian, a Mademoiselle Tellison. Their friendship is of long standing. She is a natural daughter of Louis the 15th, and has been very useful to Commodore Jones in the making of important contacts for him."

I hesitate a moment. May God forgive me for my duplicity!

"Against this woman," I add, "what chance have I, a mere princess? But with you, it will be very different. Already he is ardently loyal to you, and admires and exalts you above all women."

My words sound stilted and forced to me, but they have their effect on the empress. She looks relieved and leans back on her divan with a pleased smile.

"I am glad to hear you say this. Commodore Jones has written me some most flattering letters."

In defense of the empress at this point it must be admitted that John Paul's letters to her might well have misled a woman far less susceptible than Catherine of Russia. Not that they expressed affection, for he had never seen her and his feelings were entirely impersonal. But they certainly conveyed admiration in the highest degree; the adoration of a subject for his sovereign. Paul Jones knew how to write and he was a poet at heart, with all a poet's yen for "embroidering." Very naturally, the empress reasoned, if he admired her mind and her achievements, why should he not also be swayed by her personality?

The conversation drifts to the French court, and the mounting chaos in Paris. I will try to draw a picture which will enlist her sympathy for the bewildered king and queen, but in this I am only partly successful. The empress frowns angrily as I explain their bewilderment and helplessness, but towards LaFayette she is explosive.

"He is a contemptible traitor and should be executed," she cries. "A man of his birth and brains, to favor a revolutionary movement!"

"But we are asking to our own court a preëminent revolutionist, John Paul Jones," I cannot resist saying.

She sees the humor of this and her eyes twinkle, but she refuses to admit the cases are similar.

"The Scotch-American turned against that old idiot, King George," she snaps. "Besides, didn't you write me that the commodore favors the old régime in France? If the Americans really establish a successful democracy and maintain that dangerous credo that all men are free and equal, you can rest assured I shall soon cease to be friendly. But in the meantime—I want their genius, John Paul Jones, in my Black sea war."

I make an unfortunate slip before I leave. How serious it may prove, I have no way of knowing.

She asks me, with a sly wink, if I met by any chance the famous Docteur Remy-Bertin, and if I learned from him any much needed lessons on life?

I relate to her my painful experience at St. Germain-en-Laye, and how unspeakable things might have happened if it had not been for the commodore's dramatic arrival and rescue.

She gives one of her sudden bursts of laughter.

"Mon Dieu, but that sounds just like you, my Virgin Anna. Will you never learn sense?" She continues to laugh uproariously. "You would outwit the devil himself! Imagine what an opportunity you had! There is no hope for you. Some day, if you don't watch out, I shall completely lose my patience with you and bundle you off to a nunnery. It is a shame, in my opinion, that the commodore ever broke in——"

She stops laughing, very suddenly, and gives me a sharp look.

"Now just why, pray tell me, should he have had your interest so at heart that he followed you?" She is puzzled, analyzing things rapidly, in her canny fashion.

I am not prepared for this question! "I really don't know," I stammer. Then I collect myself. "I had an appointment with him on official business that morning and when I failed to keep it and he learned from my servants where I had gone he went after me. He does not approve of Docteur Remy-Bertin and the practices he indulges in."

"The commodore is a Puritan then?" she drawls. She is not smiling now. "He must be like those sons of liberty he fought for. You and he are Puritans together. A pretty, effective picture!"

Her manner has cooled and there is a silence in which I have a vision of dropping into a deep abyss.

She does not return to the subject. She discusses various trivial details she wishes me to attend to around the palace, and dismisses me with the curt order that I am to appear at the imperial palace, in her dining room, for dinner tomorrow night. We will plan at that time for the entertainment of the two hundred nobles which is to take place in a couple of weeks. It may be difficult to obtain the two hundred maidens for their diversion, but she is confident I can manage it."

I depart with a troubled conscience and oppressed with many misgivings.

I have not been entirely truthful in deliberately trying to convey a false impression of my relationship with John Paul.

I have been a coward in concealing our love!

And more than all this is the appalling implication behind the empress' words. She is plainly toying with the idea of John Paul as a lover!

⁂

St. Petersburg, March 2, 1788.

I have had a long talk with my dear Father Sergius. He is very wise in the ways of the human heart, and the devious, twisted paths the brain can take. I shall need him often, I feel.

He knows of my love for John Paul, and also of my parents' wish that we be married secretly, as soon as the commodore arrives.

He reminds me, however, that I am a Greek Catholic, and a Russian princess. Will I be happy for long, married to a Scotch-American and a Presbyterian, a man of the people, a commoner? I am leaping recklessly over the borders of religion, nationality and class.

I disregard entirely his point of view on nationality and class, and ask him if he does not believe that all religions which seek the betterment of their followers must meet with a kind God's approval?

The good Father Sergius hesitates to dispute me. But I can see that he is greatly troubled.

O, if John Paul would only come! It may be two months yet. God speed him to me.

⁂

St. Petersburg, March 3, 1788.

At dinner last night her imperial majesty was in a hilarious mood. She is highly elated over her atrocious plan for the amusement of the nobles.

There are only a few of us at her table. Prince Naryshkin, Count de Segur, who is the French ambassador, Count Sheremetieff, and myself.

I am to invite, in her name, some two hundred of her wealthiest nobles, preferably those from the remoter provinces, to be her guests. Count Sheremetieff will plan a bacchanalian feast and entertainment to dazzle and overwhelm them—such entertainment as will move them to sign over to the empress twenty million rubles!

She needs this money, partly for her war against the Turks, and partly to enable her to purchase a royal collection of Dutch and English paintings now on the market. She doesn't want a loan! This twenty million rubles she wishes to be a present. Ostensibly it will be a reward for her great services in protecting and extending our empire.

The finale of this three-day Saturnalia is to be a gala ballet of young maidens.

"I have never heard of anything so revolting," I murmur to Prince Naryshkin. "How can I do a thing like this? How can I endanger two hundred girls? I can't do it. There must be some way out."

"Which you will discover, if any-one can, my princess." His eyes narrow warningly. "Though, if you ask my advice—I would say that you had better go ahead with it."

The empress makes no further reference to the affair. She has given her orders. That is sufficient.

⁂

St. Petersburg, March 4, 1788.

I appeal this morning to Count Sheremetieff. I have thought of a plan by which we can save the two hundred maidens from the drunken nobles, and at the same time appear to be carrying out her imperial majesty's autocratic orders in every respect. I implore his help to spare the girls.

He is frankly surprised. Do I really think the girls will object? Such a glorious finale to their three days at court.

I reply heatedly that his years here with the empress have made him inhuman, and ask him how he would feel if any of his nieces were numbered among the crowd. At this his eyebrows lift and he inclines his head solemnly. I realize I have made at least a slight impression, and hasten to outline briefly my idea.

I am going to secure two hundred intelligent women from the city to deceive these nobles.

Very reluctantly, and in some trepidation the count acquiesces in my plan. He agrees to find out what he can do with a few of his most trusted guards.

"But if we ever are caught!" he mutters lugubriously, as I leave.

"It won't matter, after the celebration is over. Every one will have had a glorious time, and her imperial majesty will have her twenty million rubles!"

In my heart I'll confess I do not feel so confident.

However, I push matters resolutely ahead!

Heaven grant that the empress may never discover our plan!

Religion of Ethiopia Mysterious - Even to Ethiopians

Church Ceremonies Are Conducted in Archaic Tongue

By THE REV. JOHN EVANS

THE state religion of Ethiopia is to be understood only by Americans with imagination, able to shake off modernity and cast their minds back to the fourth and fifth Christian centuries, when, except to a devout fragment of the people, religion was an admixture of magic and politics, divorced from ethics and morals, and the main source of special privilege or nationalistic advantage.

It is further necessary to go back to a pre-Christian and polluted Judaism which had absorbed far too much Egyptian fetishism and other African manners. These two streams, the Christian muddied by stormy controversy and the other plainly defiled, must be seen as flowing into one another, such confluence being known among theologians as syncretism. When the two streams met they seemed to congeal, unable thereafter to pick up anything either cleansing or polluting.

But to manage this feat of merging imagination with history does not mean that the western mind will apprehend or understand present Ethiopian religion, because, in the first place, the Ethiopian does not understand his religion himself. Moreover, he does not desire to understand it any more than the night club habitué wishes to give academic standing to ballads of the blues singer. Understanding in such matters tends to ruin their fascination.

Besides all this, there is between the occidental and the Ethiopian a psychological chasm which few ever cross.

The Ethiopian has well guarded himself against any possible understanding of his religion by conducting his elaborate ceremonial in an archaic Semitic language called Geez. All of his sacred literature is written in that tongue, including the Old and New Testaments. The Ethiopian priest or monk is trained to intone the words as meaningless sounds, a glossolalia; the Greek way of saying "babbling tongues" of incantations of medicine man, magician, or ethnic religionist.

⁂

(Of course, the use of Latin in the Catholic church is for an entirely different and valid purpose, viz., that of meeting the necessity of a universal language for a worldwide faith. Furthermone, all Catholic priests are able Latinists, as are many of the Catholic laity, with the entire church thoroughly trained to know and understand the meaning of all that is said or done in the name of Catholic religion.)

This recent picture of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia was taken during a religious ceremony at Kidana Mihrat church. The royal bodyguard and high church officials are taking part in the sacred rites. The negus' command to his armies to "Hold your positions at all costs" has spurred them to superhuman efforts against the forces of Italy.

The present-day lack of understanding of their religion by Ethiopians is reminiscent of the New Testament incident when St. Philip met the Ethiopian official, member of Queen Candace's court. (See Acts viii., 26 ff.)

"Do you understand what you are reading?" asked Philip of the Ethiopian, who was observed to be reading from the prophecies of Isaiah.

"Why, how can I," the Ethiopian answered, "unless someone explains it to me?"

The story proceeds on through St. Philip's exposition of the troublesome text and culminates in the conversion and baptism of the Ethiopian, who was supposed to have returned to his court and country and converted them to Christianity early in the first Christian century.

Although this is but a pious legend, inasmuch as no trace of Christianity can be found in Ethiopia before the fourth century, yet it does tend to show Semitic origins and Judaistic religious backgrounds of the high-caste or Amharic Ethiopian. Jerusalem for ages has been his holy city, and a pilgrimage to it conferred merit. Doubtless this Ethiopian mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles was returning from such a pilgrimage when he was met by St. Philip at Gaza.

The tradition that Emperor Haile Selassie, king of kings and lion of the tribe of Judah, is a descendant of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba probably has no foundation in historic fact. But comparison even of photographs of Amharic Ethiopians with other African tribesmen confirms the general belief among scholars that Ethiopians are not Negroes; that there is an atmosphere of princely superiority among the Amharic as compared with many tribesmen of the dark continent. Anthropologists, or students of racial characteristics, say that Haile Selassie's people is a contemporaneous branch of the ramified family of Semites, with the Queen of Sheba tradition at least substantiating a belief in such a racial continuity.

(Other peoples belonging to the Semitic family include Arabs, Hebrews, Jews, Moors, and Phœnicians.)

The Ethiopian church (more properly called the Abyssinian church) has affinity with the Coptic or Egyptian Christian church. That relationship is fairly analogous with that of the Church of England to the Episcopal church in Scotland or America. The first missionary to Ethiopia was given orders by the famed Alexandrine patriarch Athanasius, victorious foe of the heretic Arius at the council of Nicæa A. D. 325 and author of the historic creed which bears his name. This missionary was made bishop of Ethiopia by Athanasius some time during the middle years of the fourth century.

⁂

The story of the evangelization of Ethiopia is authentically related by the Rev. Wesley A. Havermale, formerly of Jerusalem, in a recent issue of the Episcopal journal, the Living Church.

Mr. Havermale writes of Moripius, a sage of Tyre, who with his two charges, the boys Frumentius and Edesius, set out on an expedition to the Red sea. They landed at an Ethiopian port in need of water, and savages of the region massacred Moripius and his crew. The two boys, spared by the natives, impressed their captors by their studiousness, the savages finding them engrossed in their lessons while awaiting the party's return to the ship.

Later the boys became tutors to the Ethiopian king's son and eventually were influential throughout the whole realm. When Frumentius and Edesius became of age they returned to civilization to plead for missions in Ethiopia. The former was consecrated bishop of Abyssinia by Athanasius at Alexandria and returned to Ethiopia under the name of Salama and founded the Abyssinian church.

This was the only great missionary acquisition of the Alexandrine or Coptic church. Praises are still sung to Frumentius in the hymns of the people. His successors must be consecrated by the patriarch of Alexandria, who sometimes resides in Cairo.

In the Ethiopic cultus, with its lavish ritual, are doubtless to be found some very ancient elements of Hebrew-Christian and Egyptian (Coptic) Christian liturgy. These are combined with still earlier ritual matter from Judaism. For instance, a reproduction of the ark of Zion which Joshua used with such devastating effect at Jericho, Ai, and elsewhere during the conquest of Canaan is given reverential deference in Abyssinian churches.

An Ethiopian soldier reading historical sketches of his country's greatest religious figures.

Other Hebraisms are numerous. Ethiopians observe the Jewish Sabbath, like Seventh Day Adventists in this country, and also the Lord's day, Sunday. Initiation ceremonies include both circumcision and baptism. Pork is taboo, and polygamy is permitted—the only Christian church now permitting a man a pair or more of legal wives.

Because the stream of Ethiopian religion congealed in its earliest period, ancient controversies which rocked orientalized Rome still flash potent lightning. Politics is still religion, and dispute over some moot point of fifteen hundred years ago still issues in bitter quarrels.

Toss into one pot of controversy the present German religious conflict, the Ku-Klux Klan, the most acrid events of the recent fundamentalist-modernist dispute, and the coming 1936 election campaign, together with an oriental Roman emperor who might wish a state religion unified enough to consolidate his world dominions, and the reader will get an impression of what went on throughout the eastern Roman empire in the fourth and fifth centuries. All of that still goes on today—over the same questions and to the same purpose—in Abyssinia.

Haile Selassie, meaning Power of Trinity, rules a stormy empire. While he invokes his power to purge his land of slavery and polygamy, yet he finds at base the religion of his realm his chief obstacle to all social betterment. This is so because Ethiopian religion conserves some of the worst Hebrew practices, long since abandoned by Jews, with Haile Selassie's very authority resting on the tradition that his line leads back to one of Solomon's polygamous marriages.

Christian elements in the Abyssinian church are often curious. Pontius Pilate has been canonized a saint in the church's calendar. This was done because the Savior's trial judge fulfilled the all-important oriental cleansing, or ablution, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person." As in pre-Christian times, the pilgrimage to Jerusalem is meritorious, but under Christian teaching such a pilgrimage is equivalent to washing clean the page of sins in the book of life. This is sealed when the pilgrim kisses Jerusalem's stones. Kissing the hand of a priest also purifies the body of sinfulness.

⁂

With the exception of one important point of universally accepted Christian doctrin, the Ethiopian church more nearly resembles the Greek Orthodox than any church of the western world. This difference in doctrin was debated in the fifth century at Chalcedon, where one of the great councils was held. The controversy had to do, as all early councils did, with the church's teaching about Christ's human-divine nature or natures. Almost universally Christians believe that he has a human-divine nature, "inseparable and unmixed"—but the Abyssinian church holds that he has but a single, human-divine nature. This distinction is almost too fine to be expressed in English, but as this needle-point controversy—called the monophysite dispute—still has meaning in Ethiopia after nearly fifteen hundred years, it is easy to see why other branches of Christianity find Ethiopia difficult of access.

In the sixteenth century the Portuguese introduced the Jesuit rule in the country, and the monastic system has largely prevailed since that time. Dr. Herbert W. Willett, emeritus professor of Hebrew language and literature at the University of Chicago, responsible for this statement, added that the Catholic church was officially expelled in 1633.

Commenting further, Dr. Willett said:

"The head of the Abyssinian church lives in Egypt and is known as 'the most holy pope and patriarch of the great city of Alexandria and of all the land of Egypt, of Jerusalem the holy city, of Nubia, Abyssinia, and the Pentapolis, all the preaching of St. Mark.' This sounds entirely archaic, and of all the territory outside of Egypt only Abyssinia remains in relation to the presiding bishop in Cairo."

There was a time when the Abyssinian church controled a considerable portion of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, Jerusalem, but with the decay of the Coptic church the Ethiopians were gradually pushed out of the church, they now being allotted a portion of the roof of the sacred edifice. There is an Ethiopian colony in Jerusalem, and it is said that the first time Haile Selassie journeyed from his realm after his coronation was to attend dedication services in Jerusalem of the new Abyssinian Church of St. John. The empress, unaccompanied by him, went there on a pilgrimage and attended the opening of a convent near the Jordan river. The Ethiopians also possess a strange underground church in Jerusalem.

⁂

The Rev. Mr. Havermale described the new church and a service in his Living Church article. One of the curious customs he noted was that, because standing during the long service is deemed proper, crutches are furnished worshipers to relieve their fatigue.

"The rites are strange, weird, barbaric, and beautiful," Mr. Havermale wrote. "The church may have a vague Byzantine atmosphere, but the nave, or body, of the church is circular, with a splendid gate entrance on the street. One enters and views a battered icon (image) on a covered table. Near by is an alms basin. (The giving of alms is a requisite for forgiveness of sins.) The rotunda church has a cupola-like building in the center within. This is probably the equivalent of the iconostasis (image screen separating the congregation from priests during the celebration of the mysteries) of other eastern churches."

THE SHIELD OF SILENCE

By Edwin Balmer and Philip Wylie

The Lives of Alice Myrand and Johanna Strang, Beautiful Foreigner, Draw Closer as Ethan Makes an Odd Finding in the Foggerty Rooming House

THE STORY TO DATE

Lucian Myrand is serving a life sentence for the murder of Serge Ralten, who was supposedly his friend. At the trial Myrand pleaded guilty, but gave no reason for committing the crime, keeping silent to shield some secret. Nor would he explain his mysterious disappearance for ten months after escaping from a German prison camp during the war. Myrand's wife, Ursula, and his daughter, Alice, live on the family estate near Chicago. On the sixth anniversary of the murder Ursula visits her husband in prison. Alice is recounting to Ethan West, a young lawyer friend, the circumstances of the crime, when she receives word her mother is calling her long distance. Ursula has noticed a strange excitement in her husband. That evening Alice and Ethan visit the town house where the murder occurred and which has been untenanted since except for caretakers. Ethan enters the library and finds a man murdered and sprawled on the floor where Ralten had lain. Inspector MacDuffy who handled the case six years before, is called, and Peter Corondelet, formerly Lucian Myrand's friend, now Ursula's, and with whose office Ethan is connected. The slain man cannot be identified. Fresh fingerprints of Ralten's are found in the library. Ethan, Peter Corondelet and MacDuffy go to Joliet penitentiary to see Lucian. For convenience the newly deceased is called "Otto." The killer, "Rupert." They show Lucian a picture taken of the murdered man, which he does not identify. Daniel Fallone, professional reformer, calls on Peter Corondelet to offer his aid. Ethan, at the morgue, follows a woman who is apparently upset on viewing the body of the late victim. Before he can question her she is run down by a roadster, which speeds on.

"Is she dead?" someone demanded.

INSTALMENT VII.

ETHAN had a brief instant of shocked indecision. Then an impulse to go at once to the woman who now lay inertly on the street. The thing which checked that impulse, however, was the thing which made him different from an average person—which implied in his character resourcefulness and quick thinking.

He did what thousands of people in a similar predicament have failed to do: He looked up at the vanishing car, adjusted his vision and etched the numbers of the license plate on his mind.

It had taken less than a second. He was the first to reach the side of the injured woman. He bent over her, conscious as he did so of rapidly approaching footsteps, and he saw at once that she had been badly hurt.

He did not try to move her. He knew that under such circumstances an effort of that kind might prove fatal. An ambulance surgeon would be required to make even the most elementary decisions about her.

His mind was pounding.

He had thought, in the undertaking establishment, that this slatternly woman had made a positive identification of "Otto"—an identification which had frightened her and which she had been unwilling to communicate to the police.

This feeling became fixed as a certainty, now that he knew that the automobile had contained men who had followed her and that it had been driven deliberately into her; driven into her to prevent her passing on to others the identification which she had made; driven by men to whom it was useful that "Otto's" true name should not become quickly known.

Beside her was a handbag.

Ethan picked it up. He was in a circle of people from the street car, from the sidewalk—from everywhere near. They stared at the woman and at him, many of them talking, but no one interfered.

They presumed, seeing him first beside her, that he had been with her; he was her friend.

"Is she dead?" someone demanded.

"No," said Ethan, "she's not dead."

"Pick her up! . . . Don't leave her lying there! . . . Carry her into the drug store!"

"No," said Ethan, keeping the command which the others had first recognized. "Don't move her! Phone for an ambulance."

Ethan rose and the other knelt in the street. Ethan pushed through the thickening circle of the curious and concerned.

He was still carrying the woman's handbag, which he had picked up from beside her. No one challenged his possession of it. He entered the corner drug store, which was deserted except for a boy who had eyes only for the excitement in the street.

⁂

THE telephone booth was in the rear of the store. Ethan shut himself in it, and, dialing "operator," employed the formula which often he had seen printed before him:

"I want to report an accident."

A moment later he was talking to a police operator, to whom he related the bare fact that, at the corner from which he was phoning, a woman had been struck by an automobile when stepping from a street car; and Ethan described her condition.

Ethan held the woman's handbag under the light in the booth and snapped its battered catch. He rummaged through coins, trinkets, a cracked mirror and found a grocer's bill and a folded envelope containing a letter. The bill was made out to Mrs. E. Foggerty, 1919 Peale street, and the envelope of the letter gave the name, Mrs. Elma Foggerty, and the same address.

He had an impulse to pocket the letter, at least, but first he glanced through it. It was nothing—an ordinary, gossipy note from some woman friend who signed herself "Clara." A relative, perhaps. The postmark was Moline, Ill.

Ethan restored the letter and the grocer's bill to the shabby little handbag. He noted in his pocket memorandum Elma Foggerty's name and address and—lest he forget or confuse it—the number of the car which had run her down and speeded away.

He stepped from the booth and called the boy to him. "Tell them out there," he commanded the youth, "that an ambulance is on the way. And give the motorcycle cop this handbag. It belongs to the woman who's hurt."

The boy, dazed with excitement and asking no questions, took the bag and went out.

Ethan hurried to a hotel before which a taxi was waiting.

"Know where Peale street is?"

"Sure. What number?"

"1919."

"That's west and Peale's north."

"How far?"

"Three miles, maybe. Get in. You want to get there?"

Ethan leaped in. "Let's go," he said.

Peale street, when the taxi reached it, proved ugly and mean. Its two and three story houses, some of brick but more of frame clapboard construction, never had been more than "middle class," and they had fallen below that now; a few had dropped, obviously through reluctant stages, into bleak disrepair and poverty. But it was not the row of houses which most concerned Ethan at that moment; his glance swept them but searched the street in front of them for cars. And there was one!

⁂

IT WAS moving, leaving the curbing and pointing down the street in the direction from which Ethan's cab was coming. It looked like—it was the same roadster which had run down Elma Foggerty. There was the number in front!

Ethan had a glimpse of two men's faces as it passed, picking up speed.

"Stop, driver! Stop!" Ethan called. "Turn around!" But before his lips could complete the appeal to get after that car Ethan knew pursuit of it would be useless.

"No; go to the house. Go to 1919," Ethan ordered. They had beaten him to the house—they who had run down Mrs. Elma Foggerty of this address—must have come at once here. They must have completed what they had had to do here, yet the house must hold something which would reveal a meaning.

Ethan stepped from the cab as it stopped before 1919, distinguished from its ill-painted, clapboard neighbors only by its number. He went through a gateless iron fence and to a weatherbeaten porch on which sat a lazy looking young man, comfortable and carefree as any one Ethan ever had encountered. Behind him was a sign reading "Rooms for Rent."

Ethan spoke to the unconcerned youth. "Does a Mrs. Foggerty live here?"

"Yeah. My ma. She's the landlady. Want to rent a room? People that rent rooms here don't usually drive up in no cabs. Ma's out. I can show you around."

Ethan accepted that. "Thanks."

The young man said, "My name's Ed Foggerty," and took some keys from a teapot in a dark dining room.

Ethan, knowing no better how to proceed, looked at four rooms—all empty—all evilly furnished and all for rent at a miserable weekly sum—"Payable," the young man said, "in advance."

"That all you have?" Ethan asked. He was dissatisfied with what he had seen. He was sure that none of the rooms had been occupied recently.

"Well—we got one more—but it's rented, kind of."

"O, say, by the way, do those birds who just drove away live here?"

"Naw. They came a few minutes ago to see a guy that had rented the room for awhile. Said they'd wait in the guy's room—and after they'd only been there a couple of minutes they changed their minds and scrammed."

"What was the guy's name?" Ethan waited with a hammering heart for the answer. He got a name, but it was a disappointment.

"Smith."

"What other name?"

"O, John. John Smith."

"John Smith." That was no better than "Otto."

Now Ethan said, "Well—I tell you. John Smith is a friend of mine, too. I wonder if I could look at his room?"

Ed thought. "I guess so. I let the other guys. And, anyhow, you may want to rent his room. If you don't like the others."

"I thought he was using it?"

"Ma said he was leaving. Or he'd left. He hasn't been back for two nights. That's why I said it was only kind of rented." The young man smiled.

"I see. Well—I'll look it over. Maybe I'll like it better than the other rooms."

"Sure," Ed replied. "Maybe you will." And he opened the door.

"John Smith's" room was as dingy as the others. Ethan dismissed Ed and closed the door.

He shrugged, and went to work—opening bureau drawers, turning back the bedclothes and looking in the closet and under the rug.

He found nothing.

He made a quick and likely guess. The men in the roadster who had visited the room had removed all the effects of "John Smith."

Ethan opened the door and found Foggerty, now a trifle uneasy, waiting in the hall.

"Ed," he said, "did you let those other friends who were just here take away John's things?"

"Shouldn't I have?" Ed asked. "They said they'd take them to him. They said he ought to be here to meet them, but when he wasn't here they said they knew where he was and they'd take his things to him. They said twice they were friends of his. Anyway, I couldn't have stopped them."

"Look here," said Ethan suddenly, "I want to be sure we're talking about the same John Smith. What did yours look like?"

"Why, he was dark—black hair, but white complexion; he . . ."

Stupidly but unmistakably Ed Foggerty described "Otto." Ethan shut Ed out of the room again and went once more about the room. His eye fell on the wastebasket which he had ignored before. It contained only a couple of newspapers rolled together.

Ethan removed them, almost idly, and spread them out. They proved to be Chicago Sunday Tribunes of two different dates—one of the Sunday of the week before, and the other of the first Sunday in March, three months previous. There were no markings on the papers, nothing to show why the older paper had been preserved and finally tossed away with the other—nothing, that was, until Ethan turned over the rotogravure sections.

From the section of the paper of the recent Sunday a large picture had been carefully cut—there was an even, empty rectangle. The name below the picture and any descriptive matter also had been cut away, so Ethan had no way of guessing what the subject had been.

He turned swiftly to the rotogravure of the Sunday in March. From that, also, a picture had been cut. The empty rectangle was nearly but not quite so large. It had been as carefully and evenly cut with scissors.

Ethan folded and pocketed the sheets of the rotogravure with the rectangles empty. He told Ed Foggerty he might be back later, and he went out to the cab which had waited.

"Go back downtown," he said to the taxi driver, but before they had proceeded half a mile Ethan ordered him to stop at a drug store.

Ethan used the phone booth here to call, not the police, but Peter Corondelet at his office.

"Anything new, sir?" Ethan first asked.

"Nothing that's reached me," Peter replied. "What have you got?"

"An auto number that needs to be traced," said Ethan, and he repeated the figures to Peter. He wanted that search started at once; he wanted that responsibility off his mind.

"I'll call MacDuffy," said Peter, "and set him after the auto. I'll find out, right away, if Mrs. Foggerty has died or if she's still unconscious, or if she may be able to talk."

"I don't think she'd dare to talk about 'John Smith,' even if she's able," Ethan returned. "I've been thinking about that. If she was scared before, what would she be now—after she comes to? Besides, I doubt if she knows much more about 'Smith' than her son told me. He's just a man who had a room at her house."

"You're probably right," agreed Peter. "But I'll get a report on her. She'd have been taken to some hospital. You coming in?"

"Not yet," said Ethan. "I'll—watch the neighborhood for a while and phone you later."

But he went, in fact, immediately to the newspaper offices.

He bought the Sunday paper of the week before and opened the rotogravure. It matched one of the two sheets from his pocket.

"John Smith," or otherwise "Otto," had cut from the copy of the paper, which had been in his possession in his room, a picture of Johanna Strang.

Johanna Strang.

The name meant something to him. It was familiar. He had discussed it recently. Where? When? with whom?

Johanna Strang.

He remembered. His mind ejaculated in surprise that became a sharp mutter.

Long, long ago—yesterday—he did not believe it could have been yesterday—Alice and he had found a different picture of that girl in a different newspaper. They had noticed it when they had been hunting through the week's news—at hopeless random—for the possible source of Alice's father's unusual agitation. The agitation Mrs. Myrand had reported after visiting him at the prison. The agitation which had inexplicably preceded the discovery of a man's body in the Myrand Chicago residence.

Ethan's eyes were unseeing.

He and Alice had actually made a note of the girl's picture. She was a Bohemian dancer. She had recently come to America and was being given considerable publicity in Chicago because of a series of dance recitals scheduled for her there.

He checked back the steps. He and Alice had vaguely guessed that possibly Lucian Myrand might have noted the photograph. They had based their guess on a search for foreign news which might connect with the silent prisoner's lost year.

And now—the man who had been killed and stretched out in the position once gruesomely occupied by Serge Ralten—the man whom they had called "Otto"—the man who had called himself "John Smith"—had cut that photograph from a Sunday rotogravure before he went out and was killed in Lucian Myrand's house.

So Johanna Strang, the Bohemian dancer, had some connection with Lucian Myrand. She was in some way related to the second murder in Myrand's house—the murder done by a hand that left fingerprints of Serge Ralten. She was tied by an unknown chain of circumstances, perhaps, to the lost year. She was nineteen years old. And that year had been sunk in Myrand's past about as long ago as the dancer's life was long.

Ethan frowned and trembled lightly with his emotions.

Then he looked more closely at the picture. The girl, in a ballet costume, had bent toward the camera. She had high cheek bones and enormous dark eyes. Her lips were smiling. Part of her face was hidden under heavily curled, short, almost black hair. She was extremely beautiful.

Ethan remembered his surroundings with the nervous jolt of a person roused from sleep.

He had sent for the back issue of the newspaper to match the sheet of the rotogravure for the Sunday in March. This was handed to him.

"John Smith" had cut from that page a picture of Alice Myrand! There she was on this fresh page from which an even rectangle had not been carefully cut with scissors.

⁂

IT WAS a large likeness of Alice—almost as large as the picture of Johanna Strang. Alice's name was below it, with a few lines describing her as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Myrand of Chicago and Lake Forest. The occasion of publishing the picture was her appointment to a committee of younger girls for a charity benefit ball.

Ethan stared at her picture, feeling—even while stranger excitement ran through him—how lovely she was. Lovely, almost, as Johanna Strang.

Here, Ethan realized, was the first tangible evidence pointing back into the amazing "lost year" out of Lucian Myrand's life. Alice, his daughter, was seventeen years old—born two years after that lost year. Johanna Strang—if accounts of her were correct—was nineteen; and she had been born in Austria at the end of the year lost from Lucian Myrand's life.

Here was something; O, something, indeed! But Ethan did not go to the phone to tell Peter Corondelet of it, nor did he start toward Corondelet's office. Ethan went to a telephone, but to call the Myrands' number in Lake Forest.

He asked for Alice, identified himself, and waited.

Her "Hello!" was at once grateful and strangely exuberant.

"If I drive up now can I see you?" he asked.

"Come," she said, "as soon as you can."

He took a taxi to save time, regardless of the expense, and he wondered, while he was hurried along on the road by the lake, whether Alice had sensed that he had much more to tell her or whether her urging him to haste was without that reason.

As he left the cab and walked toward the house the front door opened and a dozen men, most of them young, two or three carrying cameras, made a hasty exit. They were newspaper men, he realized, hurrying off with whatever story they had been given by Ursula and Alice.

He passed them on the walk. One or two made motions of stopping him, but he pretended not to notice them and yet not to avoid them, and they consequently assumed his mission was not connected with the murder.

Alice herself opened the door. She was fresh and bright eyed, and he looked at her twice before he saw a faint and submerged pallor.

"Good morning. I saw you coming. Mother and I have just been talking to all those men. They're reporters."

"I know." He glanced behind her into the living room. "Where is your mother?"

Alice looked understandingly at him. "I know you've something very special to tell me."

"I have. Something just for ourselves—until we can think it over."

Alice nodded. "I was sure of it. . . . Behind the house there's a walled garden. A big one. With a place to play croquet. Suppose we have a game?"

"Of croquet?"

"If we talk down here, or anywhere else, Ethan, I'll have to tell mother what you tell me—or lie a lot. And lying becomes so difficult. So we won't talk—or seem to. We'll play croquet, and nobody can listen to what we say there, because nobody can get close enough to us without being seen. And, if we're careful, no one can even suspect you've anything special to say."

"Good girl!" said Ethan.

She went upstairs to tell her mother that Ethan had called to see her and they were going to play croquet.

⁂

THREE minutes later, with a dreamy feeling of repose in the midst of excitement, he watched her knock a ball through the first two wickets. The garden was high-walled but very spacious. They occupied the center of a smooth, flat lawn. The sun was shining. In surrounding trees birds made busy daytime music. Alice's dress fluttered with her motions and the wind stirred her hair.

It was a scene of charming matutinal peace. And they had come there to whisper about death.

"I'm not very good at this," he said.

"No. I told mother we were going to play to rest our nerves. You just shoot along and I'll keep my ball close, so if she looks out it'll seem regular."

"Will she be looking out for us?"

"She will. . . . Now get that wicket. You're a lousy conspirator."

He laughed and sent the ball through. "I've got a lead, Alice. I told Corondelet all I told you—but there's something else."

Alice manipulated her mallet carefully. "What?"

"Remember—yesterday—when we went through the papers together with the notion that we might come across something that had to do with the year your father dropped in Europe?"

She nodded.

He swung his mallet and watched the ball roll. "Well—we found a few that interested us."

She stared at him.

"One was the picture of a girl just come from Vienna. She's a dancer. Her name is Johanna Strang."

Alice's eyes took on a sudden intensity. "I remember."

"She was nineteen years old."

"I remember her," Alice repeated. "She was lovely."

Ethan sighted for a wicket. "Beautiful."

He made the shot and said, "What I didn't tell you—and what I didn't tell Mr. Corondelet—was this: in the room at Mrs. Foggerty's I found pages of a newspaper rotogravure."

"With Johanna Strang's picture?" said Alice.

"Something better than that," Ethan corrected. "I found sheets of a rotogravure section from which Johanna Strang's picture had been cut. The whole section was there—except for one picture. I went downtown and got another copy. The picture that had been cut out was Johanna Strang's."

"You're sure of that?" Alice whispered.

"Sure."

"Then we've found something tangible at last."

"You'll say so when you hear the other half."

"What other half?"

"There were two rotogravure sections in the room which I'm sure was occupied by 'Otto' before he went to your father's house and was shot there. One recent section which had printed Johanna Strang's picture; the other a section from back in March."

"March?" repeated Alice.

"Yes. Do you remember your picture was in the rotogravure back in March?"

"My picture?" said Alice.

"Yes. And it was your picture that had been cut from the other section. I got another copy downtown that had not been cut. And the picture which was missing from the pages in 'Otto's' room was your picture. He had a reason for wanting to cut out the likeness both of Johanna Strang and—you."

Alice stood staring at him, the color drained from her face. Suddenly she recollected herself and glanced toward the window. "Does anybody else know that, Ethan?"

"No. Nobody. I told you I didn't even mention it to Peter Corondelet. I didn't even mention it over the phone to you. Nobody else knows."

"Thank you, Ethan. O, thank you! . . . Mother's looking out. I'm going to hit you and drive you far away." She bent again over the croquet ball. "But I'll mill my next shot. So you come back. We must make it look as if we hadn't a thing to say—not a thing, Ethan. But I must talk to you. O, Ethan, you must promise now to help me."

This Week's Opportunities for All of Us

For BUYING: Monday forenoon, Thursday, and Saturday forenoon.

For SELLING: This afternoon, Monday, and Thursday.

For ROMANCE: Today, Monday, and Thursday.

For FINANCE: Thursday afternoon and Friday.

For TRAVEL: Wednesday and next Sunday.

For OCCUPATION: Wednesday afternoon, Thursday, and Friday.

For LEGAL MATTERS: Wednesday.

For IMPROVING HEALTH: Friday.

DAY BY DAY

TODAY, TOMORROW, and TUESDAY: Be on your toes for opportunities to improve your standing with those in authority. Push plans that promise better service to the public.

MONDAY, NOV. 18: Opposing vibrations in forenoon; then more favorable for deciding, acting. Best for those born April 18-30, Aug. 21-Sept. 2, Dec. 20-Jan. 1.

TUESDAY, NOV. 19: Go after 'em in morning hours; then back into the cyclone cellar. Best for those born Jan. 1-12, April 30-May 13, Sept. 2-15.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY: Concentrate on increasing your popularity—make new friends and be nice to old ones. Take care of business and occupational finances.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 20: Very favorable for winding up or improving minor matters; make it pay. Best for those born Jan. 12-24, May 13-25, Sept. 15-27.

THURSDAY, NOV. 21: Don't take it too easy; a couple of false appearances here today. Best for those born Jan. 24-Feb. 5, May 25-June 7, Sept. 27-Oct. 9.

FRIDAY, NOV. 22: Till next Tuesday—avoid clashes with elders. Today—nix quick shifts. Best for those born Feb. 17-March 1, June 19-July 1, Oct. 21-Nov. 2.

SATURDAY and SUNDAY: Let up a little on your usual pace and take time off to analyze yourself—plan to build up points that show weakness. Keep away from uncertain propositions.

SATURDAY, NOV. 23: Temporarily favorable with elders in forenoon; otherwise general routine. Best for those born Feb. 17-March 1, June 19-July 1, Oct. 21-Nov. 2.

SUNDAY, NOV. 24: Mentally alert; do business; trade; make plans; advertise; but be wary. Best for those born March 1-13, July 1-14, Nov. 2-14.

FAVORED GROUPS

This week's vibrations favor expansion, creative effort, and the consideration of new plans by those born on and between these dates:

JANUARY 5-19, 27-31.
FEBRUARY 1-9.
MARCH 2-30.
APRIL, none.
MAY 4-17, 28-31.
JUNE 1-11.
JULY 2-31.

OCTOBER 1-16.
NOVEMBER 3-30.
DECEMBER 1-4

Notable persons born in the foregoing periods are J. Pierpont Morgan, Maurice Chevalier, Henry L. Mencken, Warden Lawes, Charles Dana Gibson, and Nick Altrock.

An Open Letter to Fred Stone

FRED STONE

Dear Fred: You know the old rule about buying and selling: "Buy from a pessimist and sell to an optimist." Well, from now until the end of next year you are in a period that looks considerably better for selling than for buying, especially if there is real estate involved. It seems to me I heard somewhere about your owning a piece of property, or a hundred office buildings, or something. Don't let optimism run away with you except when holding out for your price. With best wishes,

WYNN.

Wisconsin Is a Girl's Dream of College Life Come True

Happy Life for Co-eds at Madison

Elsewhere in this issue of The Chicago Sunday Tribune appears a full page of portraits in color of four University of Wisconsin co-eds.

By MARGARET SCULLY

THE University of Wisconsin co-ed cannot be blamed if she finds it difficult to concentrate on lectures, quizzes, study hours, and the like. She has the Madison campus to contend with—and the Madison tradition! The Madison tradition is "Study in your spare time."

The Madison campus is one of the most beautiful in the country. Its hills and lakes and endless variety of outdoor activity have given Wisconsin the title "the country club college." Nowhere could one find a more nearly ideal background for a university education in all its phases. It is the schoolgirl's dream of college life come true.

Your typical Madison co-ed does her best under the circumstances. She's more social than intellectual. At the same time she's a better student than her boy friend. She is as a rule brunette, streamlined, full of vitality and a bit of the Old Nick. She dresses simply, usually in sports clothes, for classes, and as the mood strikes her for dates. But whatever she chooses to wear, she is well groomed and particular about her appearance.

She likes house dances to be formal; otherwise why call them parties? Her lipstick is vivid. Her rouge is subdued. Her nails may be flaming or otherwise, depending upon her personal preference at the moment. She may like beer, but if she doesn't she doesn't admit it, for it is the accepted college drink.

She thinks she's sophisticated, but she talks a little too much about her drinking and her dates to be smooth in the rôle. She is generous and friendly, and if she is an upperclassman she takes more than the usual interest in the welfare of entering freshmen and goes out of her way to be helpful. This is true of her attitude toward the 60 per cent of the student body which is working at least part time to help solve the problem of college finances. No distinction is made between those who work and those who do not.

She is an ardent sportswoman. She swims, plays tennis, skates and iceboats, toboggans and skis, and rides horseback. Hikes and picnics are her favorite week-end occupations. She likes to dine and to dance, but she can be quite contented on a movie and a glass of beer if the boy friend's finances are low. And when they're really low she may suggest a picnic and provide the food herself. She is never bored, for she always has too much to do. The combination of her social life, her campus activities, and her scholastic endeavors (named in the order of their importance to her) keeps her in a perpetual whirl.

* * *

College atmosphere? Local color? Madison has it! From the top of Observatory hill, remembered in song and story, one gets a panoramic view of the countryside, with the red-roofed dormitories for men in the foreground to the north and the shimmering lake beyond. To the south are the university buildings and, in the evening, the twinkling lights of the city in the distance. This hill, and famous Willow drive beside the lake, provide an ideal background for college romance.

Upper campus, otherwise known as "the Hill," the steep incline of which leads up to Bascom hall and the well known statue of Abraham Lincoln, a broad expanse of lawn separating North hall from South hall and the Law building from the Engineering building—this is the center of university activity and of many a Wisconsin tradition. And Langdon street, the "fraternity row" of the town, has no trafic rules, for they are impossible to enforce. On State street, Lohmaier's confectionery and the University pharmacy, better known as "the Pharm," are the favorite campus hangouts. In the blue gloom of Lohmaier's beer and conversation are the order of the day. In the Pharm one orders mostly soft drinks. Both are always jammed with students.

All these provide an atmosphere which is typically "college" and typically Wisconsin.

Many a hallowed tradition is nourished on the Madison campus. There is the annual St. Patrick's day battle between the lawyers and the engineers, involving crates of vintage eggs. There is the secrecy as to who will be prom queen, for the politically minded prom king (whose lesser title is junior class president) usually is careful to date several girls from different sororities in order to keep up the suspense, and the campus whispers and theorizes for weeks before her identity is formally announced.

"Skyrockets" are the accepted mode of expressing approval in a crowd. Originally a college yell, the "sisss—boom—ahhh—whistle—Wisconsin!" punctuates an otherwise dignified classroom lecture whenever the professor says something of which the class particularly approves. And if he is a real favorite his mere appearance may produce the fireworks. The popularity of a teacher is gauged by some according to the number of skyrockets he averages.

* * *

Your Madison co-ed is not an athlete exactly (though her frequent jaunts up the Hill have given her legs that would do credit to a track man), but she participates enthusiastically in all forms of outdoor sports. In the fall she canters down Willow drive, beside Lake Mendota, and a riot of gorgeous fall coloring surrounds her; or she and her date, frequently accompanied by another couple, take picnic basket in hand and hike out into the countryside, build a campfire, broil steaks and boil coffee beneath the harvest moon.

In the winter the lake is available for skating, and the Lower campus near the library is flooded. If she is not a proficient skater at the end of her senior year she is the exception rather than the rule. Tobogganing is a favorite sport, and the steep inclines near the campus lend themselves to this swift and sometimes dangerous sport. The ski jump, right by the Hydraulics laboratory on the campus, is thronged in the late afternoons by enthusiastic competitors and a gallery of their less daring fellows. Successful jumps meet with loud cheers,—but so do the spills. The love of speed which frequently characterizes the young is given full vent when it comes to iceboating, and, with eyelashes frosted and fingers and toes numbed to insensibility, they skim over the icy surface of the lake at 60 or 70 miles an hour and adore it.

In the spring there is canoeing, and seldom does the young man go canoeing alone.

The social whirl is not confined to the week-end at Madison. Dating is a continuous process. One has a date to go to the library, for any and all the sports, to go to campus rally before a football game, for an afternoon soft drink, for evening movies and dances. Dates usually are most informal.

Co-eds sometimes find it exciting to see how many men can be kept interested at one time. For example, one sophomore dashed in from a picnic at 5:30 to dress for a 6 o'clock dinner date, to be followed by an 8 o'clock date for the movie, and then a dance at 10:30, all with different men.

"Dateless dances" are popular at the beginning of the school year. Freshmen take advantage of the poster invitations to "Bring your date or find it here." Girls at Madison don't lose caste by allowing themselves to be "picked up" either at these functions or in the more casual surroundings of the Pharm or Lohmaier's. They believe this custom has advantages over the blind date, because one can exercise some choice.

* * *

The beautiful Memorial Union building draws most student activities outside of the classroom. All students are automatically members of the Union, and it probably is the most used building on the campus. Its great hall, handsome in its formality, is the scene of most of the important proms and balls of the year. In its comfortable lounges on the main floor students meet between classes, smoke and relax. Its Georgian grill, charming, simple, and sunny, is filled to capacity every noon hour. Lunches range from 35 to 65 cents, and dinner is 75 cents. The less expensive cafeteria is a noisy place from 12 to 1:30. Downstairs the rathskeller, for men only, provides a retreat for the male where he can enjoy a game of pool and a glass of 3.2 beer. There is the Paul Bunyan room, colorful with murals, where he can take his date for a soda.

On many Saturday afternoons there are "mat dances" at the Union. On Friday and Saturday evenings the 770 club, the only university night club, holds forth in Tripp Commons with dancing and a floor show. The accessibility of these dances to all students makes them extremely popular.

Another contribution of the Union is a free course in ballroom dancing for men and women who are not sufficiently adept at the art. The first men's class of the year was attended by 400.

The really popular Friday and Saturday night retreats are Hollywood and Chanticleer, both roadhouses outside of Madison. The fact that one must have a car to get there makes them even more attractive. The favorite probably is Hollywood, where one dances under dim blue lights (and something between a tango and a rhumba seems to have hit the town lately) or sits at tables around the dance floor sipping a cocktail or drinking beer. The crowd is jovial but not noisy. The music is soothingly sentimental.

Women at Wisconsin don't seem excited about campus activities. The most important ones, of course, have their enthusiastic participants, and the most signal honors are those which come from participation in the Women's Self-Government association, the Y. W. C. A. (familiarly known as the Y-Doub), and the Women's Athletic association. Representatives from each of these organizations form the women's affairs committee, which takes charge of the social life of the Union from the feminine viewpoint.

The various committees which take charge of the "mothers' and fathers' week-end,' made up of both men and women, offer coveted posts. This week-end, devoted to honoring the parents of Wisconsin students, is planned and managed entirely by the students, and it is one of the high spots of the year at Madison. Money is raised for the necesary expenditures by a tag day, and a program of entertainment is put on that keeps dad and mother busy every hour of the day.

The Y. W. C. A. and the student foundations connected with the various campus churches also take a hand in stimulating worth-while contacts among student members and provide social activities which are open to all.

Women's rules on evening hours, set and enforced by W. S. G. A., vary according to your year in school. If you are a freshman, 12:30 hours for you are confined to Friday and Saturday nights. If you are a sophomore you may add one other,

They Dress Simply but Smartly

at your discretion, to these two; and if you are a junior or a senior you may add two. On all other nights 10:30 is the deadline. Only the out-and-out "playgirl" (an accepted Madison term) takes advantage of all four 12:30 nights as an upperclassman.

Freshmen do not live in sororities, but neither are they restricted to dormitories. They are scattered over the campus, some in "dorms," some in private homes, some in rooming houses. "Orientation week," organized and supervised by upperclassmen, gives them an idea of how full days can be at Madison. If they join a sorority their sorority sisters may take a hand in starting them off in freshman activities, or they may simply push them out into the stream on the old "sink or swim" principle.

Ten-thirty on week nights finds the majority of the girls in any group sitting around in somebody's room talking over their dates and awaiting the arrival of "Ten Kinds." Ten Kinds is the sandwich man, whose nickname arises from his familiar chant through the street, "Ten kinds sandwiches."

To offset any idea that too much emphasis is placed on frivolity at Wisconsin—an idea possibly created by the reading of this story—let it be emphasized here that there is a goodly number of students at the Madison university who are deeply interested in the more serious side of a university education. Needless to say, if 60 per cent of the student body is working part time for the privilege of attending the university it is not merely for the social life.

There is a really widespread interest in the social sciences, in the fundamental principles of economics, in the theories of philosophy. And the affairs of the outside world do claim attention—particularly political affairs. For example, the three political organizations on the campus, the Young Republicans, the Young Democrats, and the Young Progressives have representative membership.

* * *

Perhaps because of the interest in politics, there seems to be more enthusiasm for forensic activity at Madison than at many campuses. Women go out for the debate team, which has a student following.

Favorite teachers at Madison are Prof. Alexander Meiklejohn, who teaches philosophy and whose ideas are popular with his students; Prof. Charlotte D. Gower, who teaches primitive religion, and Prof. Ralph Linton, who teaches anthropology, all of whom have the knack of working up a real interest in their subjects; Prof. Oskar F. L. Hagen of the art history department, whose work with the Handel operas was recognized by the German government; and Prof. W. H. Kieckhofer, who teaches economics to 700 students packed in the Music hall and sitting on the edges of their seats for fear they'll miss a word. Professor Kieckhofer is famous not only for his excellent daily lectures but for his last lecture of the year, which is fatherly, points a moral, and is such a masterpiece that three skyrockets at the very least greet its conclusion.

The Madison student is devoted to her school. She knows that wherever the emphasis may be placed by the majority, she is free to place it where she will, and whatever she wants from her four years at the university she can get. The cultural and intellectual opportunities are there for her, and when she is free to enjoy them the social life, the outdoor activities are at her door. And though she may look at them less often, she takes as much pride in the beautiful view from Observatory hill, the graceful sweeping arch of foliage on Willow drive, the multitude of lovely scenes near the campus, as anyone else.

BEAUTIFUL CO-EDS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

Miss Agnes Ricks of Tulsa, Okla., was the senior chosen queen of this year's military ball at the University of Wisconsin. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta.

Margaret Stedman, a popular senior whose home is in Berlin, Wis., is a member of Delta Gamma sorority.

Miss Marion Bradley is a sophomore prominent in campus affairs. A Pi Beta Phi from Cleveland, she is a member of the woman's affairs committee and serves on the legislative board of the WSGA.

Miss Jean Fisher, a senior, is chairman of the student public relations committee and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE WILL BE FOUND A STORY OF UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN CO-EDS AND THEIR CAMPUS LIFE.

Social Whirl Transforms a Dark November

High Points Range from Lectures on Ethiopia to Frothy Debut Teas.

By Cousin Eve.

NOVEMBER days, singularly lacking in charm but packed with interest. There was Sergei Rachmaniow, a tall, spare figure, playing his own music with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, which fanfared him wildly. To me Rachmaninov is lacking in charm, like dark days of November, but highly interesting. Yet temperamental women at tea afterward said there was the man they could elope with—à la George Sand and Chopin. I don't know—yet it might be colorful.

And there was Gordon MacCreagh, Knight of the Star of Ethiopia, friend of Ras Tafari, otherwise known as Emperor Highly Salacious, returned home after five Ethiopian years. At the Foreign Relations luncheon, so crowded one could scarcely breathe, he exposed the secret diplomacy of forty years which has resulted in the present Italian push, like a bright boy cutting into a rotten apple. And in listening to his vivid diction the whole glittering, mountainous land of Ethiopia lay spread out before us. The intrigue rising out of Ethiopia in forty years was like an Oppenheim novel, said the speaker, who was neither pro nor anti in his scintillations.

MacCreagh Upsets Cliches About Ethiopia.

And therein lay his power. He was no propagandist. If it were not Italy taking Ethiopia today, it would be some other country tomorrow. Italy had a treaty with savage old Menelik; so had France, having still a monopoly to build railroads. Then the British made a secret treaty with him, one controling Lake Tsana and the Blue Nile. The British government has a project, the Gezireh in the Sudan. This involved the planting of two million acres with cotton. They have already one million planted. Then they, not the United States, will control the world price of cotton. There are gold, platinum, diamonds, and oil in this Tsana district, and control of the Nile waters. At this control Italians are now barging. They can cut off the Sudan. For three years Britain has considered western Abyssinia hers.

We heard many theories upset. Ethiopia has the best climate in Africa, 8,000 feet up, clear, sunny. The army of Haile Selassie travels on its stomach, has no commissary train, cannot put up a defense. The rifles in use there were obsolete after the Franco-Prussian war. There is no newspaper, no magazine, no movie to show the natives what modern war is. Italians, in their treaties and pre-war promises, were outmaneuvered by England, which let them down much in the same way that the British government of the moment let down Lawrence of Arabia after he had organized the Arab tribes and promised them an empire.

Many were the exciting highlights of Mr. MacCreagh's lecture—the story of the empress whose first bath killed her, the explanation of how Italy was gypped! A great day surely at the Foreign Relations.

Young Girls an Army in Velvet at Hutchins' Tea.

There was a splendid coming out tea in the week, that of Barbara Hutchins, given after the old lavish manner by Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hutchins and the bud's grandmother, Mrs. Chauncey Keep. The Hutchins house at Burton place and Astor street is of the Georgian period, with white marble foyer and stairs, massed with magnificent baskets and bouquets, a lovely house. Tremendously crowded it was. The debutante was the ideal young girl, tall, slim, with heart shaped face, regular features—a blonde with real beauty, which after all lies in expression. Her frock was palest blue silvered lamé. Mrs. Hutchins wore a trailing gown of sapphire, with long, sparkling, jeweled sleeves. Young girls assisted, seated at the tea table. Black velvet seemed to have enslaved them all, for they all wore it, with tiny little hats, and mostly they were tall and willowy young creatures: Nancy Ryerson, Ethel Husband, Pauline Palmer, Barbara Stanley, Harriet Welling. The flowers of this beautiful room were white, tall, fluffy chrysanthemums and lilies.

WEARS CHIC GOWN AT OPENING OF OPERA

Mrs. Thomas J. Salsman Jr. was photographed at the opening of Chicago's grand opera season on Nov. 2 in the Civic Opera house, wearing a chic gown of white satin and a new type of ear-clips to match her other jewels. The season, which will last five weeks only, promises to be a successful one. Mr. and Mrs. Salsman reside at 5555 Sheridan road.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Saturday night the Casino was en fête for Barbara Stanley's coming out dance. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stanley gave a charming party where one saw all the smart young debbies, many of them coming demurely with their mamas; also many of their friends in the older set. These after all seem to be the best parties. The socially wise believe that the depression has changed the social order and that we will see no more of the great debut balls where hostesses knew neither the names nor the faces of some of their own guests.

Neither will people feel at liberty to call up and ask for invitations for their relatives and friends. There was one fashionable debut tea given here not so long ago in a large and splendid house where a neighbor who was invited brought four persons not asked. The social secretary happened to be checking at the door.

A young friend of mine was giving a supper for twenty-five youngsters before a dance this fall in Lake Forest. The number she actually entertained at supper was ninety-eight. But everything goes with the young.

Dr. Siren Brings Chinese Art Alive.

And here for the third time was Dr. Oswald Siren, a distinguished Swedish authority on Chinese art and architecture, with his young and attractive wife. History says that Dr. Siren lectured at the Arts club several years ago, and, knowing little English, failed to hold his audience. He came here later with more English, and again the Arts club optimistically engaged him to lecture, this time before a small gathering. His third Chicago venture at lecturing was Friday at the Casino, at a reception given by the American Friends of China. Mrs. William B. Hale received informally, and the Fountain room filled up with members. Mrs. William G. Hibbard had a tremendous lion in tow, that eminent biographer, Francis Hackett, with Mrs. Hackett. His Henry VIII. and Francis I. are the biographical chefs d'œuvres of our times, written as with a diamond. Tea drinking came first at this party; then lecture. Dr. Siren is rosy, spectacled, scholarly. He read his paper.

Keyed to such a high pitch that much of it went over my head—but here and there a phrase about Chinese pictures, "life movement," and "spirit dissonance." One must evidently be subtle to understand Chinese art.

Listeners, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. C. W. Dempster, Mrs. Howard Fenton, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Henry J. Patten, Warren and Mrs. Everett, Col. George Langhorne, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mme. Siren.

Stock's Presence Doesn't Rattle Gisela Binz.

One heard music of Chopin at Mrs. Francis Junkin's musical which followed her usual large Sunday luncheon. At one of the two grand pianos which fill her lake windows a tall handsome young girl sat: Gisela Binz of Berlin.

Her large, round head was covered with crisp black curls; her profile rather childlike, with parted red lips. And there was no mistaking the power and ability in the arms and hands. She plays like a man. It was grand playing, accurate, nerveless, and with Dr. Frederick Stock listening, too! Dr. Stock hit the nail on the head when he said after hearing the brilliant young pianist, "Forty minutes and not a wrong note!"

Sunday was Poland's day of freedom, so Gisela gave an impromptu Chopin program, all the old favorites. Miss Binz has been engaged to play with the Chicago Symphony orchestra next season. She left last week with Mrs. Junkin to meet Maestro Toscanini in New York.

Besides Dr. and Mrs. Stock, Mrs. Martin Ryerson, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Eugene Wheeler, Mrs. Francis Blair, Col. Robert Peck, Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Dennet Grover, Robert Fernald, and Mrs. Jenkins' cousins, Mrs. Herbert Willard and Miss Willard of Washington.

Two gay luncheons during the week. The first day was Mrs. Albert Evans' at 1420 Lake Shore drive for her sister, Mrs. Pierce McCullough of Wausau, Wis. Forty-five guests were seated at small tables and a bridge game followed. The next day thirty invités were entertained similarly. The weather was terrible outside at the time, which made luncheon with bridge seem doubly luxurious and attractive. This sort of party has not been done at all in six years.

Mrs. Perry Belmont Leaves the Paris She Adored.

With the depression a sweeping change came to the Perry Belmonts of New York, members of an old banking family. August Belmont was a brother. Perry Belmont married Mrs. Henry Sloane and for social reasons moved to Washington. There they led a splendid train of life. Their white marble house, uniquely shaped like a flatiron, was the scene of superb dinners, with highly placed guests, a marvelous chef, armies of footmen. Mrs. Belmont's emeralds were famous, so was Perry Belmont's champagne. Their life was indeed brilliant. The bright star waned. The Perry Belmonts went to Paris, where they are acclaimed. But instead of a white marble palace their home was one room in a quiet hotel of the Rue Castiglione, where they have lived for five years and where they were when Mrs. Belmont died.

Passing away from the Paris she loved at about this same time, Mrs. Thomas Copelin of Chicago, who had lived fifteen years in la Ville Lumière. The apartment she maintained with her daughter, Robin, became a rendezvous for exiled Russians as well as Chicagoans. Both will miss her gay spirit.

One day at a tea in London Mrs. Copelin met H. G. Wells and King George of Greece. To Mr. Wells she afterward wrote a note: "If you will lunch with an old, old lady, and tell her what is your special diet, you shall have it. And a warm welcome." H. G. Wells later became an habitué of the Copelin maison. And so did the king of Greece pay his respects, bringing a carton of his own special brand of cigarets, monogrammed and coroneted, some of which were saved for me. Not that I have such a yen for George of Greece, but it isn't everybody who has crowned heads furnishing cigarets.

Depression Over, Arts Club Announces.

The Arts club had its annual meeting last Thursday, and the reports of its officers proved that the depression is definitly over. Everybody was merry as could be about it. The meeting was held in the dining room, with the officers, in a row on cushioned wall seats, reading reports. Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, president, conducted affairs, which included an election of directors and the making of two important statements: that the club was out of the red; that it had held its membership of six hundred and sixty on an even keel.

John Carpenter's report of the music committee, Miss Rouillier's of art exhibits, Mrs. Jacob Baur's intensive analysis of finances, Mrs. Bokum's of literary lights and lectures, and Mrs. Arthur Meeker's on membership convinced one that the members had a good year, with plenty of celebrities.

Swank Bridge Club Proof of Chicago's Coming of Age.

Another proof the world is really brighter: Crockford's of Chicago, a card club, of which Ely Culbertson is chairman. It occupies an entire strip of rooms on the first floor of the Blackstone. It struck me when I had the invitation that Chicago was at last a big, grownup city, that it could float an exclusive card club with fairly steep annual dues . . . sixty dollars. Initiation fees, twenty-five dollars.

Being imprisoned at a large dinner, I was unable to arrive the night of the opening and see the brave send-off, which, several of my most trusted pals told me, was chichi—a delectable supper, smart set, and everything. Mrs. Vincent Healy is hostess at Crockford's. And that night Prince Cantacuzene was in evidence. The rooms are admirably done, with the latest in chairs, tables, and smoking gadgets. The sight of the highly specialized place makes one think of Charles Lamb's "A clear fire, a clean harth, and the rigour of the game." In fact, it made me a bit jittery to imagine the high powered games which will be played there by Chicago's expert players. The governing committee includes Mrs. Culbertson, Mrs. Vincent Healy, Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody, Mrs. Charles S. Pearce, Mrs. I. Newton Perry, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler. Among the men, Darrow Fulton, Oren Taft, Charles Deere Wiman, and Count Giulio Bolognesi, who will be in town this winter for the debut of a handsome daughter, Caterina. Count Bolognesi will speak for his country, Italy, at the Army and Navy club on Nov. 20 at an evening party.

ASSISTS IN BENEFIT

Mrs. Helen Walton is one of those assisting with arrangements for the benefit for Olivet institute to be held on Friday night, Nov. 22, at the Apollo theater. The affair will be a preview of Max Reinhardt's motion picture production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Mrs. Fowler McCormick is chairman.

English Artists Creating Frescoes in Private Homes

LONDON

It is becoming the fashion here to have artists do brilliant fresco work for private homes. In Hampstead, which is a residential section of London, there are two artists who seem to have their hands full executing wall paintings for clients at moderate fees. In one case, the inner hall of a rented apartment has been covered with canvas, which can be removed, and the surface adorned with a gay picture of a group which includes the host and hostess and some of their friends.

The best known of the artists who have turned to this work is young John Churchill. He came down from Oxford only five years ago, and has had all the fresco work he could handle. He now is doing one for Mr. Lloyd George at Churt. He has decorated the loggia of the country house at Westerham of his uncle, Mr. Winston Churchill, with scenes from the life of their uncommon ancestor, the great duke of Marlborough.

His first big order was for some frescoes for the flat of Mr. "Chips" Channon, formerly of Chicago, and he painted some of Mr. Channon's friends in a Venetian setting. Unfortunately, the flat shortly afterward was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Henry Hilton Author of Career of Accomplishment

ONE of the most respected women in club and charity circles in Chicago today is Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton, traveler, author, and philanthropist, as well as leader in a number of important organizations.

MRS. HENRY HOYT HILTON.

[Moffett Photo.]

It isn't difficult to learn about Mrs. Hilton's career. All you have to do is to turn to a copy of American Women, for instance, and there find an outline of a life that spells accomplishment. The story begins in Belfast, Me., where Mrs. Hilton was born, the daughter of Edward and Clara Isabelle Thorndike Sibley.

She went to Wellesley college, where she received her bachelor of arts and later her master's degree. For further graduate study she chose Yale university. From then on she was heard frequently on the lecture platform. She did some teaching in both high schools and private schools, and she started her writing of verse and prose, which she has continued down to the present day.

It was on Oct. 6, 1897, that she was married to Henry Hoyt Hilton, now one of Chicago's well known publishers, and changed her residence to this city. This autumn and winter her community interests are most vitally associated with the Chicago branch of the American Association of University Women, of which she is the president; the Chicago Woman's club, in which she is chairman of the education and philosophy department; and the south side Child Guidance center, of which she is chairman of the board.

From 1929 to 1931 she served the Chicago Woman's club as its president, and from 1930 to 1932 she was a director of the Woman's University club. Other charity interests are the University of Chicago Settlement league, the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial home, and the Friendly Aid society.

Aside from reading and the study of drama, Mrs. Hilton would rather travel than anything else. She's crossed to Europe six or seven times, and made a hunting trip through Palestine and Syria. Another time she spent several weeks on a steamboat on the Nile.

Mrs. Hilton is the mother of six children and also a proud grandmother, having two grandsons and just as many granddaughters. The Thorndike Hilton Memorial chapel at the University of Chicago, one of Chicago's architectural gems, commemorates one son, Thorndike. This church, Gothic in its design, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Hilton to the theological seminary.

National Body of Y. W. C. A. to Meet Here

Association to Hold Four Important Sessions in Five Day Convention.

By Ruth DeYoung.

TAKING advantage of Chicago's location as the hub of this universe, the national organization of the Young Women's Christian association will hold four important meetings here this coming week. These sessions, beginning tomorrow and continuing through Friday, will concern the national board, the convention committee, and the national industrial and business and professional women's councils.

MRS. JAMES S. CUSHMAN. [Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

The national board, composed of a number of the country's most representative women, is the body intrusted with promoting the national program and policies of the Y. W. C. A. The program and policies are formulated by representatives of local associations at the national biennial conventions of the organization.

The board meets regularly in the Y. W. C. A. headquarters in New York City, so this will be the first time it has convened in the middle west. At the session Wednesday plans will be considered for the next national convention, to be held April 29 to May 5, 1936, in Colorado Springs.

Chicago members of the board who will act as hostesses during the sessions here include Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. Charles W. Gilkey, Mrs. Philip S. Post, and Mrs. Hermon B. Butler, vice president of the Y. W. C. A. of the United States. Mrs. Gilkey, as convener for the central region, will take an active part in the convention committee meetings on Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Silas H. Strawn Plans Tea for Out-of-Town Members.

Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, vice president of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., has planned a tea for Tuesday afternoon at her home, 209 Lake Shore drive, for Mrs. James S. Cushman and Miss Charlotte T. Niven, both out of town board members. Mrs. Cushman, who was Vera Scott of Chicago, is one of the four charter members of the national board, and has served continuously for a quarter of a century. Miss Niven for fifteen years was general secretary of the world council of the Y. W. C. A., with headquarters first in London and then in Geneva. She is the aunt of Thornton Wilder, the novelist.

Mrs. Gilkey and Mrs. Hodgkins have planned a tea for Thursday afternoon at Ida Noyes hall at the University of Chicago, with university women assisting as hostesses.

Leader in Girl Scout Affairs Another Visitor to City.

Another important woman coming to Chicago this week is Mrs. Clarence M. Day of Detroit, chairman of the regional committee for the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Day is coming to the city for the day of training and luncheon Saturday at the Palmer house that is to explain the Girl Scout mariner program to the Scouts and their sponsors in the Great Lakes region. Skippers of mariner ships, their mates, local directors, and council members are invited to participate.

The day will begin at 10 o'clock, when the ship Griffin will open the meeting. Mrs. Walter Cavenaugh of Kenosha, chairman of training and personnel on the Great Lakes committee, will introduce Mrs. Day, and then Mrs. Arthur W. Wakeley of Kenilworth, regional skipper, will speak. At the luncheon Milton Myer, member of the pilot committee, will give an evaluation of the mariner program. Movies taken during the training school last summer at Lake Geneva will be shown at the afternoon meeting.

Miss Charl O. Williams Is to Address School Conference.

Miss Charl O. Williams, school education chairman for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and newly elected president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, will come to Chicago to address the public school conference of the Illinois Congress Saturday at the Stevens hotel.

"Interpreting the school to the community" is the theme of the conference, which is planned to give parents an opportunity to learn what their children are doing during their school day. Mrs. Holland Flagler, the general chairman, has invited members of other women's organizations to attend.

Morning to Be Devoted to Three Round Table Sessions.

The morning is to be devoted to three round table conferences on kindergarten education, elementary, high school, and junior college education. Arthur Nichelson, principal of the Hirsch High school and president of the Chicago Principals' club, will lead the session of high school and junior college education. Aaron Kline, principal of the Pullman school and past president of the Chicago Principals' club, will lead the elementary education group, and Miss Mary Allfree, president of the Chicago Public School Kindergarten and Primary association, will lead the kindergarten education session.

After luncheon Miss Williams will be introduced in an address on "The Economic Value of Education." Dr. Eugene Lawler will be another speaker and the Chicago Mothersingers, directed by William Lester, will furnish the musical program.

Good news from Washington concerns the appointment of Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin of Elgin to the post of vice chairman of publicity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Lufkin has ably handled the press and publicity duties for the Illinois Federation during the last two years, and will continue in the state job during this present term. Before assuming the state office she was press director for the Eleventh district.

MRS. FRED LUFKIN.

Mrs. Lufkin's background is Bostonian. She received her education at Wellesley college and was active in the work of the Massachusetts federation before coming west to live. By appointment of the governor of Massachusetts she was chairman of the membership committee for the state division of zoning and planning. In her new appointment she will work with Mrs. J. Henry Highsmith of Raleigh, N. C., chairman of publicity for the General Federation.

The latest issue of Radio Review, received in last week's mail, goes in for severe criticism of radio amateur hours. In an editorial entitled "Heart Throbs and Coffee" the Review indicates that the amateur hour is the pet antipathy of the women's national radio committee, which publishes the Review. Through its board of directors the committee is the organ of more than 17,000,000 clubwomen.

Group Challenges Justification of Purpose of Amateur Hours.

"Our grievance with amateur hours is not based on the fact that they are making a few men wealthy at the expense of ambitious young people and unemployed professionals who perform at 'amateur rates,'" Miss Luella S. Laudin, editor, comments. "What we do challenge vigorously is the feeble justification offered for prolonging the amateur hour cycle.

"The most frequent excuse is that it discovers new talent. But what for? Booking agents cannot begin to place all the artists from the legitimate, vaudeville, and concert stages who now are available for 'cakes and coffee.' Yet, despite this oversupply of talent, the amateur hour continues, because it is cheaper to produce, because those who are making money out of the idea are anxious to keep it alive, because clever publicity build-ups give the idea that the whole country is clamoring for amateurs, but primarily because the sponsors also are advertisers in magazines and newspapers and, as a matter of good business, attacks on their progams are soft pedaled.

Suggest That Amateur Hours Be Converted Into Variety Programs.

"We suggest that amateur hours be converted into variety programs employing concert and dramatic artists, vaudeville actors, and a master of ceremonies to preserve the continuity. To give young people who are eager for a hearing their chance a national committee should be organized, composed of radio production managers, music and dramatic critics, and orchestra leaders. Subcommittees in large cities throughout the country could care for aspirants outside of New York City. Those who need additional training thus would be given practical advice by experts. Others who are ready for a career certainly will have a better chance to succeed than the ones who at the present time are taking the heartbreaking journey from obscurity to fleeting fame to oblivion via the amateur hour."

Vigorous opposition to birth prevention and sterilization measures likely to come up at the next session of congress was urged last week in a message from Miss Mary C. Duffy of Newark, N. J., supreme regent of the Catholic Daughters of America. The message is a criticism of the action taken in the last six months by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the American Association of University Women approving the dissemination of material on birth control.

Working Class Art Exhibited in Washington

Frances Perkins Sponsors Showing of Creations by American Laborers.

FRANCES PERKINS, secretary of labor, has brought three more working class artists into the limelight through the medium of her latest art exhibit, a recent event held in the conference room across from her office in Washington, D. C. An Iowa carpenter, whose hobby is woodcarving, and two Massachusetts men who painted landscapes while doing manual labor on a college campus, shared honors at the showing.

Henry Geiger of Cedar Rapids, Ia., is the woodcarver whose work shared distinction with the paintings of Henry Bennett and George Haskell of Mount Holyoke, Mass. The Iowa artist was called to the attention of Miss Perkins by a clipping in a newspaper which conveyed the information that Grant Wood commended the work of Mr. Geiger.

For Henry Bennett, cabinetmaker by trade, and carpenter at Mount Holyoke college, it was a posthumous honor, for he died in 1932. It was Bennett who interested Haskell in taking up painting. The latter artist mowed the lawn and set out the shrubbery on the college campus.

"It seems a fine thing that the woman who was head of the art department encouraged them until they sent their work to Springfield in competitive exhibition and won recognition among New England artists," commented Miss Perkins.

Of her exhibit plan Miss Perkins said recently: "Talented working people heretofore have had no place to show their work. Here is the place!" A characteristic hand gesture took in the walls of the conference chambers. "There is room here for every picture in a small exhibit like this to be well hung."

Secretary Perkins said her first showing, months ago, of the work of John Paine, a house painter and steel worker, had resulted in other artists being called to her attention, among them the New Englanders.

Order of True Sisters Plans Luncheon Event

Lincoln Lodge No. 22 Is to Celebrate Twenty Years of Philanthropy.

LINCOLN LODGE, No. 22, United Order of True Sisters, will celebrate the completion of twenty years of philanthropic work in a number of fields with a luncheon Friday at the Standard club. Olga Rosenova will give character impersonations of famous women in history.

Among the activities of Lincoln lodge have been the maintenance of a scholarship fund, assistance of the blind, entertainment of inmates of hospitals and institutions, and Americanization work. Mrs. Therese Krieger, founder-president, now resides in Los Angeles, Cal., but the other eight presidents are in Chicago. Mrs. Harry Grossberg heads the organization at present.

Johanna Lodge, No. 9, Is to Have Meeting Thursday.

Johanna lodge, No. 9, United Order of True Sisters, will hold its regular meeting at 1:30 o'clock Thursday at Sinai Center. Among the activities of the organization is the Victory workshop for deaf young people in the Haven school, 14th street and Wabash avenue, sponsored jointly with the Chicago Woman's Aid and the Council of Jewish Women.

Among its other activities the organization also transcribes Braille for the blind, and 31 students have received college educations through the lodge's scholarship fund. Mrs. William D. Eppstein heads the 825 members.

The annual card party and tea of the Chicago Woman's Ideal club will be held at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday at the Palmer house. There will be a sale of various edibles in connection with the party. Proceeds will go to the club's philanthropies, which include aiding war veterans, maintaining a six-bed ward at the Martha Washington Home for Crippled Children, and assisting numerous other institutions.

MRS. J. P. WAHLMAN.

N. Y. Society's Florida March Is Under Way

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt and Spouse Come from Paris to Join It.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK The fashionable trek southward is on, and Palm Beach will begin to flower any minute. Fortunately, Palm Beach was scarcely touched by the recent storm. So property owners haven't had to worry about either windows or shrubs, two items on which hurricanes were especially rough. Col. Jacques Balsan and Mme. Balsan, the former duchess of Marlborough [once Consuelo Vanderbilt] have been lingering in Manhattan before making an early departure for the south.

So quietly did the Balsans arrange their departure from their Paris home that no one knew they had sailed for New York until they registered at the Waldorf-Astoria. Their island home in Lake Worth, about ten miles south of Palm Beach, is a lure which brings them to America thus early in the season.

The still beautiful Consuelo and her popular French spouse live elegantly, but as far from the public spotlight as possible. Their beautiful home on Hypoluxo Island answers the Balsan prayer for privacy. The estate is accessible to the mainland only by a private bridge.

Balsans Lend Early Season at Palm Beach Great Prestige.

Among the Balsans' nearest neighbors is Mme. Balsan's brother, Harold Stirling Vanderbilt. He lives on the mainland, a couple of stone's throws away.

It goes without saying that the presence of the one time Consuelo Vanderbilt and her husband gives the Palm Beach early season a much needed sheen. The colony was delighted when they decided on a permanent winter home there.

The Balsans are spending a fortune on their new home and its surrounding acres. They are already beginning the development of extensive tropical gardens on their small islands south of Hypoluxo. One of their first problems is getting rid of mosquitoes.

Jay O'Briens Remodel Biddle Villa Extensively.

The Jay O'Briens have gone south for a few days to supervise construction on the home they purchased last winter from Mary Duke Biddle.

Villa del Sarmiento, one of the handsomest houses in Palm Beach, has been closed ever since the dapper Tony Biddle and his first wife, the former Mary Duke, decided to go their separate ways several years ago. It has been occupied only once in the last eight or nine winters—and then by a renter to whom Mary leased the villa.

Maurice Fatio, the charming gent who's inherited the late Addison Mizner's mantle as Palm Beach's architect de luxe, will accompany the O'Briens to Palm Beach. He's executing the extensive alterations Dolly O'Brien is planning for her new home. One of the additions to the estate will be a large swimming pool and a new patio.

Dolly O'Brien is another attractive ornament in the Palm Beach set. A titian haired blonde, she still looks as young as a debutante—despite the fact she's the mother of a married son. She's one of the best dressed women in society and her jewels are the envy of all women.

The Wolcott Blairs, who cut a wide swath in Chicago's social set, will soon depart to occupy their new home on South Ocean boulevard.

Young Raymond Guests to Buy House on Gold Coast.

The youthful Raymond Guests are planning to become property owners on the Gold Coast, too. They probably won't build this season, however. The handsome, polo playing Ray and his bride, the former Lily Polk, will depart shortly for the Palm Beach residence of Ray's mother, the Hon. Mrs. Frederick E. Guest.

The Gold Coast sun rays are already baking the aristocratic backs of Mrs. Margaret Emerson and her beauteous subdeb daughter, Gloria Baker. And the Aksel Wichfelds [she's the former Fifi Widener] are happily installed at South Lake trail as Mrs. Emerson's house guests.

Park avenue is pleased as Punch over the recent engagement of Diana Draper and Nelson Dean Jay Jr. The romance is one of the most interesting of the season.

Diana's mother, Mrs. Tuckerman Draper, is not only one of the most successful of society's business women, but one of the best looking, which is something else again. Her dad, Dr. George Draper, is a distinguished physician.

Diana, who inherits a generous helping of her mama's pulchritude, made her début here and in Newport four seasons ago. Since then she's mainly devoted herself to having fun, but more recently has taken to the making of a career. Dress designing is her metier.

Young Jays Will Settle Down in New York.

Her fiancé is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Dean Jay of 54 Avenue D'Iena, Paris. His mother was the former Anne Augustine of St. Louis. Nelson was educated in this country, first at St. Paul's school and then at Harvard.

No date has been set for the wedding. However, after the event, Nelson and his bride will make their home in New York. Undoubtedly Diana's chic mother will be called in to decorate their apartment. That's her business.

One of Dorothy Draper's first big contracts came from the haughty River club. She's been busy ever since. More recently she decorated the Gideon Putnam hotel. This is the new state owned hostelry at Saratoga Springs. It opened last summer.

Loses Health Crown.

SYDNEY.—(AP)—Decreased diphtheria figures in Detroit mean that this Australian city has lost its ten year record, 1923-'33, of the world's lowest death rate for cities of more than 500,000 population. Detroit now leads Sydney by one per 1,000, with Chicago a close third.

MARRIAGE IS PENDING

Miss Helen Robbins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy A. Robbins of Highland Park and the fiancee of William Whipple Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Miller of Winnetka. Miss Robbins, known as "Teddy," and "Bill" plan to be married Thanksgiving.

Words in Dialects of Yorkshire Hark Back to Norwegian

LONDON An expert philologist recently told the Yorkshire Dialect society that "all 25 of the Yorkshire dialects" show words derived from the Norwegian, while about 50 per cent of the towns and villages of Yorkshire has Scandinavian names.

In Tingley [Norwegian, Thingley] the annual horse fair has been held from time immemorial in a lane called "Hesketh Lane" which, he suggested, must have been derived from the Norwegian word "hester" meaning a horse. Such place-name endings as "how" [Greenhow], "dale" [Ribblesdale], "wick" [Austwick] and "garth" [Aysgarth] were clearly Norwegian.

So far as England is concerned, "sanctions" is an old Norwegian custom transplanted to this country. In the days of the Norwegian settlement, the philologist said, there was an annual fair called the "Lee Fair," held at Tingley, to which came representatives of all the district councils, called "wapentakes," and they discussed the events of the Yorkshire year and declared "sanctions" against any "wapentake" which had turned lawless in its relations with any other community!

Astronomer Royal of England Reads Disaster in Sun

LONDON The astronomer royal tells that we are entering upon a period of violent disturbances on the sun which will culminate three years hence.

He doesn't suggest that life on this planet will be directly affected, but there seem to be many people in England who look darkly on sun spots as the cause of periodic woes, and there will be a flood of letters to the newspapers predicting that plenty will happen.

There was, it appears, a preliminary warning of all this on Aug. 20, when a spot was seen on the sun which had not been there the day before. It was one and a half times the area of the earth, but by the next day it had burst out to a size four times the area of the earth. But the astronomer royal says that three years hence when these cyclonic solor disturbances get really going, the sun spots will be 100 times the area of the earth and the storms in the sun's atmosphere will have velocities up to 100 miles per second.

One seems to remember having been taught, in "college economics," that Jevons' famous theory, that "cyclical" crises in trade and business were due to agricultural disturbances set up by sun spots, had been completely exploded, but one meets quite a few Englishmen who contend obstinately that there is something in it. Certainly it is an odd coincidence that these sun spots reach their most violent stage every eleven years, and that "cyclical" crises, according to the economists, come about every eleven years.

And Jevons' son, who also is an economist, Prof. Herbert Stanley Jevons, strongly defends his father's theory.

Event to Honor Civic Services of Mrs. Peck

Friends and Associates to Meet This Afternoon at Fellowship House Party.

FRIENDS and associates of Mrs. Bronson Peck will gather this afternoon at Fellowship house, 831 West 33d street, to pay tribute to her 40 years of service to the community north of the stockyards.

Mrs. Peck has been actively interested in the settlement since its founding, and for years was chairman of the board of managers. Mrs. John C. Bley, one of her old friends, will speak on the early days of the settlement, and Mrs. Marie Jurgelonis, another old friend, will tell what the settlement has meant to the neighborhood. A musical program will be presented by a young girl violinist, whose first lessons were obtained at Fellowship house, and by the girls' chorus of the settlement.

Lending Library Among Aids Offered by Fellowship House.

Fellowship house is the only recreational center in the area bounded by 31st and 39th streets, Normal and Racine avenues. Among the facilities which it offers is a lending library, which circulates 1,000 books a month.

For boys there are clubs, a scout troop, athletics, handicraft classes, hikes, and trips. Girls' activities are similar, with folk dancing, sewing, choral singing, and dramatics also provided.

Adult social organizations are given rooms for their meetings, and there is a variety of educational and social activities arranged for them. There is a Woman's club, a chorus, and a house newspaper.

Various Events Fill Summer Recreational Program of House.

In the summer, free weekly outdoor moving pictures, street dances, and a six week summer school are provided. Miss Alice Mauck is head resident of the house, and Ronald J. Chinnock is chairman of the board, with Miss Mary De Coningh president.

Rene Weiller, consul general for France in Chicago, will confer the French decoration, "Les Palmes Academiques," on Miss Josephine C. Doniat at a ceremony at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at her home, 4129 Kenmore avenue. M. F. Girten, consul general, will introduce M. Weiller, and a number of personal and professional friends will witness the presentation, which makes Miss Doniat an officer of the French academy.

JOSEPHINE C. DONIAT.
[Root Photo.]

Miss Doniat is a graduate of Sacred Heart academy, and of the University of Chicago, where she received a Phi Beta Kappa award. She has done post graduate work at the University of Grenoble, where she was awarded an advanced diploma with honorable mention. Miss Doniat is dean of women and head of the department of modern languages at Wright Junior college.

The national officers of Gamma Phi Beta sorority will hold their semiannual conference today, tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at the Drake hotel. The three camps for underprivileged children maintained by the sorority in Colorado, British Columbia, and Virginia will be the principal topic of the conference.

Freda Komiko Stone Heart Club to Meet.

A dinner will be held tomorrow evening at the Gamma Phi Beta house in Evanston. Mrs. Arthur C. Hoffman of Minneapolis, president, will be present, with other leaders of the sorority.

The recently organized Freda Komaiko Stone Heart club will hold what is planned as the first of a series of annual earning fund dinners and card parties Wednesday evening at the new Samovar, 624 South Michigan avenue. Miss Rose Serota, program chairman, is in charge.

MISS ROSE SEROTA.

Organized as a memorial to the late Freda Komaiko Stone, who died in January, 1934, at the age of 27, the club is interested in aiding sufferers from heart diseases. Two wheel chairs have been presented to the Cook County Children's hospital for the use of cardiac patients after they leave the hospital, and toys and scrapbooks have been distributed to hospitals and nurseries. Mrs. Estelle Snyder is president of the club.

The 11th annual ball of the Polish Welfare association of Chicago will be held Thanksgiving eve in the Gold room of the Congress hotel. Proceeds will go toward the association's work in reducing juvenile delinquency in the Polish communities of the city. Julius F. Smietanka is president of the association, which numbers more than 700.

The Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education is sponsoring a series of meetings on "Religion in Experience and Culture," beginning Tuesday at 3:30 o'clock at the Palmer house. Dr. Harold L. Bowman of the First Presbyterian church will speak Tuesday on "Religion in the Family." A. Eustace Haydon of the department of comparative religion of the University of Chicago will preside.

New Council of Leeds May Scrap Rent-Free Housing

LONDON As the result of the recent municipal elections it now looks as if Leeds' revolutionary housing scheme will be abandoned and one no longer will be able to see tenants living rent free in municipal houses. For Leeds has gone Conservative, and the new councilors are expected to scrap the 18 month old plan. The Leeds scheme is the only one in the country based on the theory that people should pay the rent they can afford, and that if they actually are in want for ordinary necessities it is imperative to see that they have at least a roof over their heads. So the Leeds council drew up a subsistence scale, and families receiving less than the scale lived rent free.

Apparently the scheme has proved a financial success, for the rents received cover the council's expenses and bring in a weekly surplus which will be used to build more houses. However, there certainly has been plenty of friction with the rent paying tenants, who appear to be under the impression, apparently correct to some extent, that they are carrying the burden for the nonpayers.

Room Temperature Major Issue in British Cabinet!

LONDON Mr. H. B. Lees-Smith, who was in the Labor cabinet, told one of his audiences recently not to be overly impressed by the secrecy attending cabinet meetings.

"The great question at every cabinet meeting," he said, "is whether the windows shall be open or shut. All the young ministers, those under 65, want the windows open, and all the older ministers want them closed. As the older ministers always are in a majority, the windows remain shut, and, as smoking is permitted, the room rapidly becomes close and stuffy. This expedites business, and, as soon as they decently can, they break up and hurry off to their departments."

Paris Finds Transatlantic Travel on Rise

American Society Renews Wanderings Abroad; French Discover U. S.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS The French, and other Europeans, often make fun of the American love of statistics, but after all, statistics are a way of getting at facts. M. Herriot, the French politician, in one of his books speaks of the American saying that there are, as he put it, "a liar, a damned liar, and a statistic." Thus put singularly, it seems singular enough to American ears. At any rate, statistics seem to show that there is a distinct increase of trans-Atlantic travel this year over 1934. And professional groups after spending several weeks in Europe, have agreed that statistics are correct. This is confirmed by all private advices which we receive. And while Americans have been visiting Europe more freely this year, a number of French men and women have been discovering America.

Homeward Bound Travelers in Majority.

At the moment, as far as the better known of our countrymen are concerned, there is considerable travel across the herring pond in both directions, with the edge perhaps on the homeward side.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who usually spends the year from July until rather late autumn on the continent, and often in the company of Miss Anne Morgan, is one of those who have just returned to America. Aboard the same ship were Mr. and Mrs. Nicolas Raffalovich, well known in Chicago, who have been at their Paris residence in the Avenue Malakoff less than usual in recent months, being the givers and recipients of much hospitality at Venice.

Welles Bosworth Active in Paris Cultural Life.

For less than a dozen years Welles Bosworth has been the American architect in charge of the restorations of the palaces of Versailles and Fontainebleau, for which John D. Rockefeller Jr., set aside something over a million dollars. It appears that this work was urgent and much of the money went to repairing the extensive roofs. Be that as it may, Mr. Bosworth, who like so many leading American architects is a graduate of the Beaux-Arts and a corresponding member of the Institut de France, has more than one string to his bow. Several years ago he founded the American University club in Paris over which he still presides. The club has attractive headquarters in the Rue de Presbourg, overlooking the Etoile. While it is a men's club, women are invited on certain fête days for tea. Some months ago Mr. Bosworth gave an interesting talk at the American library here on some of the best private libraries he had known. Himself a man of wide culture, and extremely fond of books, he is no doubt making glamorous provision for them in the new residence which he is building at St. Cloud.

Aristocratic Caracul
Presenting a black caracul coat that might with distinction have graced the Empress, herself, in the days of imperialistic Russia. With its subtly Russian lines—smart tailored collar . . . slightly full sleeves caught at the wrist in a narrow band . . . the elegance of its self belted waistline . . . the sweep of the flared skirt. This loveliest of all caraculs has all the softness, all the suppleness, all the gleaming highlights of rich broadtail. It is truly a regal achievement. The price is $985.
The Blum collection of caraculs is priced from Europe Refuses to Get Excited Over Warfare

Returning Travelers Say the Mediterranean Is Putting On a Great Show.

ASSURANCES of returning travelers that, in contrast to the solemn parliamentary procedure at Geneva, the entire Mediterranean region is expressing the exuberance of military celebrations rather than a militant spirit have led a number of Chicagoans either to start for the scene of the drama or to make preparations to go there this winter.

Thomas Silvestrini, Chicago manager of the Italian Line, and J. Henning, western manager of the American Export Lines, said yesterday that with every major cruise cancelation their bookings for regular winter sailings were increased.

Upon his return from Europe last week W. C. Lancsweert, Chicago manager of the United States Lines, said most of the people on the other side seemed to be more interested in the outcome of their sporting events than they were in Italy's colonial expedition into Ethiopia. He talked to many persons on the boulevards of Paris, at the races at Longchamp, at the Brussels exposition, and in Oxford street in London, he related, and he could find no one who believed another world war was an immediate prospect.

Go to See Italy's Dramatic Spectacle.

Among those leaving yesterday on the Rex to witness the pageant of activities in the Mediterranean and to see Italy in its exhibition of nationalistic fervor were Frank Lankey and Edward Fitzgerald, student journalists, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rieman, who plan to travel through Italy until January. Others on the Rex were Miss Hazel Iverson, Miss Stella Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Peck, Michele Morrone, Miss Angelina Hella, and Georgio Costis, all bound for Rome.

Sailing for Europe yesterday or the Ile de France were Miss Helen Stout and ten young women. Until late in May they will travel and study in France, Spain, Italy, Holland, and England. In the group were the Misses Anne Winston, Betty Keith, Annie May Henry, Burl Heimple, Leta Kirk, Dorothy Potter, Kate Boyce, Nancy Spaulding, May Snyder, and Anne Jones.

Sailing on the Deutschland at midnight Wednesday will be Mrs. E. D. Oehler of Milwaukee and Dr. and Mrs. Fritz Otto Brandt of Denver.

Miss Mary Greenburg, Miss Mary Ruskin, and Mrs. Alice Turovlin were aboard the Exeter when it set sail for Mediterranean ports Tuesday.

Others Leave for the British Isles.

England attracts a steady flow of visitors month in and month out. Sailing for its shores yesterday on the Britannic were Mr. and Mrs. John G. Kinghan, E. L. Cotton, Mrs. B. B. Cotton, and Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Ross. Departing for England Friday on the Athenia were Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacLachlan.

Cyril L. Thiel left Wednesday on the President Harding to take up his duties as American consul in Helsingfors, Finland. C. D. Armstrong and A. Francou started for France on the Champlain.

Sailing for home this week on the Berengaria are Charles A. Munroe and his two daughters. Miss Josephine Bastien left Havre Wednesday on the Lafayette and Miss Mary Juhn is making her return passage on the Aurania.

Arriving in New York on the Deutschland tomorrow will be Mrs. Frank O. Fox and Miss R. R. Fox of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Ihle of Hammond, Ind.

Nearly a dozen Chicagoans sailed from New York yesterday for a cruise to Havana and on to San Francisco through the Panama canal aboard the California. They were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mandel, Miss Jane Kaufman, Mrs. H. M. Marks, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Mark Sales, on their honeymoon; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Abbott, H. Wiley, Mrs. I. E. Shey, and Mrs. L. Stein. En route they will pass the Virginia on its way from California to New York, with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Seibold, H. J. Cane, and W. J. Donahue aboard.

A MEETING PLACE FOR TOURISTS AND PERUVIANS

San Martin square, one of the many plazas in Lima, capital of Peru. At the left is the monument erected to Gen. Jose San Martin, whose name is as greatly honored in Peru as that of George Washington is honored in the United States. The republic, along with Ecuador and Chile, will be the subject of an illustrated lecture at the Fair Store on Friday morning.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I have been told that there is to be some sort of a fishing tourney in Bermuda this winter. Can you tell me about it? —E. L.

It will be known as the first annual Bermuda game fishing tournament, and it will be held from Dec. 20 to Jan. 10 under the auspices of the Bermuda trade development board. The idea is to attract sportsmen at a season when there is little fishing in the United States and Canada.

Three days and 23 hours. That mark was hung up by the Normandie in September. The previous record was 4 days 3 hours and 28 minutes, established by the same ship last spring.

What can you tell me about the coming world's exposition in Amsterdam? —C. G.

It will be held in 1939. The exposition grounds will cover more than 100 acres and will be in the vicinity of the Olympic stadium. In view of the success of the flower show at Heemstede last spring, when there were 600,000 visitors, the Hollanders believe they can put over a still larger show. The fair grounds will be designed to emphasize Holland's attractions, with special regard to its tulips.

Chicagoans at Indiana Resort

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind., Nov. 16.—Chicagoans vacationing here this week included Mr. and Mrs. Royal B. Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hellyer, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Damash, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Grawoig, Mr. and Mrs. H. Goldwyn, Mrs. H. J. Kirshberg, Mrs. Ethel Kaszab, Mrs. C. A. McDonald, Mrs. Ann Simons, Mrs. Jane Singer, Col. Matt Winn, Miss Clara Winn, A. R. Wilson, M. H. Ritzwaller, J. B. Downing, and Sol Goldsmith.

Latin American Countries to Be Depicted Friday

"REPUBLICS IN THE CLOUDS" is the title of an illustrated travelogue to be given at the Fair store at 11 a. m. Friday by Cameron Rogers, author and publicist. He will describe the scenic wonders of Ecuador, Peru, and Chile, and will cover the ocean voyage to those countries from New York. His lecture is the fourth of a series arranged by the World Travel institute.

CAMERON ROGERS.

Mr. Rogers was educated at Harvard. Since his graduation twelve years ago he has traveled extensively in nearly every Latin American republic. He is director of publicity for the Grace line, and has become an authority on the southern continent. Besides many magazine articles, he has written seven volumes of biography and historical and literary essays.

The lectures at the Fair are given weekly and will continue throughout the winter.

French Ship to Sail from New Orleans

FOLLOWING the Mardi Gras celebration this winter the French liner Mexique will sail from New Orleans on a three weeks' cruise of the Caribbean. It will leave at midnight on Feb. 25, the last day of the fête, and will call at Vera Cruz, Cristobal, Kingston, and Havana. The Mexique is in regular service between Spain, Cuba, and Mexico.

Tour Founder Dies.

Dr. Earl B. Hubbell, whose death was announced last week, was the founder of Hubbell's College Tours and was a pioneer in the tourist class business to Europe. For many years he had been engaged in religious and lecture work in Chicago. In the world war he was executive secretary of the national war work council.

Jury Defends 46th Exhibit of American Art

Asserts There Is No Discrimination Against Conservative Group.

By Eleanor Jewett.

A STATEMENT from the jury of the 46th annual American paintings and sculpture exhibition, which is current in the east wing galleries of the Art institute, reads: "The jury was entirely responsible for the selection of the paintings, except the invited minority, and for the prize awards. The jury sincerely feels that it did not discriminate against either the conservative or the modernist trends, but selected the best work regardless of labels. The jury enjoyed particularly the fresh and vigorous work of the younger western painters."

Henry Varnum Poor, Waldo Pierce, and Lloyd Goodrich made up the jury. The first two are painters of the modernist persuasion; Mr. Goodrich writes on art. It is remarkable that out of over 1,700 paintings submitted, the jury found nothing worth while for the most part except pictures by students. It looks as though a new "ism" were to the fore. We have had cubism, dadaism, futurism, modernism, and now we have youthism.

Harshe Says Show Is Thoroughly Representative.

Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art institute, says of the show: "It is thoroughly representative of current American art." He also says: "No other class in our country has suffered from the depression so much as young artists have," and "The justification of this show is its new note," and "The show is hard to understand."

The new note, visible as crudeness, to which he refers, has, we think, been done to death in our no jury shows for years past. The young artist, we think, has not suffered nearly as deeply during the depression as has the older painter who had responsibilities to carry. The show, we think, is not representative of American art because it leaves out entirely the contemporary, nonmodernist painting of artists too numerous to mention who are painting in the middle west, the east, and the west, but are not members of the little clique of amateur daubers whose modernist sallies are magnified out of all proportion by the Art institute policy of catering to the freakish. That other museums through the country are doing likewise makes it no better.

The American paintings and sculpture exhibition was intended to represent contemporary painting. It was not meant for a stamping ground for students. It seems as though the time had come when the museum galleries stopped being a cold frame for callow youth. It is time, too, that a hidden and valuable meaning should not be searched for in every badly drawn and worse colored canvas. If the young moderns go Gertrude Stein, we should not feel obligated to cipher them.

Shall Youths Be More Encouraged Than Maturity?

For many seasons now it has been the policy of the Art institute to encourage students rather than men and women of mature years. The reactions of any one under 26 have been taken seriously. The Art institute is tender, too, with old age. The extremely amateurish landscape with deer by an old lady in the Chicago Artists' exhibit last spring was distinguished by particular notice from Dr. Harshe, director of the museum, who made a graceful reference to it at the artists' dinner.

Youth and old age have their place, but it is false sentiment to put either before the work of persons painting in full control of their faculties and of their craft. Students should be relegated to student shows, and when amateur night is held then the many grandmothers who painted in their youth, raised a family, and now have gone back to the paint box, should be fêted.

Art Institute a Training School for Public Taste.

The Art institute is a municipal organization capable of doing a vast amount of good or bad to the public. Through its exhibitions it is training the eye and taste of thousands. Ideals and standards have a place in the institute. New notes that are difficult to understand, particularly new notes which are obviously false, should be given a minimum of harborage. One gallery devoted to them instead of an entire wing—that should be our goal in the future. How does any one know that these discordant juvenalia will be the art of the future? And if the institute policy is off on the wrong foot why should the public suffer from indigestion until the museum discovers its error and shows worth while paintings and sculpture again?

Also why should a young student artist be petted when neither the young musician nor the young writer is given an easy hearing? The Art institute policy, kind as it is, is not wise. It makes the student feel himself better than the painter of repute and makes him feel further study is unnecessary. It leaves him as immature as it found him.

Returning to an official statement that this current show is "hard to understand." We can parry with the question: "If you understand it, what then?"

Great Britain's Etchings Most Sensitive in Exihibit.

Meanwhile the Fifth International Exhibition of Lithography and Wood Engraving in the print rooms of the Art institute is a well balanced and interesting show. Various countries are represented, with honors going to Great Britain for the cleanest cut and most sensitive work. The United States has the largest representation, and in its group are many striking prints, including "Docks," by Charles Locke, which was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and prize of $75. A special prize of $75 was given by the jury to "The Introduction," by Tom Chadwick [English], possibly the most direct and dramatic and virile wood engraving in the entire show.

The exhibition is one to savor slowly. There are many amusing, clever, brilliant, teasing, elusive, practical, and charming things in it. The variety of subject and technique is constant. Belgium sends the "Family Circle," by Nelly Degouy, a delightful parody on obedience; France contributes an ugly and hard "Beach," by Leopold Survage, a dashing "Guardsmen," by Theodore Brenson, four charming little lithographs in color by Jean Hugo, and "The Mantelpiece" [in color], by Leon Lang. From Canada comes the "Gimli," by Walter J. Phillips.

Russians Offer Quaint Illustrations for Dickens.

The Great Britain contingent includes "The Cuckoo in the Nest," by Edmund Blampied; a cat eating a dog's plate of bones while the disconsolate dog stands helplessly by, Clare Leighton's vigorous "Washing Clothes, Corsica," Agnes Miller Parker's amusing cat engravings, "Composition II," by Buckland Wright, and "Dacre Bank, Yorkshire," by Charles W. Taylor.

The Russian engravings are amusingly British in character, as most of them are illustrations for stories by Dickens. When they are not illustrative in manner they are as prim and quaint as early woodcuts. Hungary is represented by two artists. Both deal with Biblical subjects. C. Pal Molnar shows three wood engravings, charming in their quiet and formal manner. The "Nativity" is fascinating.

Curry Better in Etchings Than in Paintings.

The American section is large and extremely well balanced. There is good work present in abundance. The jitters that have attacked the painting fraternity upstairs are unfelt here. Oscar E. Berninghaus has a stunning landscape, "On the Way to Santa Fe, New Mexico," "Mississippi Noah," by John Steuart Curry, is splendid; Curry, like George Bellows, seems finer in his black and white than in paint.

"Texas Nomads," by Peter Hurd, is good. "Carnival," by John V. Stenvall, is amusing. "New Year's Day," by J. J. Lankes; "Mother and Child," by Ruth Starr Rose; "Communing With Nature," by Rockwell Kent; "Interior, Mexico City," by Doris Rosenthal; "After the Storm," by G. M. Cadel, "Fish Pier, Portland, Me.," by Asa Cheffetz [do you remember his New England calendar of last year?]; "Still Life With Paper Bag," by Rosella Hartman, and many other etchings make this exhibition extremely worth while. It will run to Jan. 6, and every one should take the time to see it.

This Week in Chicago

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York:

Chicago, May 25, 1886.

DEAR JULIA: We have just come from the Locust street home of dear old Mr. Gurdon S. Hubbard, where we called to report to that venerable pioneer some of the happenings at the old settlers' party at the Calumet club a few evenings ago. Mr. Hubbard used to be one of the great attractions of these gatherings, but now that he has lost his sight he cannot attend. I could hardly keep the tears back as we greeted him tonight and he turned his sightless gaze on us with a cheerful word of greeting.

True hero he is, for when his left eye had to be removed, three or four years ago, he refused to take an anesthetic and bore the operation without a murmur. Was this because of his training among the Indians, who demanded of a hero stoic suffering? Now both eyes gone, he sits waiting the voice of Kashameneto, as the Pottawatomies called the Great Spirit. Of course Mr. Hubbard doesn't use this flowery Indian language, but it sprang to my mind as I saw him sitting quietly there. He is a devout Episcopalian, having been an organizer of St. James church and a vestryman there.

Sitting in darkness now he is always cheerful. What visions rise before him, to cheer these lonely hours? Perhaps fancy brings again his first glimpse of Chicago in 1818, an event he has described for us so vividly, often; or days when he tramped alone . . . he, the "swift walker," as the Indians called him . . . along State street, then known as Hubbard's trail, because he had blazed the way to Danville; or the days when he lived among the Indians, with the beautiful maiden, Watseka, for his bride.

We told him of the old settlers we had met the other evening and how "Long John" Wentworth had set his great hand and seal at the top of the page of signatures and called on others to sign. And we bore to him the greetings of the welcoming committee of the Calumet club. . . . J. H. McVicker, Stewart Clark, Charles Fleetwood, Moses J. Wentworth, and John Hamline.

He smiled as we described how, after a fine supper, when Dennis Hart, head waiter, looked after us beautifully, the pioneers romped through the Virginia reel with the same abandon they must have shown as they danced to Mark Beaubien's fiddle at the Sauganash tavern. I told Mr. Hubbard how gallantly Will led me out on the floor at the old settlers' party, and he murmured: "Will was always gallant."

I'm not sure how well Mrs. Hubbard liked the talk about dancing, for she is a rigid Presbyterian and holds, I'm sure, that light heels indicate a light head, so I sought occasion to assure her we just took a turn about the room for old sake's sake.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard enjoyed hearing of the table decoration, a centerpiece representing a campfire. The idea was well carried out, for the kettle was made of roses, pansies, and pinks, while red geraniums indicated fire, under the small sticks of wood. An old lady standing near me, as we admired it, said: "O me! O my! I cooked many a meal over a camp fire like that on our way out from Massachusetts to Illinois in a covered wagon, and Husband said it tasted awful good."

Husband, today a successful and dyspeptic citizen, was standing across the room looking longingly at viands he could not eat. What say you, Julia? Is his life happier because he can buy expensive food, which doesn't "set well on his stummick," to quote his wife? Or, was life sweeter when he ate a coarse meal from a camp kettle and pronounced it "awful good"?

A portrait of Gen. Henry Dearborn, painted by Gilbert Stuart, was presented to the Calumet club by a group of members of the Commercial club. They had seen it in Boston and negotiated for it with success. A great acquisition to the art treasures of Chicago! I don't know all of the donors, but among them were Charles L. Hutchinson, John B. Drake, N. K. Fairbank, and Uri Balcom. Honor to them all! Now I must close. Much love. MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

"The Epic of Chicago," by Henry R. Hamilton, tells the story of the life of Gurdon S. Hubbard, one of Chicago's noblest citizens.

The portrait of Gen. Henry Dearborn is now the property of the Art institute of Chicago, purchased from a New York dealer, to whom it was sold by the Calumet club when that organization disbanded.

Dennis C. Hart, once a head waiter at the Calumet club, is living in a home for the aged at Sheffield and Fullerton avenues.

Old Chicago Harthstones.

At 40th street and Lake Park avenue stand the two Trumbull houses. In one, Ex-Senator Lyman Trumbull lived; the other was occupied by his brother. Indeed, Senator Trumbull occupied each house at different times and here Lincoln visited the brothers. Between the lots ran a little stream or creek, and from the front of the house numbered 4024, Lincoln shot wild ducks, so the tale runs. Some of the old pieces of furniture used by the Trumbulls are still in the house . . . the hall rack, a sideboard, and a built-in bookcase or two. The rooms are virtually the same as in the Trumbulls' time, the color of the woodwork being unchanged and the lighting fixtures being in their original places. The old mail box and flower urns are intact, and the house, with its spacious lawn, looks serenely out at the scurrying automobiles which whizz by on their way to the outer drive.

Across the street, where a large apartment building now stands, Union army regiments were encamped during the civil war, and an old tree which marked the spot has only recently been removed.

[The above facts about the Trumbull place have been given us by Jean Sterling Nelson, interior decorator and lecturer, who has been working to have this historic house preserved as a memorial.]

Can any one tell us the story of the house at the southeast corner of Ohio and Bickerdike streets? We have been asked about it and have no information. Address Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Art Notes

Paintings of Illinois by Lane K. Newberry are hung in the Lord Nelson room, Drake hotel, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

Modern paintings, delightful in matter and manner, make up the first show in the Katherine Kuh gallery, Diana Court building.

Water colors by Neil Slocum [the yachting pictures are alert and vivid] hang in the Allerton House gallery through November

Frank C. Peyraud follows Clay Kelly tomorrow in an exhibit of landscapes in the Davis store 8th floor gallery.

The Palette and Chisel Academy of Fine Arts has opened its annual small painting show in its galleries, 1012 North Dearborn street.

Paintings by Renoir since 1900 are on view in the Quest gallery, Fine Arts building.

Landscapes by Homer G. Davisson and flower arrangements by Mrs. Edna S. Cathell are on view in the Hoosier gallery, 211 West Wacker drive.

The Neoterics continue their exhibit in the Findlay galleries, 414 South Michigan avenue. Macena Barton, Walter Krawiec, Julius Moessel, and Helga Haugan Dean are particularly interesting contributors. "Little Sisters," by Helga Dean, is charming.

Conference Programs to Be Events of Week

By Ruth DeYoung.

OF major interest to women in the Chicagoland area are the two press conferences which THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is sponsoring Thursday and Friday afternoons in the auditorium of the new W-G-N radio studio in Tribune Square. To meet the large and enthusiastic ticket demand THE TRIBUNE scheduled a second session last Wednesday. Both meetings will begin promptly at 2 o'clock so that guests are asked to be in their seats not later than 1:50 o'clock.

Philip Kinsley, veteran TRIBUNE reporter who has traveled the world over on big news assignments, will be the principal speaker at the conferences. Mr. Kinsley, who has earned the respect and admiration not only of the staf of which he is a member but also of the general public, will discuss "The Education of a Reporter."

The program, similar on each afternoon, will be introduced by a motion picture that will portray the making of a great metropolitan newspaper from the timberlands on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the State and Madison street news stand. The picture will take the audience into THE TRIBUNE newsroom and introduce staf writers at work.

As soon as the picture is finished a number of these writers will come to the conference platform. India Moffett, who also is known by her nom de plume of Judith Cass, Mae Tinée, Fanny Butcher, Herma Clark, Edith Weigle, Rhea Seeger, and Eleanor Nangle will be introduced. So will Virginia Gardner, dean among TRIBUNE women news writers; Sally Joy Brown, Helen Bartlett, Louise Bargelt, Nancy Cabot, and writers of women's news on the metropolitan staf.

Other headline speakers will be Edith Mason and John Charles Thomas of operatic fame. Miss Mason, who has sung in many parts of the world and now is appearing with the Chicago City Opera company during its six weeks' engagement in the Civic Opera house, will speak Thursday afternoon, giving an evaluation of newspaper publicity. Mr. Thomas, most famous of American baritones, who is another artist with the City Opera company, will discuss the same subject Friday afternoon. Mr. Thomas was a star in light opera. Besides being a star now in grand opera, he is a radio celebrity.

The entertainment bill for the conferences will present another opera star, Jean Tennyson, noted for her beauty as well as her soprano voice, and several of W-G-N's most brilliant artists. Attilio Baggiore, operatic and concert tenor; Lawrence Salerno, Neapolitan baritone; the Doring Sisters, a harmony trio, and Sally Joe Nelson, ballad singer, will appear. So will Esther Tarler, W-G-N mimic of national figures, and Tom, Dick, and Harry, W-G-N's singing comedians, with their accompanist, Carl Hoefle. Harold Turner will accompany the other stars. Bob Elson will be master of ceremonies for the entertainment.

THE TRIBUNE has planned the conferences to answer a widespread appeal for information concerning the whys and wherefores of newspaper publicity as applied to the activities of women's organizations. At the meetings a brochure covering these questions will be distributed.

Presidents, program, and press chairmen of all women's organizations, no matter what their object, have been invited to attend. According to the responses, numbering more than 1,400, there will be representatives of women's clubs of every type, charity boards, leagues of women voters, parent-teacher organizations, and American Legion auxiliaries in the audiences. These women will come not only from Chicago and its suburbs but also from northern Indiana and lower Michigan and Wisconsin.

Since the scheduling of two meetings there are a few remaining seats. Applications for these should be made by letter through the conference headquarters, room 1418, Tribune Tower, or by telephone through Superior 0100, local 748.

English Producer Puts Black Shirt on Coriolanus!

LONDON With a sense of the topical somewhat surprising to him, Ashley Dukes is putting on Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" at the little Mercury theater in Notting Hill Gate.

In these days of dictatorships no play could be more appropriate than this one. No liberties are being taken with the text, but Coriolanus will wear, not a toga, but a black shirt.

Speaking of drama reminds me that at the church congress the bishop of Southampton, trying to explain why so many irreligious people preferred a "fashionable church wedding" suggested that they chose the church because its bright lights and vestments and broad chancel appealed to the "dramatic instincts of the bride and bridegroom."

"They like the stage setting," he said, "and the religious significance of the ceremony is lost upon them."

DOMESTIC TRAVEL

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

FOREIGN TRAVEL

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

IT was some 2,200 years ago that Alexander the Great bewailed the fact that there were no more worlds left for him to conquer. The complaint is still heard occasionally from those who have been everywhere and seen everything. The explorers say there are no places left to explore. Yet there are a few. Tibet is one; Nias is another.

Tibet remains unexplored by the white men because the Tibetans have willed it so. They are firm in their demands for seclusion, and they see to it that their demands are complied with. Nias remains unexplored because the world at large has never heard of it. Few persons know of it even by name. Not more than 400 travelers have actually seen it, for no passenger steamers go there and only two cruises have included it in their itineraries.

● This almost inaccessible island is one of the Dutch East Indies and it lies about 100 miles west of Sumatra. Its history has baffled the historians. A number of theories have been offered in accounting for its customs and habits, but the only thing known for a certainty is that at some far remote period settlers of undetermined origin landed there and started a colony. Through many centuries their descendants, cut off from their fellow beings, developed their own laws and art and civilization. It was only a quarter of a century ago that the Dutch took over the government and tried to give the natives a semblance of civilization.

Even under the new régime the island is about as much out of touch with the outside world as before. There is only an infrequent supply ship, and there is neither cable nor wireless. The few travelers who go there see an indigenous culture of great antiquity. So far as is known, that culture has been unaffected by foreign influences of any kind.

● Until recently there was much warfare among the various towns, and head hunting was a common practice. For self-protection the villages were built on hilltops as high and as difficult to reach as possible. Many of them are approached, first by steep trails through forests of virgin timber, and then by long flights of stone steps.

The towns or "kampongs" usually consist of a single broad street paved with large, flat stones. In the center of the kampong is a "jumping stone," seven or eight feet high, built like a small section of a wall and often carved. Every young man must leap over this stone before he can qualify as a warrior. After that, he keeps on leaping over it to keep himself in fighting trim.

The communal life centers in the village street. There the chief sits on a great carved throne and settles disputes and hands down judgments. There also is the scene of the ancestral dances.

● Nias has been visited twice by the Stella Polaris, a motor ship that each winter sets out for the South seas and the East Indies with a party of globe trotters. It will be visited by the same ship this winter.

RURAL LIFE FOR CITY DWELLERS

Miami Prepares to Start Season Thanksgiving Day

MIAMI, Fla.—The final fortnight of preparations for the winter season here is under way, with the major interest centered on the Thanksgiving holidays. Parties, dances, and golf tournaments are a part of the program.

The vanguard of winter golfers will get their first workout in tournament play at the annual Miami Biltmore Thanksgiving day competition Nov. 25 to 29. This will be followed on Dec. 1 to 6 by the Half Century tourney at the West Flagler Country club.

The winter visitor need not worry about finding suitable accommodations in Miami, B. R. Kessler, executive secretary of the chamber of commerce, said in pointing out that in the first ten months of the year 6,100 units in new hotels and apartment houses were added in a building program valued in excess of $12,000,000.

Orlando Looking for Bumper Crop

ORLANDO, Fla.—With the announcement of a new sports and recreation program including a score of tournaments, Orlando, which last season was host to 26,852 northern visitors, in completing preparations for the bumper tourist crop forecast by a flood of early inquiries and reservations.

"Inquiries from the north are 40 per cent more numerous at this time than they were a year ago," said De Witt Miller, president of the Orlando Chamber of Commerce. "We expect to welcome 35,000 visitors this winter."

With near completion of the revamped airport, having eight runways and accommodations for 20 planes, entry to the city from the north by both rail and plane is available on daily schedule.

Bermuda Shows Big Tourist Gain

LAST summer was the greatest tourist summer Bermuda has ever had, F. C. Wilson told 100 Chicago travel agents at the annual luncheon of the Furness line at the Drake hotel last Saturday. There were 21,000 more passengers on the Furness ships to the islands from New York this year than last, or a gain of 31 per cent, Mr. Wilson related.

Robert Morgan, manager of two of the Bermuda hotels, set forth this winter's prospects, and W. L. Moody, manager of the line's Chicago office, gave a radio talk over "WLM." Andrew Findlay of the New York office presented a new Bermuda travelogue of motion pictures in color.

Diesel Engine on Display Monday

THE Santa Fe line's new 3,600 horsepower Diesel locomotive will be on exhibition at the Dearborn street station from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. tomorrow, with the public invited. This was announced yesterday.

At 7 p. m. Tuesday the locomotive will leave Chicago on a fast run to Los Angeles, as a preliminary to later inauguration of regular service on a new Santa Fe flyer.

Egypt

● Under lofty palm trees white-hooded Arabs crowd the market places of Cairo, varied as the Bagdad of Harun-al-Rashid. And inland there are Luxor, Aswan and the Second Cataract toward which a fleet of luxurious steamers and dahabeahs move up the ageless and incomparable Nile, said by many travelers to be the most famous river voyage on earth. ● If you are planning a trip to Egypt and the Mediterranean, let the Chicago Tribune Travel and Resort Bureau help you. Without cost or obligation you can get complete, reliable information about steamship, railroad, bus and plane schedules, cost of transportation, hotels, customs and passport regulations—about all the details necessary for a perfect vacation. FOUR FAVORITES OF RADIO IN CHICAGOLAND

BETTY WINKLER, a lovely brunette who plays important parts in "Welcome Valley," a serial; "Grand Hotel," "Girl Alone," and the eerie "Lights Out" series. Miss Winkler has been a member of the staf of the National Broadcasting company, Chicago division, two years.

GALE PAGE, a contralto, is best known for her contributions to the Carnival and the Breakfast club, both at NBC. Recently she has displayed talent as an actress, also, and has been cast in the sketch titled "Masquerade."

IREENE WICKER, the Singing Lady of W-G-N, the Tribune's station, and NBC. Her twilight period of song and story has found wide favor, not only with children but with their elders. There are two "e's" in her name because a numerologist said there ought to be.

STARTING OUT IN RADIO AS A SONGSTRESS, Virginia Clark has achieved national recognition as an actress. She plays the title role in the dramatic serial, "The Romance of Helen Trent," aired over W-G-N and Columbia. Miss Clark also is the mistress of ceremonies on the Friendly Neighbor's House Party on W-G-N.

BIG MONEY-SAVING DODGE

Scores Sensational Style Scoop!

READ WHAT NOTED FASHIONISTS SAY ABOUT THE BEAUTIFUL 1936 DODGE

EXQUISITE STYLING

"One big reason for Dodge beauty," says Lilly Daché, famous American designer of women's hats, "is the way its designers have worked every unit into it as a definite part of the whole. Head and tail lights—fender sweep—door handles—chromium beading—all the little necessary accessories, are parts of the car design. It's an exquisite job of styling."

NEATLY TAILORED

"Such a gorgeous looking car," says Sally Milgrim, nationally-known creator of women's styles. "The instrument panel with sleek modern trim is as neatly tailored as anything I have ever seen . . . and such careful attention has been given to little niceties of appointments."

SMART AND SLEEK

"Here's a nose made to slip the breeze—smart and sleek as the sharp prow of a lightning-fast speedboat," says Esther Cole, well-known Philadelphia fashionist, in referring to the Dodge's brilliant new radiator grille. "Simplicity and modernity capture an effect that can't help but excite everyone's admiration."

GRACEFUL LINES

"There's a new flair to the long, low, graceful lines of the Dodge hood and the sharply 'blended-in' louvers," says Elinor Williams, fashion editor, Boston Herald-Traveler.

Built to Survive Thrilling Safety Tests... America's Big Money-Saving Car... "Beauty Winner" of 1936...

FAMOUS for dependability, safety and amazing economy of operation, Dodge now steps out ahead with sheer, breath-taking beauty . . . sets the pace for all 1936 cars with sensational new style and smartness . . .

Hailed by Noted Auto Editors

All over the country noted automobile editors and stylists—men and women who know—are showering praise and admiration on the new Dodge. "The smartest, handsomest and best looking car Dodge ever built," they unanimously agree.

Point by point, compare this thrilling new Dodge with any car selling within $500 of its price . . . Dodge gives you the kind of ride that would thrill you even in the most expensive American or European cars . . . genuine hydraulic brakes . . . safety-steel bodies . . . Balanced Driving Control . . . more spacious, more luxurious interiors . . . and above all, the amazing economy of the powerful Dodge engine which owners are already reporting gives them 18 to 24 miles per gallon of gas and saves up to 20% on oil.

Look at this magnificent new Dodge today. Drive it—and you'll see in this big, Money-Saving Dodge "Beauty Winner" of 1936 a car that gives you hundreds of dollars of extra value for just a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars.

PROTECT THEM IN THE DODGE Safety-Steel Body

Pioneered by Dodge in 1914, the Dodge safety-steel body has been constantly improved and strengthened every year for 21 years. Today everyone knows Dodge as the car that has survived the most tortuous safety tests that scientific ingenuity can devise. Now Dodge gives you a steel body that is even stronger, more rigid than ever before . . . steel backed up with practically impenetrable network of steel. You are entitled to the safest body construction you can buy—and you get it in the Dodge safety-steel body—the body which has 21 years of experience in steel body building behind it!

A LA MODE

A FORMAL COIFFURE called "Opening Night" was outstanding among those designed by members of the fashion committee of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' association for the national convention held recently in New York. The artist used puff curls in a semi-halo and a fluttery black aigrette for decoration.

A HALO OF VELVET POPPIES, rich and colorful, is an exciting note to this evening hair dress created by a Chicagoan for the hair style show in New York.

THE "GARDENIA" COIFFURE has a center part and loose sculptured curls, some of which are arranged in topknot effect. The snowy flower is interestingly used as ornamentation. This hairdress was created by a Chicago stylist for the National Hairdressers' style show.

CLUE: The forehead is that of a charming little dancer. (Chicagoans can see her this week at a loop Balaban & Katz Theater.) The eyes and nose are those of a star who recently adopted another baby. The mouth and chin are those of a star who has appeared in jungle films.

THESE PICTURES WILL HELP YOU

The Movie Stars in Set No. 5 are among those pictured below:

Ginger Rogers
Maureen O'Sullivan
Gracie Allen
Joan Crawford
Greta Garbo
Joan Blondell
Grace Moore
Dolores Del Rio
Ruby Keeler

SEE THEM THERE!

• THE RULES •

WHO CAN ENTER: Every man, woman, boy and girl is eligible, regardless of residence, excepting employes of the Chicago Tribune, employes of Balaban & Katz theaters and members of their families.

WHAT TO DO: The pictures must be cut apart, assembled and pasted together. Below each picture must be written the name of the star. You may trim off rough edges if you wish to make perfect rectangular pictures. Three pictures will appear each Sunday in the Chicago Sunday Tribune until 36 pictures have appeared. Each set of three pictures, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete portraits.

WHERE TO SEND ENTRIES: DO NOT send in pictures one at a time. Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 36. Then send them to "Misplaced Faces," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. No entry will be returned. All entries must be in by midnight 15 days after Set No. 12 is published. Each entry must be sent by first class mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

THE PRIZES: The Chicago Tribune will pay 428 cash prizes totaling $10,000 to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of pictures in accordance with these rules. See prize list above. You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 36 pictures correctly to win. Prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. Elaborate entries are not necessary. Just make your entry simple and neat.

JUDGING: Entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept this committee's decision as final. Accuracy in assembling and naming the pictures, and neatness of entry will be the sole determining factors. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be paid.

NOTHING TO BUY: It is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

For Back Copies Containing Previously Published Sets of Pictures in This Contest See Your Newsdealer or the Tribune.

The NEW Head Band and Chin Strap that is ELASTIC without rubber and WASHABLE

USE the Youth-Molde combination Head Band and Chin Strap (double style) to keep face and neck young. As a head band it protects the hair. As a chin strap it lifts and supports relaxed, sagging muscles. If you use astringent compresses under the chin, Youth-Molde holds them firmly in place.

Wear Youth-Molde when you read, knit or are physically relaxed so that the under chin muscles will be lifted and held in place. Youth-Molde may be laundered and lasts indefinitely.

Use the inexpensive Youth-Molde Head Band (single style) to protect the hair against creams, lotions and powder. It fits snugly around the hairline and gives attractive, comfortable protection.

Honest, Men—YOU'LL GIVE YOUR OLD PENS TO MUSEUMS OR RUMMAGE SALES

If you'll try Parker's Revolutionary Vacumatic with Visible Ink Supply

Holds 102% more ink

This Christmas Parker rewards the Early-Bird Shoppers by Giving Outright This Lovely Plaskon Utility Case with the purchase of a Parker Laminated Pearl Vacumatic Pen and Pencil Set

THE new Parker Vacumatic is the revolutionary pen that doesn't run dry—won't become empty, ever—unless you let it. For its ink level is ever-visible—shows you when to refill—and besides, this miracle pen holds 102% more ink than old-style, without increase in size!

There is double room for ink because there are 14 less parts. Gone are the lever filler and rubber ink sac used in sac-type pens, and also the squirt-gun pump found in ordinary sacless pens. That's why The Parker Pen Company GUARANTEES the new Vacumatic mechanically perfect.

To encourage early Christmas shopping, we offer, absolutely without charge, this handsome, permanent Plaskon Utility Case with the purchase of the lovely Parker Laminated Pearl Vacumatic Pen and Pencil Set. On receiving this gift, the owner merely transfers the Pen and Pencil to pocket, handbag, or desk, and the smart Plaskon Case becomes a cigarette box or a jewel case. Made in Jet or African Brown with Ivory Plaskon lid—very strong, thoroughly durable, and so good-looking!

Step into any good store where pens are sold, and see this revolutionary Parker Vacumatic with its lovely mate, the shimmering Laminated Pearl Pencil to match. And ask also to see this smart Plaskon Utility Case, now given outright with this fine pair as a pre-Christmas Special. The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wis.

Parker VACUMATIC $7.50

Blow hot .... blow cold ..

It makes no difference to

THERMO ROYAL
THE 10,000-MILE
ANTI-FREEZE

THERMO ROYAL was used in a 10,000-mile test run from Medicine Hat to Mexico City last winter. It encountered temperatures from 54° below to 102° above, yet operating loss was amazingly low.

If you are looking for a truly efficient, long-lasting anti-freeze—one that is priced in line with the times—use THERMO ROYAL. A truly modern anti-freeze for the modern high-speed motor. Contains no harmful salts to attack motor metals, hose connections or packing. Guaranteed not to turn gummy or rancid. Prevents rust.

This amazing new liquid is not claimed to "last forever." (We know of no anti-freeze that will.) But for sheer, stubborn resistance to "boiling off" and protection from "icing up", Thermo Royal is the outstanding anti-freeze value on the market today. PUBLICKER, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Tortured in bed! Milly made a serious mistake
... she bought her husband pajamas with drawstrings ... the "rope" that ruins sleep

Faultless NOBELT Pajamas give a man a better night's sleep

A woman wouldn't stand for it ... going to bed night after night with a rope stretched tight around her waist!

Consider your husband ... isn't it high time to free him from the discomfort of wearing pajamas with old-fashioned drawstrings ... the "rope" that ruins sleep?

Next time you buy him pajamas, get Faultless Nobelt Pajamas. They don't have drawstrings. A comfortable flat waistband of stre-t-c-h-able rubber holds pajamas up without pressure. No pinching, no binding all night long.

Faultless Nobelt Pajamas are sold by leading department stores and men's wear stores everywhere. $2 to $10.

This waistband won't wear out! The patented Faultless Nobelt waistband is guaranteed not to lose its lively stretch for the life of the garment. And that's a long, long time ... because Nobelt pajamas are tailored from factory-tested materials ... cut full in shoulders and seat to eliminate the strain that causes wear.

Wilson Super Shorts with the comfortable Faultless Nobelt waistband ... 50c, 65c and $1.00

They stay up without pressure

Faultless Nobelt Pajamas made of new long-wearing Lusterette $2.50

INSTANT ALKALIZING BATH NOW FOR ACID STOMACH...

SIGNS WHICH OFTEN INDICATE "ACID STOMACH"

Pain after eating
Indigestion
Nausea
Loss of Appetite
Auto-Intoxication

Frequent Headaches
Feeling of Weakness
Sleeplessness
Mouth Acidity
Sour Stomach

Almost Immediate Relief from "Acid Indigestion," Over-Indulgence, Nausea and Upsets

You can relieve even the most annoying symptoms of acid stomach in almost as little time, now, as it takes to tell.

The answer is quick and simple: You alkalize your stomach almost instantly this way:

Take — Two teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after meals. OR — take two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets; each of which contains the equivalent of a teaspoonful of the liquid form.

That's all you do. Relief comes in a few minutes. Your stomach is alkalized — sweetened, soothed. Nausea, upset distress disappear. It's wonderful and amazing.

Why Results Come So Fast

Results come fast because Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is a natural alkalizer of stomach acids . . . rated as among the most potent science has yet discovered.

People everywhere, who are urged to keep their stomach alkalized, are finding this out. It makes an almost incredible difference in the way your stomach feels.

Try it. Get a bottle of the liquid Phillips' for home use. A box of the Phillips' tablets that you can carry with you in pocket or purse — only 25¢ for a big box. Watch out that any you accept is clearly labeled "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

BEACON THROUGH THE AGES—FOR INSPIRED CHRISTMAS GIVERS!

NOW the bright shadow of another Christmas begins to lie across the shortening days ahead. A beacon, as through the ages, for the inspired givers who extract full enjoyment from the traditional ceremonies.

They are those who impart to the gift of one slender shaft of lipstick a princely heritage of gallantry. Who bestow the whole gleaming contents of a duchess' dressing-table, in the same breath, with the casual grace that has marked gentlefolk for centuries.

Their headquarters is Yardley House in London. Yet you need neither steamer, stamp, nor even stamina to share their pleasures. Yardley House in America has provided lavishly for you and yours. Simply plan now to fill your entire list with such selections as are being made in Bond Street . . . and accepted with bliss everywhere.

Perfect presents — for every person and for every purse! From $1.25 to $30, each bears the royal-crested stamp of your distinguished taste — and the lovely lavender fragrance of the world's most charming Christmases. Compliments recognized the world around!

Check this page today for advance information on Yardley's brilliant toiletries, cosmetics, exalted bath sets! You'll find ten times as many in your nearest fine store. Tomorrow — while you've still plenty of leisure to relish to the full the rite of graceful living!

Learn How to Manicure Dress Hair Permanent Wave at DeLEE

At DeLEE, under the personal direction of Mme. Louise, internationally famous beauty expert, you learn the true art of beauty culture and hairdressing — thoroughly, quickly, easily. You soon become an expert hairdresser and manicurist. You soon become proficient in the art of permanent waving, finger waving, hair cutting — and in all lines of beauty work. At DeLee you actually learn the fine points. You learn methods which will make you stand out—head and shoulders—above "ordinary" operators. DeLEE training prepares you for a good paying position in a high class beauty salon.

Reasonable Tuition

At DeLEE you get your "money's worth." The DeLEE tuition fee is adjusted to the lowest possible figure, commensurate with the complete, expert, high quality of instruction. We guarantee to teach you to become a competent, skilled beauty operator—and to qualify you for a good paying position. Remember—only high quality instruction can prepare you for a good paying position in a quality shop. Cheap, cut-rate instruction will prepare you only for a job in a cheap, cut-rate shop.

Come in tomorrow—we'll be glad to see you, and we know that you'll enjoy your visit to DeLEE. Ask for our Dean—she'll be glad to show you through our school.

Two years' experience in a penal institution of high national standing. Contrary to Lombroso's theories, I am minus the underslung jaw, taking ways and baby-killing ambitions. My references [jail included] describe me as young, traveled, an excellent secretary-stenographer-correspondent, and possessed of business judgment [apologies to press agents]. While the market for penal alumni is admittedly in a slump, here's an "Ex" who believes his value to an employer is enhanced BECAUSE of the experience, and, for a good judge of human nature, I am and will be a good investment. Anywhere and anything—with reservations.

Here Are the Facts About Professional Job Hunters—the Employment Agencies

[This is the eighth of a series of articles to appear on Sundays carrying advice to job seekers. The articles are based on interviews with employers and others who are vitally interested in helping the unemployed sell their services in the best ways possible.]

The function of private employment agencies, and some suggestions based on experience gained in managing them, were discussed yesterday by Frank J. Crawley, president of the Illinois employment board, an association comprised of nearly seventy such agencies.

"A number of paths are open to job seekers and some of them run parallel," Mr. Crawley said. "Job hunters can, and nearly always do, read the 'help wanted' columns in the classified advertisments section. Obviously, that is a fine thing to do, but often it is not enough.

"Some persons insert their own 'situation wanted' advertisments to help speed the process of finding a job. Others, impatient of these methods or perhaps in addition to them, make a personal or a mail canvass of all firms in their own line of business; this method is usually wasteful and discouraging.

Professional Job Getters.

"Of course I think that the wisest class of job seekers loses no time in consulting a professional job-getter at an employment agency. The person who does this work may be called a vocational counsellor, employment advisor, or placement clerk, and his or her aim is to use the agency's facilities, built up over many years, perhaps, to make the best connection for the sake of both employer and applicant."

Mr. Crawley said he believed that Illinois has the best laws governing employment agencies in the United States. Fees are usually in accordance with the amount of salary. In no case does an agency charge the full fee if the job lasts less than three weeks, he said, and some agencies "guarantee" jobs for as long as six months; that is, a lesser percentage is taken if the position expires because of discharge or some other reason during the "guarantee" period.

Can Fill Most Jobs.

Virtually any kind of a job can be filled now through private employment agencies, Mr. Crawley declared. There are special agencies serving doctors, teachers, nurses, and executives who demand salaries between $5,000 and $20,000 a year, he said.

"One American agency received an order from a firm in England for an engineer, to be sent to Russia," Mr. Crawley related. "The man was hired and spent half a million dollars in Russia on behalf of his employer before he ever saw members of the company. Another agency recently supplied American engineers to go to South America, where they met their employer for the first time."

Employment agencies had their beginning about the time of the civil war when lumber camps and railroads were becoming the largest employers of labor, Mr. Crawley said. After the harvest season, farm hands would meet informally and select one of their number to journey in search of jobs for all of them with a lumber camp or railroad. Expenses were advanced to this representative and all arrangements were left in his hands. Thus the value of a professional job agent obtained general recognition from large employers.

The Agencies' Clientele.

How does the private agent get the jobs he passes along to qualified individuals? In the main, there are just two methods, said Mr. Crawley. Many of the jobs "fall into his lap" because the employers have learned over many years they can depend on his services, and therefore telephone him when they need some one to fill a position.

When this happens, an interviewer with experience in supplying the right people for that particular industry studies all of the "possible" applications which are on file at the agency. He then interviews applicants until one or more of the most suitable ones are selected to be sent to the employer.

At the end of each day's taking of applications, the agencies review all of them carefully, select those presenting the most outstanding qualifications, and describe these applicants in special bulletins sent to all employers who are "clients."

Continual Contact Valuable.

"Continual contact with employers by the many interviewers who are specialists in filling certain types of jobs gives the agencies their chance to be of great value to both sides," Mr. Crawley said. "However, it is untrue to say that an agency 'can' get any one a job. An applicant must have qualifications, something to sell, or we can't help him. The agency helps the applicant do the selling."

Mr. Crawley urged that applicants try to 'look the part of the job they want,' whether it be draftsman, advertising man, or millwright, and that whenever possible, they have samples of their work or some other proof of their qualifications. They should also be prepared to leave a complete history of their experience with a prospective employer, he said.

A senatorial investigation once disclosed that government employment bureaus piled up a cost of more than $200 per placement for jobs that are filled by private agencies for a charge of only $5 or $10 to the person directly benefited.

Not an Unusual Thing.

H. J. O'Shea of the O'Shea Employment system, an agency with offices in four eastern and middlewestern cities, declared that "purchasing employment service today is as customary as buying an article of clothing or any other necessity of life." Boosting the private agency, he also said that there is "no diminution of confidence or loss of dignity during the period of idleness" when a professional is helping the job seeker sell his services.

"Action is the keynote of self-preservation—which means getting a job," Mr. O'Shea said. "Granting that the average job seeker reading these articles has assimilated with profit the suggestions embodied in them, there remains a question as to the most direct approach to the right prospective employer.

"In order not to deplete cash resources, it is imperative to minimize chances for delay. The well established employment agency has long been acknowledged as the most acceptable of brokers in establishing contact between employer and employé. To me this seems to be the quickest, and in the long run the cheapest, means of getting that job."

Assails State Job Service.

H. J. Montgomery, former president of the Illinois employment board, now of Carson City, Mich., declared that the Illinois free employment office "could and should be a wonderful service agency for aiding Chicago residents to get jobs." However, he declared this department had forfeited the confidence of employers generally because it is "a dumping ground for political workers."

"It is unfortunate," Mr. Montgomery said, "that many executives are prone to judge all private agencies by the racketeering methods of a very few."

[Next Sunday there will be an article dealing specifically with the problems of answering "blind" want advertisments by letter.]

YES, there's one flaw in this deal.

It's this: Men who can't stand financial fortune or who have never been used to making really good money are scared half to death when they come in here and find out how much it is possible to make each week on this proposition. Not just how much it's POSSIBLE to make, in fact, but the amounts that our men are really making week in and week out. And that isn't all. If you have executive qualities there is every reason to be assured of a district managership or sales manager position in the reasonably near future, provided your work has been satisfactory; commissions paid daily; weekly cash prizes; also monthly bonus. We are glad to share the opportunity with a few more men of the right type; and if you think you can qualify come in Monday and ask for Mr. Willis.

ON THE LAKE SHORE IN EVANSTON.

It's rather nice to live in a house built high on a walled-in terrace where every room is flooded with sunlight and where the views to the north and south are over lawns and into woods, and to the east out over the colorful waters of Lake Michigan. A beautiful secluded spot where you never feel lonesome or isolated, for it is right in the midst of Evanston and only 25 minutes by motor or train from Chicago's business district. A real retreat for a busy business man who cannot afford to spend much time commuting. 12 rooms, large living rooms, huge porches, garage with living quarters and everything that goes to make up a marvelous home. $250 mo. You may not believe it, but a pair of cardinal birds nest in the shrubbery and stay the year round. They like it.

NEAR NORTH SIDE

It's very nice when you close your desk at the end of the day to know that after a short, brisk walk just 5 blocks north of the river, you will come to a quaint little lamplighted court that makes you feel far away from Chicago, where up a winding stairway there's a charming little studio that—well, you're glad you live there, that's all. We have 5 and 6 room apts. with fireplaces where we can build you a little home which will be delightful to live in and most interesting to your friends. We are glad to make changes that you personally may suggest. One little sky parlor artist studio with excellent north light in the Italian court, $50. Also daytime studios and shop space.

Facts Speak Louder Than Claims!

You want to know exactly what kind of a building you are about to select as your home. We could say that 910 Lawrence is a refined building or has a high class tenancy—but how refined or how high class can only be determined by actual analysis. Here is an actual cross section of the vocations and professions of our tenants. They are the kind of people that make this address one of which you can be proud:

Teachers
Physicians
Brokers
Contractors
Engineers
Retired
Dentists
Bankers
U. S. Gov't employes
Purchasing Agents
Accountants
Auditors
Secretaries
Office and Business Execs.
Salesmen and Sales Executives.

You'll like it here in this 12 story fireproof building with its quaint lobby, Colonial tearoom. Near lake, theaters, shops and fast transportation.

PACKARD

The secret of owning a good car without paying too much is to buy a really good, honestly sold used car. The first owner has taken the big depreciation. The high quality built in by the manufacturer is still there and the used car buyer gets it at the minimum cost.

Buy at Packard. Packard conducts its used car departments on a strict policy of fairness to the buyer. No matter what make of car you would like to drive, we undoubtedly have it at a price that will interest you.
